What is legal operations?

- “A multi-disciplinary function that optimizes legal services delivery to a business, government or business entity by focusing on twelve core competencies” (definition from CLOC).

Communications: what concrete steps can you take to reduce your email burden?

Technology & process support: what tech hacks can you do with the office software you already have?

Organizational design: you're hiring the second lawyer in your company. What skillset should you look for?

Cross-functional alignment: who's the one ally elsewhere in the business you should focus on aligning with?

Vendor management: what's the single most valuable behavioural change you should ask from your external counsel?

Data analytics: if you can only monitor one number, what should it be?

Financial management: if you're the only in-house lawyer and you only have time to build one spreadsheet, what should it be?
