

Dear Valued Clients,

To keep pace with technology, CIA is taking a huge step forward in to the future of your security.

The world of electronic security is changing at the speed of light. New demands require new services and those services require a considerable amount of new technology. In order to marry security systems with access control, video, as well as advanced smart phone notification, we are compelled to provide a new level of sophistication.

Keeping current with these changes requires substantial enhancements and investments in our monitoring response center; which comes at a significant cost. For these reasons, I have decided to merge CIA Security with Doyle Security Systems, Inc.

Doyle Security is one of the most innovative security companies in the northeast. Combining forces, we will provide more resources and products, offer more advanced services and bring better value to our clients, all while providing the personalized, exceptional customer service you deserve.

Doyle Security Systems will be a 100 years old in March 2019. They are a family owned and operated company, now in its fourth generation. I have known the Doyle family, personally and professionally, during my forty-year career in the security industry.

I have a very strong, longtime friendship with John Doyle, Doyle Security Systems' President and CEO. We have worked and learned together. Our unified goal has always been to strengthen our industry through education, providing you with the best possible products and service.

Please know that you will continue to receive service from the same people you are accustomed to working with. They are very excited to work with the Doyle team!

I would like to thank you for putting your faith and trust in CIA Security for the past forty years. I will be available if you have any questions.

With sincerest gratitude,

John Lombardi
