CASE STUDY

The University of Wyoming

The University of Wyoming Volleyball and Wrestling teams renovated their locker rooms and included The Athletic Edge's Pedestal Wood Athletic Lockers in their design. The lockers chosen by the University have an elegant wood look.

Amy Sharpe, University of Wyoming's Design Engineer, worked closely with The Athletic Edge to bring the University's vision to life.

"It was a pleasure working with the team at The Athletic Edge on the University of Wyoming projects. The project managers and engineers at The Athletic Edge were readily available to answer questions and provide precise details for our planning and construction team. The 3D graphics that were provided with the shop drawings were very helpful in visualizing the final product," said Sharpe.

Q&A with Zach Flakus, NSU's Deputy Director of Athletics

Q: Did your locker room space present any challenges before you purchased your Athletic Edge lockers?

A: Yes, we had a small locker room planned and wanted to maximize our available space. We also needed to provide security for personal belongings for individual uses.

Q: What made you decide to work with The Athletic Edge?

A: We used The Athletic Edge for previous locker projects and were very happy with the product provided and their attention to detail for installation.

Q: Are you pleased with the products and service you received?

A: The Athletic Edge gave us a quality product that fit within our budget and were willing to work with us on installation, even after the construction portion of the locker room was delayed. We are very happy with the service provided by The Athletic Edge.

Q: What are some of your favorite features of your new Athletic Edge lockers?

A: We wanted to maximize every inch of the locker room and The Athletic Edge created custom corner shelves that are perfect storage and AV space.
