Extraordinary health care workers from around the country have shown that they are willing to go where they are needed to help communities prepare for and respond to the COVID-19 pandemic. In order to increase mobility of those healthcare workers, many licensing requirements for medical professionals have been waived.

While the trust and reliability of our healthcare system depends on being able to know that a doctor, nurse, or other healthcare professional is properly licensed, credential verification is rarely immediate. With Merit, it is.

Here's How To Make Immediate Medical License Reciprocity Work For All States

1. Sign Up Your State

Fill out a short form at merits.com/readynow, and a dedicated Account Manager will help your state's licensure office through the implementation process.

2. Set Up and Send Merits

Your Account Manager will help get your digital licenses set up, uploaded, and sent.

3. Inform Your Constituents

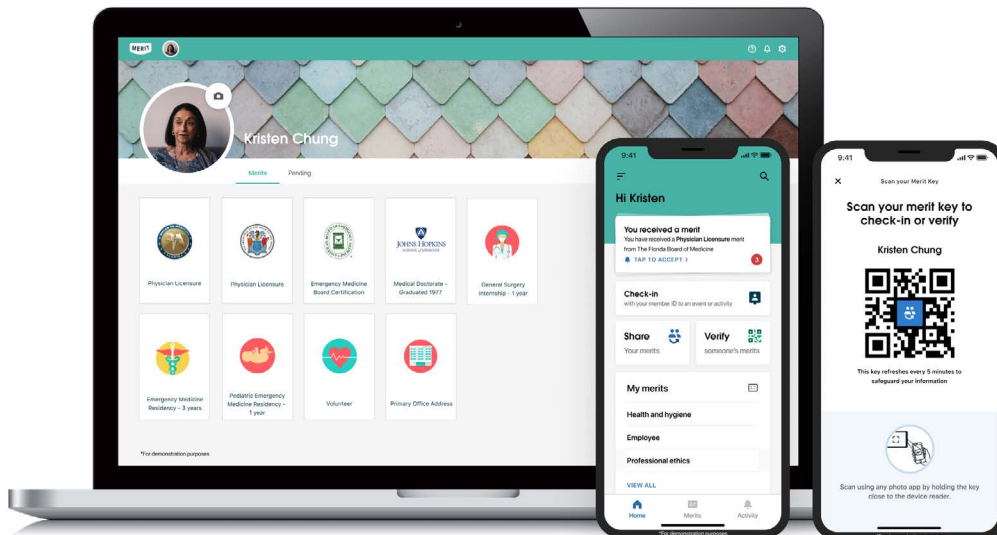

If you'd like, we can help customize a wide range of communications to help you share your message with the proper audiences.

4. Continuous Support

Once the digital licenses are sent, you can trust the Merit Customer Support team to address any questions and concerns from you or your constituents.

Digital Credentials Make Immediate Reciprocity Work

With digital credentials in Merit, medical professionals can quickly and easily move across state lines and be verified to provide care in person or via telehealth – including doctors, nurses, EMTs, other healthcare professionals, and Military and National Guard medical personnel.
