

Groundbreaking day for new Star Exhibits building

Published April 5, 2016 at 10:28 am

By Gretchen Schlosser

Mark Johnson, CEO and president of Star Exhibits, addresses the crowd gathered for the ground breaking ceremony Monday on the site of Star's new building at 93rd Avenue and Hampshire Avenue in Brooklyn Park. Looking on was Casey Hankinson, vice president of development for Ryan Companies. Site work began that morning on the 13.3 acre site, in the southwest corner of the 610 Zane development.

Leaders from Star Exhibits, Ryan Companies and Hagen, Christensen and Mcilwain Architects turn the first shovels of soil during the ceremony. Star Exhibits will move from leased space into the new 200,800 square foot building later this year, with completion expected in December. (Sun Post staff photos by Gretchen Schlosser)

Filed Under: Brooklyn Park

SUN  POST

Advertising Information | Contact Us | Subscribe

Copyright ©2016 ECM Publishers, Inc. • All Rights Reserved