HR TECHNOLOGY SPECIAL

JULY - 2014

Most HR executives of today see HR transformation as the vehicle they can use to re-align their organizations onto the right business path and deliver services in an efficient, effective, and compliant manner. As people and talent issues are widely recognized as critical to business success in good and bad economic times, business issues related to workforce management, retention, organization restructuring, and employee engagement have increasingly become executive committee's top priorities. HR Leaders who are at the forefront of embracing change, are being asked to ensure that their priorities, organization, resources, and budgets are aligned with the business goals, bringing new approaches to optimize their talent by adopting the right technology.

Globalization, talent constraints, and new technology pose significant opportunities for material change in HR, according to new research from KPMG LLP, which found rising skepticism in the executive suite about the overall effectiveness of today's HR function. A large number of innovative HR leaders are adopting a new breed of HR solutions that leverage disruptive technologies such as real-time talent analytics and Big Data management, Gamification, Cloud, Mobile tools and more, there by bringing new approaches to streamline their business process spanning the employee life cycle: hiring and onboarding, personnel and benefits administration, compensation, payroll, compliance, performance management, succession planning, and career development. By investing in HRM strategies and technologies, companies are realizing new ways to drive business value in employee-facing processes and improving acquisition and retention of key talent while rationalizing fragmented systems that are increasingly difficult to maintain.
