

COMPANY LAUNCHES SPECIALTY TRANSMITTER FOR WATER DETECTION

Inovonics, Louisville, Colo., has announced the release of its new EN1751 WATER DETECTOR, which is designed to provide affordable early warning against damage caused by leaking appliances and standing water when used with the Honeywell FP280 probe. The EN1751 leverages the EchoStream wireless platform currently deployed in multi-family housing, senior living, and commercial security. It is ideally suited for placement in the drip pans commonly installed beneath hot water heaters.

"Up until now, if a property manager wanted to detect a leaky hot water heater, or a facilities director wanted to safeguard critical infrastructure from water damage, their wireless detection choices were limited. Standard practice required a third-party sensor and Inovonics EN1210 universal wireless transmitter. That all changed with the introduction of the EN1751, which eliminated the practice of home-grown solutions, creating a wireless transmitter with water detection capabilities built right in," said Scott Fincher, senior product manager at Inovonics.

The Inovonics EN1751 water detector is paired with the Honeywell FP280 flood probe and is used to transmit an alarm message when a quarter inch or more of nondistilled water is present.

HAND RIM DESIGNED BY VETERAN OFFERS GREAT COMFORT TO USERS

Numotion has announced a new partnership with RibGrips to make the product available at WWW.SHOPNUMOTION.COM. American-made and designed by a veteran with quadriplegia, these wheelchair hand rims feature soft rib discs that offer 360 degrees of gripping surface molded over aluminum hand rings that attach to most standard wheels.

The patent-pending design provides users with easier range of motion thanks to a better grip. This prevents calluses and the need to wear gloves, while also providing users more revolutions per push.

RibGrips are made from a unique proprietary thermal plastic material that is surprisingly soft and extremely resistant to tearing, peeling, or separation due to strikes from sharp objects. They also require less pressure when slowing and braking, providing relief to the user's hand surface.

RibGrips fit most standard 24-inch hand rims, and conversion hardware is available for those with 25-inch rims. They are a quarter inch wider in diameter than traditional rubber-coated hand rims, maximizing gripping surface and ergonomic feel while still allowing users to fit through standard-size doorways.

"We created the Numotion online store, www.ShopNumotion.com, to offer our customers a wider array of products that can enhance their lifestyle and increase their mobility," said Mike Swinford, chief executive officer, Numotion.
