Installation: The All-Important First Step

You want your new technology solutions to be implemented and adopted quickly, accelerating the time to value for your customers.

Users will adopt a new system that is properly configured, carefully installed, and completely integrated into their overall network environment. Such comprehensive installation increases the likelihood of adoption even more dramatically when it results in an interface that is easy to use, delivers clear value to the user, and operates properly from the start. And this is where Tech Data's Global Lifecycle Management Services excels.

Scale Your Resources

Sometimes it's difficult to commit your best people for installation projects when they could be working on more important initiatives. With Tech Data's Global Lifecycle Management Services, you're engaging a team that brings a wealth of expertise and experience. With more than 2,500 industry-recognized certifications and a global footprint, our group of engineers can extend the reach, depth, and coverage of your professional services team.

You can outsource projects or complete programs to Tech Data. Meanwhile, your own people can continue to support your user community and focus on larger initiatives. At the end of the engagement, your customers will find their needs met with no interruption to their support.

Team of Experts

Tech Data brings the ideal combination of logistics and technology expertise to every installation project.

- Carry out projects with confidence for different IT environments and any type of equipment with a consistent cost for services across multiple facilities
- Keep your IT staff focused on business-critical projects and daily operations
- Avoid company downtime during larger scale deployments and transitions with project management, swing gear and training
- Safeguard against hardware issues and other unexpected drawbacks that could otherwise slow down delivery or require additional labor costs

Lifecycle Management

How well your equipment performs for your customers begins with excellent installation, but it doesn't end there. Tech Data's Global Lifecycle Management Services delivers all of the services required to get the most value out of every technology product investment your customers make, from service and support, to asset tracking and management, to proper and compliant product disposal and replacement at end-of-life. Let us help you every step of the way.
