Early Warning System

Airlines often don't have access to reliable sales data and are, therefore, unable to track deviations from normal sales patterns. This exposes them to possible abuse and default by travel agents. In fact, many airlines also don't have defined parameters to detect such deviations, leading to loss of revenue.

Accelya's Early Warning System is a web-enabled tool for airlines that tracks and identifies unusual sales behavior of agents and brings it to the airline's attention daily. Alerts in Early Warning System help airlines prevent potential abuse, take corrective or precautionary action against erring agents and protect revenues and margins.

Reduce agency exposure risk through automated early warnings

Key Benefits

Detect unusual agent behavior

Early Warning System processes agent sales information daily, and identifies any unusual behavior. This helps airlines take corrective or precautionary action in time.

Get automated alerts

As a fully automated solution, it's accessible over the web which also provides email alerts.

Drill down and analyze

The solution allows airlines to analyze agent behavior down to the ticket detail, enabling better decision-making.
