The 1933 Act prohibits offering securities to the public for sale or purchase unless they have been registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).<sup>1761</sup> Companies are required to file registration statements that fully disclose all of the information required by the statute and by SEC rules prior to such sale. These registration and disclosure provisions apply to the issuance or distribution of securities, and the statute's protection extends only to the purchaser.<sup>1762</sup> Civil liability can be imposed for misrepresentations and omissions in registration statements or where securities are sold in violation of the registration requirements, as well as under the general antifraud provisions of section 77q(a).<sup>1763</sup> The 1934 Exchange Act regulates the public trading of securities. The statute requires that any securities traded on a national exchange must be registered with the SEC, with full disclosure of relevant information about the company. Unlike the 1933 Act, the 1934 Exchange Act protects both sellers and purchasers.

The Supreme Court had previously noted the absence of "aiding and abetting" language in section 10(b) of the Exchange Act and in 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5 (1995), but it was not until the decision in Central Bank of Denver that the Court held aiding and abetting liability in private actions could not be imposed. As a consequence, civil actions based on theories of aiding and abetting may only be brought by the SEC and then, only where the defendant acts knowingly. Most securities actions under the 1934 Exchange Act allege either violations of section 10(b),<sup>1764</sup> which prohibits using any manipulative or deceptive device in connection with the purchase or sale of securities, or violations of SEC Rule 10b-5,<sup>1765</sup> which extends liability to include misstatements and omissions, or both. These actions typically take the form of securities fraud class actions. The 1934 Exchange Act also created the SEC to administer and enforce the securities statutes.<sup>1766</sup> Both the 1933 Act and the 1934 Exchange Act rely heavily on self-regulation by affected companies, with the SEC providing the necessary oversight. The SEC has the authority to promulgate rules and regulations, investigate potential violations, impose fines, and seek equitable or other relief.<sup>1767</sup> In addition to instituting enforcement actions and levying administrative sanctions,<sup>1768</sup> however, the SEC can refer conduct to the Department of Justice for criminal prosecution.

The Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 (PSLRA) sought to prevent frivolous and unmeritorious securities class actions through broad-based legislation reaching both substantive and procedural law, as well as by instituting other reforms in securities actions. The legislation was targeted towards certain perceived abuses of securities class actions arising out of lawsuits brought on behalf of “professional plaintiffs” or plaintiffs with at best a nominal interest in the securities at issue.<sup>1769</sup> The PSLRA directs the court to appoint 1765. 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5 (1995).

1766. The SEC is composed of five members, appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate, who function as a bipartisan, quasi-judicial agency. 15 U.S.C. § 78d(a) (2000); see also 1 Hazen, supra note 1757, §§ 1.3–1.3[3].

1767. The SEC also functions as an original and appellate tribunal in connection with licensing and disciplinary charges.

1768. The SEC can, among other things, issue civil fines in administrative proceedings, freeze assets, and seek forfeiture. See, e.g., SEC v. Gonzales de Castilla, 170 F. Supp. 2d 427 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (SEC issued freeze order on defendant’s assets in insider trading case).

Under the new model, the court would appoint the lead plaintiff who, in turn, would select and direct class counsel.” In re Network Assocs., Inc. Sec. Litig., 76 F. Supp. 2d 1017, 1020 (N.D. as lead plaintiffs the “person or group of persons” with the greatest financial interest in order to encourage institutional investors, who are more likely to have significant financial holdings at stake as well as greater sophistication and experience in securities matters, to exercise control over the litigation and over counsel.<sup>1770</sup> The PSLRA changed the selection criteria for lead plaintiffs from the first to file to the adequacy of the proposed class representative. The PSLRA has had the greatest impact on class actions alleging corporate fraud under 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b) and SEC Rule 10b-5, and its provisions are found in 15 U.S.C. §§ 77z-1 and 77z-2 of the 1933 Act and 15 U.S.C. §§ 78u-4 and 78u-5 of the 1934 Exchange Act.

Efforts by plaintiffs to circumvent the statutory reforms of the PSLRA by filing securities fraud class actions in state court were rebuffed with the passage of the Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act in 1998 (Uniform Standards Act).<sup>1771</sup> The Uniform Standards Act preempted state law securities fraud class 1771. 15 U.S.C. §§ 77p, 78bb (2000). The statute exempts four categories of actions: (1) exclusively derivative actions; (2) actions pursuant to contractual agreements between issuers and indenture trustees; (3) actions by states or political subdivisions or pension plans; and (4) certain other actions brought under the corporate laws of the state of incorporation. Id. §§ 77p(f), 78bb(f). *See, e.g., Derdiger v. actions,<sup>1772</sup> granted federal courts the authority to stay discovery in private state-court actions<sup>1773</sup> and mandated removal to federal court of state-court securities class actions that fell within the purview of the statute, followed by their automatic dismissal.<sup>1774</sup> The enactment of the Uniform Standards Act effectively placed exclusive jurisdiction over fraud-based securities class actions in federal court.

The PSLRA has had a significant impact on case management of securities litigation, including procedures for the appointment of class representatives and counsel, heightened pleading requirements on claims alleging fraud, provisions for discovery stays, and a “safe harbor” for forward-looking statements. Other changes include the adoption of a “90-Day Look-Back Period” in calculating damages under 17 Code of Federal Regulations (C.F.R.) § 10b-5, limiting attorney fees in class actions to a reasonable percentage of the class recovery, and limiting defendants’ liability in section 10(b) cases to their proportionate share (with certain exceptions where joint and several liability may still apply). Much of the case law interpreting the PSLRA obligations has focused on the lead plaintiff and pleading provisions.

31.31 Class Representatives and Lead Plaintiffs

The PSLRA does not establish specific procedures for courts in implementing the lead plaintiff provisions, nor does it identify selection criteria other than financial interest and the traditional adequacy and typicality requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23. As a result, the courts have wrestled with the interpretation of the lead plaintiff provisions in light of the legislative goal to remedy lawyer-driven lawsuits. The statute imposes certain preliminary procedural requirements on plaintiffs at the time the complaint is filed. It requires a plaintiff seeking to represent a securities class to file, along with the complaint,<sup>1775</sup> a certification that (1) confirms the plaintiff did not purchase the securities at issue at the direction of counsel; (2) shows the plain-

Ameritrade, Inc.*, 279 F.3d 590 (8th Cir. 2002) (district court properly remanded case following removal under Uniform Standards Act where plaintiff filed amended complaint eliminating any securities causes of action, leaving only state-law claims). State-court jurisdiction was preserved over certain covered class actions, such as actions based on the statutory or common law of the state in which the issuer is incorporated and that involve purchases or sales by issuers to equity holders, 15 U.S.C. § 78bb(f)(3)(A) (2000), or actions by a state, political subdivision, or pension plan. Id. § 78bb(f)(3)(B).

tiff is willing to serve as a representative party on behalf of the class; (3) identifies all transactions by the plaintiff in the security at issue during the relevant time period; (4) identifies all other actions filed during the preceding three years in which the plaintiff served or sought to serve as a representative party; and (5) certifies that the plaintiff's recovery will be limited to his or her pro rata share, except as ordered by the court.<sup>1776</sup> The PSLRA (or “the statute”) creates a presumption precluding any plaintiff seeking to serve as lead plaintiff who has been a lead plaintiff in more than five securities class actions during any three-year period.<sup>1777</sup> There is a split of authority over whether and when the presumption should be rebutted if an institutional investor is seeking lead plaintiff status.<sup>1778</sup>

The PSLRA also directs the plaintiff, shortly after filing, to comply with detailed notice provisions informing potential class members of the existence of the securities class action.<sup>1779</sup> The PSLRA specifically provides, however, that notices required under the statute “shall be in addition to any notice required pursuant to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.”<sup>1780</sup> The plaintiff must publish notice of the action in “a widely circulated national business-oriented publication or wire service” within twenty days of the filing of the complaint, advising of the action, the claims asserted therein, and the class period.<sup>1781</sup> The notice must also state that any purported class member may move to serve as lead plaintiff within sixty days of the date of the notice.<sup>1782</sup> Several courts have held that the sixty-day notice requirement is mandatory and precludes consideration of untimely filed motions for lead plaintiff appointment.<sup>1783</sup>

Where multiple actions alleging substantially the same claims have been filed by more than one plaintiff, the statute imposes the obligation to provide early notification on the plaintiff who was the first to file. One of the effects of the notice provisions, however, has been to help some attorneys to continue to exert control over securities class actions, a result contrary to the goals of the PSLRA. One court observed that notices have been filed by attorneys on multiple occasions in related cases “over and again, all in an effort to compile the largest portfolio [of clients]” who are then presented by the firm as a “group” for purposes of appointment under the lead plaintiff provisions.<sup>1784</sup> The SEC has also cautioned that the notice provisions afford an opportunity to continue the very abuses the PSLRA sought to redress.<sup>1785</sup> Scrutiny of the early notices the plaintiff proposes to disseminate, with a critical eye towards any language that “extols” the virtue of the firm or otherwise solicits support for the lawyer-proposed lead plaintiff, may assist in reducing the incidence of these tactics. The court in Network Associates rejected a motion by 1,725 members collected by attorneys to appoint a subgroup of 10, also chosen by the attorneys, noting there was “no organized decisionmaking apparatus, no coherency, no common ground other than the lawyer. They [the subgroup] too are simply disparate, unlinked, and unrelated investors.” Id. at 1023.

addition, the judge should try to ensure that these early communications to class members encourage them to serve as lead plaintiffs and do not mislead them into believing that they are filling out claims forms. In many cases, however, plaintiffs will publish notice of the action concurrently with the filing of the complaint in order to comply with the twenty-day deadline for publication imposed by the PSLRA. To the extent the court requires judicial approval of the proposed notices prior to publication, perhaps through a standing order, the court will need to complete its review prior to the expiration of the twenty-day period.

The PSLRA contemplates that the court will appoint a lead plaintiff within ninety days of the date on which notice is published. In certain circumstances, such as when a defendant is facing possible bankruptcy, the court should make the lead plaintiff determination as quickly as possible. These time constraints are modified, however, where a motion to consolidate multiple actions has been filed. In such cases, the statute directs the court to appoint the lead plaintiff “as soon as practicable” after resolving the motion to consolidate. Indeed, 15 U.S.C. § 78u-4(a)(3)(B)(ii) directs the court to address and resolve the motion to consolidate prior to rendering a decision on the appointment of lead plaintiffs.<sup>1786</sup> The statute further creates a rebuttable presumption that the plaintiff most capable of adequately representing the class is the person or group of persons with the largest financial interest in the relief sought, who also satisfies the requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23.<sup>1787</sup> The showing under Rule 23 is considered a preliminary inquiry into whether the plaintiff has made a prima facie showing that the adequacy and typicality requirements have been met.<sup>1788</sup> This presumption can be rebutted upon proof that the plaintiff either “will not fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class” or is subject to unique defenses that impair the plaintiff’s ability to do so.<sup>1789</sup> In most cases, the plaintiff filing the action will also seek appointment as lead plaintiff, although once the statutory early notification is published, other investors may file competing motions.

The PSLRA does not require courts to hold a hearing on lead plaintiff motions. Courts have approached the decision-making process in various ways, ranging from requiring movants to respond to a written questionnaire prepared by the court, to conducting interviews of the candidates and their counsel at hearings on motions for appointment,<sup>1790</sup> to simply considering the parties' submissions and oral argument.<sup>1791</sup> Although some decisions have allowed discovery as part of the appointment process,<sup>1792</sup> the PSLRA severely restricts discovery into the adequacy of the representation by the proposed lead plaintiff.<sup>1793</sup> A member of the proposed plaintiff class can challenge the adequacy of lead plaintiff's representation only by demonstrating "a reasonable basis for a finding that the presumptively most adequate plaintiff is incapable of adequately representing the class."<sup>1794</sup> Absent such a showing, a class member objecting to the presumptive lead plaintiff will not be entitled to discovery.

Where the movant is a single investor or institution, the court's task is fairly straightforward. In identifying the plaintiff with the largest financial interest, courts have considered factors such as the number of shares purchased or sold during the class period,<sup>1795</sup> the net number of shares purchased, the net funds spent, and approximate losses suffered by the plaintiff.<sup>1796</sup> These factors courts have found helpful "because they look to relatively objective indicators . . . rather than to the ultimate question of damages."<sup>1797</sup> One option in assessing the merits of competing lead plaintiff petitions is to have those parties seeking lead plaintiff status file a joint submission setting forth their claimed financial interests and comparing their financial stakes in the litigation, preferably through an agreed on method. Such an approach allows the court to assess the merits of competing parties' positions without expending significant judicial resources wading through or reconstructing underlying figures on which the calculations are based. In addition, the court may find it difficult to reconcile damage calculations based on differing methodologies.

Complications arise where a group seeks appointment as lead plaintiff. Although the PSLRA contemplates that more than one class member may be appointed as lead plaintiff, courts disagree as to whether and when a group will qualify as the presumptively most adequate plaintiff. One issue the courts have struggled with is whether the claims of unrelated investors can be aggregated to meet the financial interest requirement of the PSLRA.<sup>1798</sup> Several courts have held that aggregation of claims was proper,<sup>1799</sup> although some decisions have allowed groups to serve as lead plaintiff simply because there was no opposition by individual class members, or the only opposition presented was by a competing group.<sup>1800</sup> Other courts have concluded that aggregation of numerous unrelated plaintiffs defeats the purpose of the PSLRA's lead plaintiff provisions.<sup>1801</sup> Those courts permitting groups to be appointed have looked to whether the proposed group demonstrates the ability to control the litigation and the lawyers.<sup>1802</sup> The size of the group also has been a determinative factor.<sup>1803</sup> The SEC has suggested that groups of three to five plaintiffs are permissible.<sup>1804</sup> Additional relevant factors have included (1) the prior experience of group members; (2) the structure of the group; (3) communication mechanisms both within the group and with counsel; (4) how the group was formed;<sup>1805</sup> (5) the ability of the group to oversee the litigation; (6) the ability of the group to work together; and (7) the existence of a prelitigation relationship among group members.<sup>1806</sup> Courts also have been presented with motions for appointment of co-lead plaintiffs. These requests have raised similar, but less troublesome, issues regarding the number of proposed co-leads and whether appointment of a large group of co-lead plaintiffs would impede their ability to control the litigation and supervise counsel.<sup>1807</sup>

1803. The district court in In re Baan Co. Securities Litigation, for example, shared the SEC's view that a group should consist of "no more than three to five persons, a number that will facilitate joint decisionmaking and also help to assure that each group member has a sufficiently large stake in the litigation." *In re Baan Co. The presumptive lead plaintiff must also make a prima facie showing that it satisfies the adequacy and typicality requirements of Rule 23.<sup>1808</sup> Drawing on the PSLRA, the Third Circuit in In re Cendant Corp. Securities Litigation<sup>1809</sup> expanded the traditional Rule 23 inquiry into “adequacy” and “typicality” to include whether the presumptive lead plaintiff “has demonstrated a willingness and ability to select competent class counsel and to negotiate a reasonable retainer agreement with that counsel.”<sup>1810</sup> Information about the firm selected and its ability to conduct the litigation, as well as the manner in which the fee structure was derived, were found to be indicia of whether the lead plaintiff was capable of representing the class.

Thus, a court might conclude that the movant with the largest losses could not surmount the threshold adequacy inquiry if it lacked legal experience or sophistication, intended to select as lead counsel a firm that was plainly incapable of undertaking the representation, or had negotiated a clearly unreasonable fee agreement with its chosen counsel.<sup>1811</sup>

The PSLRA places the selection of lead counsel in the hands of the lead plaintiff, subject to the approval of the court,<sup>1812</sup> although some courts have held that lead counsel be selected through a competitive bidding process, sometimes referred to as an auction.<sup>1813</sup> When determining whether to approve lead counsel proffered by the lead plaintiff, courts focus on the selection process used by the lead plaintiff to choose counsel, the proposed fee structure, whether the firm has adequate resources, and the extent of the firm’s (and lead attorney’s) experience in class action securities cases. On some occasions, the appointment of more than one firm as lead counsel may be appropriate in order to protect the interests of the class.<sup>1814</sup> Courts that have approved the ap-

Factors disfavoring more than one firm include the potential for duplicative services, absence of coordination, the risk of increased litigation time and expense, and the potential for the attorneys to take over or control the litigation—a particular concern of the PSLRA.<sup>1817</sup> The court in In re Milestone Scientific Securities Litigation<sup>1818</sup> required that before multiple counsel would be appointed, there must be a showing that “the lead plaintiff will be able to withstand any limitation on, or usurpation of, control, and effectively supervise the several law firms acting as lead counsel.”<sup>1819</sup> Review of the proposed organizational structure of lead counsel may reveal potential conflicts among firms, as well as whether the independence and ability of the lead plaintiff to manage the litigation will be impaired.<sup>1820</sup> In cases where the court has determined that the appointment of multiple law firms as lead counsel is ill-advised, the court can still encourage lead counsel to seek the assistance of other firms where appropriate.<sup>1821</sup>

31.32 Pleading Requirements

Fraud claims, including allegations of securities fraud, must meet the requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b), which requires that fraud be pleaded with particularity.<sup>1822</sup> The PSLRA reinforced the pleading requirements for securities fraud claims<sup>1823</sup> by specifically mandating that where these pleading requirements are not met, the district court “shall, on the motion of any defendant, dismiss the complaint.”<sup>1824</sup> Under the PSLRA, the complaint now must include each allegedly misleading statement together with reasons why it is misleading. Any allegations regarding statements or omissions that are made on information and belief must be supported by a particularized statement of facts supporting such belief.<sup>1825</sup> The courts have disagreed as to whether the group pleading doctrine survives the PSLRA. Some have interpreted the PSLRA to preclude plaintiffs from grouping all defendants together in order to survive a motion to dismiss, requiring instead identification of the specific misrepresentations made by each.<sup>1826</sup> Others have adhered to a narrow interpretation of the doctrine, holding that in appropriate circumstances it may still apply.<sup>1827</sup> Some courts have required the plaintiff to plead with par-

1822. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) provides: “In all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity. Malice, intent, knowledge and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally.”

ticularity each defendant's specific statements supporting the plaintiff's claim against that defendant.<sup>1828</sup>

The degree of specificity required has varied.<sup>1829</sup> Courts have required the plaintiff to identify how the plaintiff learned of the conduct for the basis for its allegations, including confidential sources underlying allegations on information and belief.<sup>1830</sup> To the extent such sources are documentary, courts also have required plaintiffs to identify the document, its author, its date, and its recipient, and to describe the document's contents.<sup>1831</sup> Other courts have held the PSLRA's heightened pleading standard does not "require that plaintiffs plead with particularity every single fact upon which their beliefs concerning false or misleading statements are based."<sup>1832</sup> One option is to require plaintiffs (in all cases subject to the provisions of the PSLRA) to file, along with a complaint alleging securities fraud, a "case statement" modeled after those often utilized in Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) litigation.<sup>1833</sup> For example, a judge ordered plaintiffs filing an amended complaint to include, with respect to each false or misleading statement, the following information:<sup>1834</sup>

- whether the statements were written or oral;
- the title, author, date of preparation, and persons reviewing any written statements;
- when, where, and the circumstances under which oral statements were made;

- all facts supporting the claim that the statement was false or misleading when made;
- details regarding any reports or other sources that plaintiffs allege support or demonstrate the falsity of the statements; and
- all facts giving rise to a strong inference of recklessness, and detailed information regarding any documents or other sources supporting such an inference.

Such statements can be designed to detail both the factual and legal basis for the plaintiff's claim. These statements may prove helpful in assisting a plaintiff with a meritorious case to comply with the PSLRA pleading requirements as interpreted within the jurisdiction, and they may assist the court when ruling on motions brought pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12. The PSLRA requires a plaintiff to have a detailed factual basis for the allegations at the time suit is filed. This suggests that the normal liberality of amendment provided by the Federal Rules may be inappropriate in shareholder class actions. Where it is apparent that repeated amendment of the complaint cannot correct the deficiencies, dismissal with prejudice may be appropriate.

The PSLRA also imposes a uniform standard for pleading scienter in order to survive a motion to dismiss.<sup>1835</sup> Prior to the PSLRA, the Second Circuit, for example, had held that a plaintiff must plead a strong inference of scienter either by (1) alleging facts establishing a motive and opportunity to commit fraud, or (2) presenting circumstantial evidence of recklessness or conscious misbehavior.<sup>1836</sup> Other circuits held that compliance with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b), permitting general averments of scienter, was sufficient.<sup>1837</sup> Although the PSLRA incorporated language from Second Circuit jurisprudence requiring the plaintiff to allege with particularity all “facts giving rise to a strong inference that the defendant acted with the required state of mind,”<sup>1838</sup> Congress declined to expressly codify the Second Circuit standard.<sup>1839</sup> Nor did cautionary statements<sup>1843</sup> tailored to the particular risks.<sup>1844</sup> The provision, however, does not apply to statements included in financial or registration statements.<sup>1845</sup> Also, it will not protect statements that are knowingly false when made, even if such statements otherwise would fall within the scope of section 78u-5(i)(1).<sup>1846</sup> Early review of the complaint may disclose that the statements complained of fall within the safe-harbor provisions and that the claims consequently are subject to dismissal under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12 or 56.

31.34 Discovery Stays

The PSLRA provides that all discovery and other proceedings “shall be stayed during the pendency of any motion to dismiss” absent a showing of “undue prejudice”<sup>1847</sup> or a showing that “particularized discovery is necessary to preserve evidence.”<sup>1848</sup> The safe harbor provisions exempting forward-looking statements from liability also permit a stay of discovery pending resolution of summary judgment motions,<sup>1849</sup> although limited discovery targeted towards the applicability of the safe-harbor provisions may be permitted. The discovery stay provisions were designed to protect defendants from fishing expeditions and unnecessary costs of discovery where the legal sufficiency of the complaint had not been determined.<sup>1850</sup> The provisions apply to both party and nonparty discovery<sup>1851</sup> and preempt the mandatory disclosure provisions of Rule 26.<sup>1852</sup>

The courts have disagreed on whether the discovery stay provisions apply even though a motion to dismiss has not yet been filed. Several courts have held that the stay provisions are triggered once the defendant indicates an intent to file a motion to dismiss.<sup>1853</sup> The court, in In re Carnegie International Corp. Securities Litigation, commented that the defendant had to be given an opportunity to challenge the complaint and “[a]ny other interpretation would encourage unseemly gamesmanship, i.e., a race to serve subpoenas for discovery before a defendant had the opportunity to test the sufficiency of the complaint.”<sup>1854</sup> Other courts have required an actual motion to be filed before imposing a stay.<sup>1855</sup> Application of the discovery stay provisions does not, however, automatically apply to all claims asserted in the complaint. Where the complaint contains separate state law claims that are distinct from the securities claims, some courts have allowed discovery to proceed on those claims; staying the entire case, however, generally is more efficient.<sup>1856</sup>

31.4 Initial Pretrial Conference

Securities claims can arise under both federal and state statutes, as well as the common law, and can involve numerous parties. Complaints typically assert numerous claims against various defendants, ranging from companies and securities professionals to accountants and lawyers, with the latter defendants implicating issues of privilege and confidentiality.<sup>1857</sup> Complaints also may be lengthy, in part as a result of the requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b) and the PSLRA that fraud be pleaded with particularity.<sup>1858</sup> Failure to comply with Rule 9(b) and the more stringent pleading standards of the PSLRA provide a basis for dismissal of securities actions.<sup>1859</sup> Defendants frequently seek substantial time to respond to the complaint and to decide whether to file counterclaims, cross-claims, and third-party complaints. Immediately after assignment of the litigation, the judge should consider entering an order suspending the time for all defendants to respond to the complaint in cases where a motion to consolidate is pending or a lead plaintiff has not been selected, as the initial complaint is likely to be amended. The initial conference offers an opportunity to learn about the potential size and complexity of the litigation; set a schedule for amendments, motions, and responsive pleadings; and schedule discovery accordingly.

Early institution of an initial case-management order will help to organize the case and preliminarily identify key legal and factual issues. Of particular significance in assessing securities litigation is early determination of the following issues:

- The likely size and scope of the case. Complaints will often name as defendants the company whose securities are involved, its officers, directors, independent accountants, attorneys, and brokerage firms. Standards for both pleading and liability may differ depending on the type of defendant. In addition, many securities cases are brought as class actions, raising issues under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23 and the PSLRA.
- Pending or expected related litigation. In addition to private actions, the SEC or other administrative agencies may institute proceedings. In some instances, related criminal proceedings may also be pending, which may lead the government to request staying the litigation.<sup>1860</sup> A 1857. In addition to claims under the 1933 Act and the 1934 Exchange Act, plaintiffs may include claims under the RICO Act, 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961–1968 (2000), as well as claims for common-law fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and breach of fiduciary duty, among others.

1858. See, e.g., Greenstone v. Cambex Corp., 975 F.2d 22, 25 (1st Cir. 1992); Whalen v. Carter, 954 F.2d 1087, 1097–98 (5th Cir. 1992).

1859. See, e.g., Parnes v. Gateway 2000, Inc., 122 F.3d 539, 549–50 (8th Cir. 1997) (holding that lower court properly dismissed claims for failing to meet particularity requirements); Lovelace v. Software Spectrum Inc., 78 F.3d 1015, 1021 (5th Cir. 1996) (holding lower court properly dismissed claims based on failing to adequately plead scienter under Rule 9(b)).

party may also be a debtor in bankruptcy, which may result in automatic stays with respect to that party, removal of cases, related adversary proceedings, and objections to the discharge of debts. In addition, separate actions may have been filed regarding fidelity bonds and other insurance coverage issues, or to prevent foreclosure of security interests. All related litigation in the same court, including pertinent aspects of bankruptcy proceedings, ordinarily should be assigned or transferred to one judge for initial supervision and planning.<sup>1861</sup> The extent to which these cases should be formally consolidated for further pretrial proceedings and trial will depend on the circumstances<sup>1862</sup> and, after a period of centralized management, some cases may be appropriately reassigned to other judges. In class actions, the PSLRA provides that the court should consolidate multiple actions where appropriate.<sup>1863</sup> Related cases may also have been filed in different jurisdictions, as the conduct alleged in securities fraud litigation often affects persons in many states. Centralized pretrial management of the federal litigation may be possible through motions to transfer, or through transfer by the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation under 28 U.S.C. § 1407.<sup>1864</sup> In general, the optimal venue for a shareholder class action is the district in which the defendant company is headquartered. To the extent that cases remain in different courts, each court should consider whether formal or informal coordination is possible to minimize the risk of conflict.<sup>1865</sup>

- Takeover litigation. Takeover litigation—actions brought in connection with the attempted acquisition or transfer of control of a corporation by obtaining securities, assets, or stockholder support—often will involve several actions filed almost simultaneously in different courts seeking a preliminary injunction against violation of the federal antitrust and securities laws. Takeover litigation can be extremely time sensitive, requiring the court's attention to the need for quick resolution of many issues and the impact on the market of even the timing of rulings and hearings. See section 31.7 regarding special problems in takeover litigation.

- Parties seeking protective orders. Discovery in securities actions can result in the disclosure of sensitive information, the dissemination of which is potentially detrimental, particularly to corporate defendants.<sup>1866</sup> Securities claims can also implicate attorney–client privileges.
- Referral to a special master. Securities cases can present complex factual disputes over matters of accounting, corporate finance, market analyses, or the negotiation or implementation of complex settlements.
- Potential for settlement. The parties may be amenable to settlement before substantial time and expense is wasted in litigation, and the court may want to explore the possibilities of early settlement.<sup>1867</sup>

Several foundational issues may preclude the action altogether, and thereby render it subject to early resolution under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b) or 56. Examples of such issues include

- whether an instrument constitutes a security subject to registration for purposes of liability under the securities laws;<sup>1868</sup>
- whether the alleged misstatements are material;<sup>1869</sup>
- whether the conduct falls within the PSLRA's statutory safe-harbor provisions, or the "bespeaks caution" doctrine;<sup>1870</sup>
- whether a claim is barred by the statute of limitations;<sup>1871</sup>

31.5 Class Actions and Derivative Actions

Where appropriate, the court can use the initial pretrial conference to set a schedule for determining whether one or more of the cases should proceed as a class action under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23, or a derivative action under Rule 23.1. In addition to ensuring that the notice and pleading requirements of the PSLRA have been met, the following can be assessed as an initial matter:

- whether there has been more than one class action filed, and the parties’ intent to seek consolidation or transfer;
- if the action has been removed pursuant to the Uniform Standards Act, whether removal was appropriate;<sup>1882</sup>
- whether there have been or will be challenges to lead plaintiff certification;
- whether there has been a demonstrable need for limited discovery regarding lead plaintiff certification—in addition to showing a significant financial interest in the relief sought by the class, the plaintiff must also satisfy the typicality and adequacy requirements of Rule 23(a);
- whether appropriate discovery stays pending resolution of any motions to dismiss have been instituted;
- whether lead plaintiff has been selected;
- whether lead counsel has been identified and approved by the court; and § 31.5

- whether the complaint alleges claims that are not susceptible to class treatment.

Other matters must be resolved before a class can be defined. The initial complaint occasionally will include some claims (e.g., reliance on oral misrepresentations or the breach of a “suitability” standard) that rarely would be susceptible to class action treatment, along with other claims (e.g., an omission of a material fact from a proxy statement) that may well be presented on behalf of a class. The dates when plaintiffs bought or sold the securities, and what information they possessed on those dates, may not be clear from the complaint, yet may be critical to a decision regarding the class of persons they might properly represent. Whether the plaintiffs may proceed on a fraud-on-the-market theory may depend both on matters developed during discovery and on what claims will be pursued in the case. The court may need to determine whether a particular claim is made derivatively or individually<sup>1883</sup> and whether the same plaintiff may assert both derivative and class claims.<sup>1884</sup> In deciding whether a class should be certified, consider what class the plaintiffs may represent, and whether multiple classes or subclasses should be formed. It is advisable to consider sources of potential conflict and their effect, such as

- whether the class members are holders of different types of securities;<sup>1885</sup>
- whether some class members took certain key actions while others did not;<sup>1886</sup>
- whether some class members bought or sold before the alleged misconduct and others did so afterwards (or continued to hold the security);<sup>1887</sup>
- whether some class members had inside information;<sup>1888</sup>

- whether class members purchased or sold securities at different times based on different information;<sup>1889</sup> and
- whether class members are seeking damages or rescission.<sup>1890</sup>

These differences in the various groups of plaintiffs and proposed class members require the court's early attention. Defendants may raise these differences when opposing class treatment, and in some cases opposing positions may justify denial of class certification. In many instances, however, differences may be resolved by limiting the definition of the class or classes that the plaintiffs may represent, by creating additional classes or subclasses, or by tailoring the relief afforded to different plaintiffs. For example, the court may define a class to exclude (or treat as a subclass) those who, as often occurs in complex securities litigation, are also defendants in the class action or in related litigation. If a subclass should be formed and no representative of that subclass is a party, the court may direct notice to the unrepresented class members, to afford them time to have a representative intervene.<sup>1891</sup> Although, as discussed in section 21.23, unnecessary classes generally should be avoided, in some securities cases multiple classes or subclasses may be needed to ensure that the interests of all class members are fairly and adequately protected, particularly during settlement negotiations. Occasionally a mandatory class under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(b)(1) or (b)(2) may be proper, but generally classes in securities litigation will be certified under Rule 23(b)(3), with members enjoying the right to notice and an opportunity to opt out. Class members' opting out of a 23(b)(3) class, if adequately disclosed, may cure some conflicts.

Although the PSLRA provides for early notice to class members by the plaintiff who first files a securities class action, class representatives must also comply with Rule 23(c)(2)'s notice provisions. Absent special circumstances, the class representatives must bear not only the cost of providing Rule 23(c)(2) notice, but also the expense of obtaining class members' names and addresses, which frequently are in the possession of the defendants or a transfer agent.<sup>1892</sup> When securities are registered in "street" names with brokerage houses or financial institutions, these nominees' assistance will be needed.<sup>1893</sup> Class representatives should make arrangements with nominees to provide the necessary names and addresses or to forward notices where appropriate, or, where necessary, issue a subpoena duces tecum.<sup>1894</sup> Sometimes—for example, in a class action on behalf of holders of bearer bonds—the identity of class members may not be ascertainable. In such a case, the plaintiffs' attorneys should give notice by publication in media likely to be seen by the class members.

31.6 Discovery

The principles and procedures discussed in section 11.4 for controlling discovery are generally applicable to securities litigation, subject to the discovery stay provisions of the PSLRA where class action litigation is involved. As an initial matter, the judge should consider what information will be needed from the parties to determine whether the litigation should proceed as a derivative action or class action. In cases that do not raise class issues, the parties are subject to Rule 26 disclosures and the court should further ascertain at the initial pretrial conference the scope of discovery likely to be sought by the parties and tailor a discovery schedule accordingly. Additional reciprocal pre-discovery disclosures may expedite and reduce the amount of discovery needed. Similarly, deferral of depositions until the completion of document discovery may help facilitate and expedite the depositions, reducing the burden and cost on the parties. In class actions, the discovery process can begin once the court has resolved any outstanding motions to dismiss; therefore, it is helpful to set a discovery schedule that includes dates for Rule 26 disclosures (which would have been preempted by any stay of discovery) prior to permitting the parties to begin the formal discovery process. Staged discovery may be appropriate, such as where there are certain factual issues that may be key to summary judgment or settlement. Discovery into these areas first may facilitate early resolution or, at minimum, identify areas that remain in dispute.

To avoid duplicative discovery in multiple litigation, it is best to require plaintiffs in related cases to prepare a single set of interrogatories to be propounded to each defendant, and require the parties to coordinate discovery plans. Consider also establishing a common document depository, perhaps online, cross-noticing depositions of common witnesses for use in all cases. Whether claims of attorney–client privilege or other requests for protective orders are likely to arise during the course of discovery can be ascertained at the initial conference, and efforts can be made to resolve such issues before they can disrupt the discovery schedule. The court can also establish a schedule for exchanging expert reports and taking depositions early in the litigation and can adopt procedures to facilitate discovery and use at trial of summaries and computerized data. As in other cases, counsel should be expected to stipulate to facts not genuinely in controversy and directed to develop a joint statement of agreed-on (or uncontroverted) facts.

31.7 Takeover Litigation

- .71 Initial Conference 554
- .72 Injunctive Relief 556
- .73 Discovery 558

Takeover litigation presents special problems. Several actions and counteractions may be filed almost simultaneously in different courts to enjoin or remedy alleged violations of federal antitrust laws, federal securities laws, and state statutes. Major decisions must often be made rapidly about complex factual, legal, and economic issues that involve large amounts of money and would ordinarily take months or even years to resolve. Fortunately, such litigation typically involves only a few parties, represented by experienced attorneys accustomed to working under severe time constraints and other pressures. The existence of state statutes and corporate defenses, such as shareholders' rights plans ("poison pills"), may render time constraints less severe than suggested by the Williams Act.<sup>1895</sup>

31.71 Initial Conference

It is wise to hold a preliminary conference with counsel as soon as possible after the commencement of takeover litigation—preferably within a day or two after the complaint is filed. Plaintiff's counsel usually will know or be able to ascertain the identity of counsel for the defendants. The judge should consider whether attorneys for other companies with an interest in the litigation, either as potential intervenors or parties in related cases, should participate. Consider also inviting counsel for government enforcement agencies, such as the Securities and Exchange Commission or the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice. Telephone conferences can accommodate attorneys who are not available on short notice for a conference in chambers.

Procedures can be established—such as telephone conference calls or setting aside a period before or after normal office hours for an in-person conference—for emergency or other matters that may arise and require an immediate ruling. The parties should be cautioned, however, that unnecessary “emergency” motions, whose primary purpose may be to influence the market, may subject offending counsel or their clients to appropriate sanctions. All orders in takeover litigation involving entities with publicly traded securities should, to the extent feasible, be announced after the stock market closes. These rulings may have a substantial impact on the stock market for both plaintiffs’ and defendants’ stock and are sometimes monitored by securities professionals in an attempt to take immediate action in response to the court’s actions, often to the disadvantage of less sophisticated market participants. In unusual situations involving important confidential information, consider holding certain proceedings in camera or receiving some evidence under seal. Although the court may order counsel to defer disclosing the results of a court conference, the court will need to examine whether such an order could conflict with the disclosure requirements of the federal securities laws. Because of the limited time within which rulings must be made, the need for the judge to be personally involved in management and supervision is greater here than in other complex litigation. For this reason, some judges avoid referral to a magistrate judge or special master, which may result in critical delays while rulings are reviewed.

A schedule should be established at the initial conference for filing responsive pleadings and motions, defining and narrowing issues, conducting necessary discovery, and holding the next conference. The schedule usually will be substantially compressed compared with those typical of other litigation. For example, the court may require that the answer be combined with any motions and filed well before the twenty-day period prescribed by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(a), and parties may also be required to serve papers by personal delivery rather than through the mail. In setting the schedule, the suggestions and requests of counsel should be considered. Although the schedule should be regarded as firm, unforeseen events may dictate revisions. The attorneys should confer in advance of each conference, seeking through discussion and compromise to narrow, if not eliminate, disagreements as to matters to be considered by the court. If counsel has not done so, the court might consider adjourning the conference for a day or two to permit counsel to develop more detailed proposals for management of the case.

Additional agenda items that may be appropriate for consideration at this initial conference, whether the conference is held in person or by telephone, include whether the parties anticipate filing threshold motions and the exist-tence and status of any related cases. The parties may contemplate challenging standing, personal jurisdiction, venue, or other threshold matters that, if resolved promptly, might reduce or eliminate the need for discovery. If so, the judge should establish a schedule for expedited resolution of these issues. This is also an appropriate time to ascertain, or direct counsel to ascertain, the status of other related cases, including times set for hearings, and make plans to coordinate the proceedings to the extent possible. If jurisdiction and venue will not be contested, consider requiring the parties to include any related claims that may arise and enjoining them from instituting new litigation in other courts. Because of time constraints, multidistrict transfer under 28 U.S.C. § 1407 is rarely feasible. Transfer of cases to a single district under 28 U.S.C. § 1404 or 1406 may, however, be appropriate; if so, such transfers should be ordered as expeditiously as possible. If the cases remain in separate courts, the judges should confer and attempt to avoid conflicts in schedules.

31.72 Injunctive Relief

The most significant hearing in takeover litigation usually is that on the preliminary injunction. The court's ruling may moot or resolve other issues. Although the complaint typically will include a request for a temporary restraining order (TRO) and an application for a preliminary injunction, a TRO—or any order in takeover litigation—should almost never be granted ex parte, particularly given the opportunity for a telephone conference. Ordinarily, any pending request for a TRO should be resolved at the initial conference, and a date should be set for hearing the motion for injunctive relief. Depending on the date of the hearing, the court may, under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65(a)(2), order the trial on the merits to be advanced and consolidated with the hearing. In some cases, it is advisable to refuse hearing a motion for preliminary injunction if a hearing on a permanent injunction can be held expeditiously. Before deciding when or whether to hear the application for a preliminary injunction, the court should determine whether a ruling on the application must be rendered by an identifiable date. It is also wise to ascertain from counsel all dates important to the litigation, including those on which any statutory waiting periods expire or significant events (such as a stockholders meeting, or the commencement of acquisition of shares by a competing offeror) are scheduled to occur. The federal statutory waiting period may not be controlling, because of the prevalence of state statutes, such as control share acquisition acts and business combination statutes, as well as shareholders' rights plans (poison pills). Counsel should be questioned about the interplay of such laws and corporate defenses and the effect they will have on the date to be set for the hearing. If the deadline for a ruling cannot be met because of requirements of the litigation, such as criminal proceedings subject to the Speedy Trial Act, consider reassigning the case to another judge. Counsel's views about the minimum time needed to conduct essential discovery and to conduct the hearing itself should be considered. The court may make a tentative determination on the form of the hearing—for example, whether the motion will be decided on affidavits, depositions, and documents alone, or whether witnesses will be heard in person and, if so, whether their direct testimony will be presented by prepared statements and reports.

One or two additional case-management conferences usually will be needed before the hearing. A meeting (or conference call) among counsel should precede each conference. The primary purposes of these case-management conferences are to ensure that schedules are being met, to narrow or revise the issues based on intervening circumstances (such as an offer being made by another company for the target company's stock, or other defensive measures adopted or proposed to be adopted by the "target" company), and to make final preparations for any scheduled hearing.

Complaints in takeover litigation frequently include a number of claims that the plaintiffs may be willing to eliminate, after further exploration, at least for purposes of the preliminary injunction. Similarly, defenses and counterclaims may be abandoned as the hearing date approaches. The judge can encourage the parties to narrow the scope of the case to the most important issues, setting a date by which they are to specify those allegations the parties will press at the hearing.

Various steps may be taken to expedite and streamline the hearing, including the following:

- holding the hearing on only the affidavits, where no substantial factual disputes exist;
- directing the parties to submit statements of undisputed facts or requests for admission to narrow the scope of the hearing;
- directing counsel to identify any witnesses in advance along with the substance of their testimony and the exhibits they will sponsor;
- requiring that direct testimony be offered in the form of adopted narrative statements, exchanged in advance and subject to motions to strike, to cross-examination, and to redirect at the hearing if issues of credibility are presented;
- directing counsel to exchange proposed exhibits in advance of the hearing, and giving notice that objections may be treated as waived if not made in writing in advance of the hearing;
- resolving objections to foundation before the hearing;
- directing counsel to present stipulated summaries or extracts of any deposition testimony to be used in lieu of lengthy readings of transcripts;

- directing counsel to submit briefs in advance of the hearing, along with proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law; and
- where time is of the essence, ruling from the bench at the conclusion of the hearing, dictating findings and conclusions into the record, and requiring counsel to state immediately, at the hearing, any motions for modified or additional findings and conclusions based on the record.

31.73 Discovery

The court should encourage counsel to submit a jointly agreed on discovery plan for approval. The potential scope of disputed issues in takeover litigation can lead to excessive discovery demands, both for documents and depositions, creating unreasonable burdens on the parties in view of the brief time usually available for compliance. The need to identify and narrow the disputed issues and tailor the discovery plan narrowly in light of those issues should be stressed.

Discovery should begin with an expedited procedure for the production of relevant files, records, and documents necessary for the resolution of the issues. Where the initial conference is held within days of the filing of the complaint, the parties will have been unable to comply with early disclosure mandates of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26. The judge should discuss with the parties how to effectuate the goals of Rule 26 within the time pressures imposed by takeover litigation and take steps to avoid excessively voluminous production that will burden rather than assist the parties. The following may be helpful:

- limiting the relevant periods of time for discovery requests;
- requiring the parties to minimize objections and to redact documents and files to eliminate extraneous matter;
- encouraging counsel and the parties to consider alternative means of obtaining testimony in the limited time available, such as through statements from interviews of witnesses or discovery in related litigation; and
- encouraging and approving stipulated protective orders.

31.8 Trial and Settlement

The court should always be prepared for the possibility of trial, even though complex securities cases seldom proceed that far. Procedures similar to those used for trial and settlement of mass tort litigation<sup>1896</sup> may be appropriate for securities litigation. For example, consider consolidating related cases for a joint trial on specified issues, such as the defendants' respective liabilities for alleged misrepresentations and omissions, while leaving for subsequent separate trials other issues, such as damages and individual defenses. In cases subject to the PSLRA, the defendant is entitled, upon request, to have a written interrogatory submitted to the jury on the "defendant's state of mind at the time the alleged violation occurred."<sup>1897</sup> The PSLRA further requires that special interrogatories be submitted in jury cases (or findings of fact in bench trials) as to each covered person or each person alleged to have caused or contributed to the plaintiff's loss, regarding (1) whether such person violated the securities laws; (2) the person's percentage of responsibility; and (3) whether the securities violation was committed knowingly.<sup>1898</sup> In selected cases, the court may direct the parties to confer with the court about the precise text of appropriate special questions to a jury.

Securities cases typically involve experienced and sophisticated lawyers, as well as large sums of money. It is best to refer settlements to another judge, a special master, or a court-appointed expert with comparable experience and skills. Counsel need court approval to settle class or derivative actions, and when such approval is sought, the court should apply the principles and procedures governing settlements of class actions in general. The PSLRA contains specific provisions relating to settlement of covered class actions, including statements that must be included in proposed or final settlement agreements disseminated to the class<sup>1899</sup> and restrictions on settlements under seal.<sup>1900</sup> The PSLRA also provides for the discharge of all contribution claims against a covered person who settles before final judgment.<sup>1901</sup> In derivative actions, non-monetary benefits—such as a change in corporate management or policies—may play a significant role.<sup>1902</sup>

The PSLRA provides for the court's mandatory review of the parties' conduct and that of their counsel during the course of the action, and upon final adjudication it requires the court to "include in the record specific findings regarding compliance by each party and each attorney representing any party

32.1 Introduction

Employment discrimination litigation<sup>1904</sup> can arise in a number of contexts and include both statutory and common-law claims. Individual actions alleging employment discrimination are generally not factually complex. Nonetheless, complexity can be introduced into employment discrimination suits by class action allegations, questions regarding the scope of discovery, the technical nature of expert testimony, and issues relating to the granting of relief, whether by way of judgment or consent decree.

1904. This section is designed to highlight some of the areas in which case-management issues may arise under the most commonly litigated statutes and does not purport to afford comprehensive coverage of all of the issues that may arise in employment discrimination law.

32.2 The Statutory Framework

- .21 Title VII: Discrimination in Employee Hiring and Advancement 564
- .22 The Civil Rights Act of 1964: Discrimination in Contracting 567
- .23 Age Discrimination in Employment Act 568
- .24 Americans with Disabilities Act 570
- .25 Family and Medical Leave Act 571

The main federal statutes governing employment discrimination litigation are Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964,<sup>1905</sup> the Civil Rights Acts of 1866 and 1871 (sections 1981 and 1985(c)),<sup>1906</sup> the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (ADEA),<sup>1907</sup> and the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA).<sup>1908</sup> Other federal statutes also afford a basis for employment discrimination claims. These include, but are not limited to, the Equal Pay Act of 1963,<sup>1909</sup> the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA),<sup>1910</sup> the Fair Labor Standards Act,<sup>1911</sup> Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972,<sup>1912</sup> the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA),<sup>1913</sup> and 42 U.S.C. § 1983.<sup>1914</sup> These statutes afford a panoply of remedies covering a wide variety of conduct.

1905. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e (2000).

1906. Id. § 1981(a) (section 1981 prohibits, among other things, discrimination in employment contracting); Id. § 1985 (prohibits conspiracy to interfere with civil rights).

1907. 29 U.S.C. § 623(a) (2000) (the ADEA prohibits discrimination based on age).

1908. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(a) (2000) (the ADA affords protection against employment discrimination based on disability).

1909. 29 U.S.C.A. § 206(d) (2000). The Equal Pay Act prohibits only discrimination based on sex and requires equal pay “for equal work on jobs the performance of which requires equal skill, effort and responsibility, and which are performed under similar working conditions . . .” Id. § 206(d)(1). The statute authorizes both public and private actions against employers, but limits a private individual’s right to sue only if there has been no public action filed on the individual’s behalf or the individual has accepted no prior remedies. Id. § 216(b).

1911. 29 U.S.C. § 201 (2000).

1912. 20 U.S.C. § 1681 (2000) (Title IX prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in federally funded programs or activities).

1913. 29 U.S.C. § 2615 (2000).

1914. See Evans v. Avery, 100 F.3d 1033, 1036 (1st Cir. 1996) (“Section 1983 supplies a private right of action against a person who, under color of state law, deprives another of rights secured by the Constitution or by federal law.”); see also Morris v. Oldham County Fiscal Court, 201 F.3d 784, 794 (6th Cir. 2000) (“The showing a plaintiff must make to recover on an employment discrimination claim under Title VII mirrors that which must be made to recover on an equal protection claim under section 1983.”). Section 1983 is the vehicle for suits against federal officials under other sources of federal statutory law prohibiting discrimination.

A plaintiff can establish a prima facie case of employment discrimination through “direct” evidence of a defendant’s discriminatory intent.<sup>1915</sup> When the plaintiff relies only on inferential or circumstantial evidence of discriminatory intent, however, it is common to apply some variation of the four-factor test set out in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green.<sup>1916</sup> In McDonnell Douglas, the Supreme Court, in addressing a claim under Title VII, held that to establish a prima facie case of employment discrimination in cases where the plaintiff lacks direct evidence of discriminatory intent, a plaintiff must prove (1) that the plaintiff is a member of a protected class, (2) who applied and was qualified for a job for which the employer was seeking applicants, (3) that, despite plaintiff’s qualifications, he or she was rejected, and (4) that, after the plaintiff was rejected, the position remained open and the employer continued to seek applications from persons of plaintiff’s qualifications.<sup>1917</sup>

McDonnell Douglas also “established an allocation of the burden of production and an order for the presentation of proof in . . . discriminatory-treatment cases.”<sup>1918</sup> Once the plaintiff has established a prima facie case under the McDonnell Douglas standard, the plaintiff creates a rebuttable presumption that the employer engaged in unlawful discrimination.<sup>1919</sup> The burden of production then shifts to the defendant to produce evidence that its challenged employment decision was based on factors other than the protected status of the plaintiff and based on a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason.<sup>1920</sup> The pre-

In addition to claims brought under Title VII, the McDonnell Douglas test applies to claims for employment discrimination brought under §§ 1981 and 1983 of the Civil Rights Act, and under the ADEA. See, e.g., Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Prods., Inc., 530 U.S. 133, 142 (2000) (noting that the issue had not squarely come before the Court but assumed arguendo that the McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting standard applied where the parties did not dispute its application), and cases cited therein; see also Fairchild v. Co., 302 F.3d 735, 742 (7th Cir. 2002) noted that “[t]he need to establish a prima facie case does not always arise; frequently employers concede the prima facie case and simply offer a non-discriminatory justification.” See also *Hopson v. sumptions created by the McDonnell Douglas framework then disappear, and the plaintiff must prove that the employer's proffered reasons were simply a pretext for discrimination.<sup>1921</sup> The defendant's burden is one of production only, however, and "[t]he ultimate burden of persuading the trier of fact that the defendant intentionally discriminated against the plaintiff remains at all times with the plaintiff."<sup>1922</sup> The Supreme Court, in Reeves v. Sanderson, held that a plaintiff can satisfy this burden through proof of "a prima facie case, combined with sufficient evidence to find the employer's asserted justification is false."<sup>1923</sup> The plaintiff is not required to present independent proof of discrimination.<sup>1924</sup>

Title VII has been referred to as the "centerpiece of employment discrimination law,"<sup>1925</sup> prohibiting discrimination based on sex (including sexual harassment),<sup>1926</sup> race,<sup>1927</sup> religion, and national origin.<sup>1928</sup> Title VII further prohibits retaliation against employees who exercise their rights under the statute. Title VII applies to employers (of fifteen or more employees),<sup>1929</sup> employment agencies,<sup>1930</sup> and labor organizations,<sup>1931</sup> as well as state and federal entities.

1921. See, e.g., Waterhouse v. District of Columbia, 298 F.3d 989, 994 (D.C. Cir. 2002) (plaintiff failed to establish employer's proffered explanation lacked credence where plaintiff admitted deficiencies cited by employer concerning her performance).

When the plaintiff has direct evidence of discrimination, plaintiff's prima facie case is met through proof that the employer took an adverse employment action against him or her because of race, age, sex, or religion. The McDonnell Douglas standard typically will govern the pretrial evidentiary burdens if direct evidence of discrimination is unavailable. Remedies include both compensatory and punitive damages,<sup>1932</sup> injunctive relief, reinstatement, back pay, attorney fees, and lost profits.<sup>1933</sup>

Title VII established the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC),<sup>1934</sup> which also enforces provisions of the ADA and ADEA.<sup>1935</sup> The EEOC functions as an "institution of first-resort" for claims under Title VII. The statute also authorizes the EEOC itself to bring suit against the employer.<sup>1936</sup> Prior to seeking judicial relief, a plaintiff must timely file his or her claim with a regional EEOC office.<sup>1937</sup> The EEOC may grant the plaintiff

1937. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(a), (e) (2000). When the charge must be filed with the EEOC depends on whether the state affords administrative remedies for unlawful employment practices. Where no such legislation exists, the charge must be filed with the EEOC within 180 days of the unlawful practice. Where the state has enacted equal employment legislation and maintains agencies to enforce such laws, however, the charge must first be filed with the state agency. The state agency has 60 days to review the charge and seek to resolve the plaintiff's complaint. The plaintiff then has 30 days from receipt of a notice of dismissal or notice of a right-to-sue letter from the state agency, or 300 days from the unlawful practice complained of, whichever is sooner, to file a charge with the EEOC. See Lewis & Norman, supra note 1915, § 4.2, at 199–204, for a discussion of the notice provisions and work-sharing arrangements between the state and federal agencies, noting "although Sec 706 appears to require that the state or local filing precede the filing of a charge with EEOC, it is apparent from the Court's approval of deferral and work-sharing agreements that in practice EEOC is often the first, and sometimes the only agency to investigate and conciliate charges, even in deferral states." See also Tewksbury v. Ottoway Newspapers, 192 F.3d 322, 324–26 (2d Cir. 1999) (discussing relationship between EEOC and deferral-state agency and whether claim is timely filed where EEOC forwards charges to state agency under work-sharing agreement).

Congress enacted The Civil Rights Act of 1991 (CRA) in response to Supreme Court decisions that, in Congress’s view, diminished Title VII and section 1981 protections.<sup>1940</sup> The CRA gives plaintiffs a right to a jury trial and the right to seek compensatory and punitive damages for claims of intentional discrimination under Title VII.<sup>1941</sup> “The 1991 Act’s enhanced damages provisions were designed to compensate victims of discrimination for humiliation, trauma, physical distress, medical expenses, and other economic and non-economic harms caused by workplace discrimination.”<sup>1942</sup> The 1991 Act also expressly designates claims for disparate impact as within the scope of Title VII relief.<sup>1943</sup> Other changes include requiring employers to demonstrate that a challenged employment practice is “job related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity,”<sup>1944</sup> and allowing the award of attorney fees and costs where the plaintiff successfully shows that an employment decision was motivated by an impermissible factor (even though other factors may have been involved). The 1991 Act allows for the recovery of expert fees in all cases where attorney fees are recoverable. In addition, the Act limits the remedies available against an employer who is able to show that it would have taken the

32.22 The Civil Rights Act of 1964: Discrimination in Contracting

Section 1981 of Title 42 of the U.S. Code prohibits, among other things, racial discrimination in employment contracting.<sup>1947</sup> The Supreme Court has interpreted the statute to reach discrimination based on ethnicity,<sup>1948</sup> and courts have interpreted the Act to prohibit discrimination on the basis of alienage.<sup>1949</sup> There is no minimum employer size requirement as there is under other antidiscrimination statutes.<sup>1950</sup> In order to maintain a claim under section 1981, the record must show that plaintiff (1) is a member of a protected class; (2) was qualified for the position; (3) was terminated; and (4) was replaced by someone outside the protected class.<sup>1951</sup> Plaintiffs suing under section 1981 are not required to exhaust administrative avenues.<sup>1952</sup> Damages under section 1981 are unlimited and include both compensatory and punitive damages.<sup>1953</sup>

The scope of 42 U.S.C. § 1981 was also clarified in the CRA. Prior decisions by the Supreme Court had limited application of the statute to discrimination in the actual formation of contracts.<sup>1954</sup> The CRA amended section 1981

Court in Kimel v. Florida Board of Regents<sup>1960</sup> held that ADEA claims are unavailable against state employers.<sup>1961</sup>

A prima facie case of age discrimination under McDonnell Douglas is shown if the plaintiff (1) is 40 years or older, (2) had satisfactory job performance, and (3) has suffered an adverse employment action because of age.<sup>1962</sup> Some courts have held that the plaintiff must show that he or she was replaced by or treated differently than a younger employee.<sup>1963</sup> Others, however, have interpreted the Act as requiring only that the plaintiff demonstrate that he or she is a member of the protected class (employees over 40 years old) and was discriminated against on the basis of age, even if the beneficiary of the discriminatory acts was older than the plaintiff.<sup>1964</sup> As with Title VII and section 1981, if an employer presents nondiscriminatory reasons for the adverse actions, the presumption created by the prima facie case drops out and the plaintiff must bear the ultimate burden of proving that age was a mitigating factor in the adverse employment decision.<sup>1965</sup> Specifically, employers can defend themselves by showing that the challenged employment decision was based on “reasonable factors other than age,” that the employee was disciplined or discharged for good cause,<sup>1966</sup> or that the employment decision related to a bona fide occupational qualification.<sup>1967</sup> Although ADEA plaintiffs cannot recover compensatory or punitive damages, the Act incorporates the remedies available under the Fair Labor Standards Act, as well as other relief, such as injunctive relief, promotion, reinstatement, back and front pay, and attorney fees.<sup>1968</sup> Defendants also can be liable for liquidated damages where the plaintiff proves “willful violation” of the Act.<sup>1969</sup>

It is unclear whether disparate impact claims are available under the ADEA, and the Supreme Court in Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins<sup>1970</sup> questioned the use of a disparate impact theory. The CRA amendments expressly codified disparate impact claims only for Title VII.<sup>1971</sup>

32.24 Americans with Disabilities Act

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) prohibits, among other things, employment discrimination against “qualified persons with a disability.”<sup>1972</sup> Liability under the ADA is limited to employers with fifteen or more employees.<sup>1973</sup> Although employers are permitted to establish physical criteria necessary for a position, or to prefer some physical attributes over others, the employer “runs afoul of the ADA when it makes an employment decision based on a physical or mental impairment, real or imagined, that is regarded as substantially limiting a major life activity.”<sup>1974</sup> Employers are required to make reasonable accommodations for employees or applicants with disabilities. As with other employment discrimination claims, the employer may rebut a claim of ADA discrimination by providing “evidence of a ‘legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason’ for its action.”<sup>1975</sup>

1970. 507 U.S. 604, 610 (1993) (stating “[d]isparate treatment, thus defined, captured the essence of what Congress sought to prohibit in the ADEA” and noting that court had not addressed question of whether a plaintiff could proceed on a disparate impact theory under the ADEA). But see Smith v. City of Des Moines, 99 F.3d 1466, 1470 (8th Cir. 1996) (disparate impact claims cognizable under ADEA); Mangold v. Cal. Pub. Utilities Comm’n, 67 F.3d 1470, 1474 (9th Cir. 1995) (plaintiff may pursue disparate impact theory under ADEA); Francis W. Parker, 41 F.3d 1073, 1077 (7th Cir. 1994) (“[D]ecisions based on criteria which merely tend to affect workers over the age of forty more adversely than workers under forty are not prohibited.”).

1972. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(a) (2000) (section 12112(a) provides that no employer may “discriminate against a qualified individual with a disability because of the disability of such individual in regard to job application procedures, the hiring, advancement, or discharge of employees, employee compensation, job training, and other terms, conditions, and privileges of employment”). “Disability” is defined as a “physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more . . . major life activities . . .” 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(g)(1) (1999). Thus, the ADA is violated where the employee is able to perform the essential functions of the job “with or without reasonable accommodation which does not impose an undue hardship on the employer.” Id.

The provisions of the ADA are enforced by the EEOC in the same manner as Title VII claims.<sup>1976</sup> Thus, under the ADA, the EEOC “may bring suit to enjoin an employer from engaging in unlawful employment practices, and to pursue reinstatement, back pay, and compensatory or punitive damages.”<sup>1977</sup>

32.25 Family and Medical Leave Act

The Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) entitles an eligible employee<sup>1978</sup> to up to twelve weeks of leave for absences resulting from a disabling health problem, serious illness of a family member or the employee, or the birth or adoption of a child.<sup>1979</sup> Actions brought under the FMLA are generally brought in the context of retaliation claims arising out of the employee’s exercise of his or her leave rights.<sup>1980</sup> In addition to showing the exercise of leave rights, the plaintiff must have suffered an adverse employment action, and further demonstrate a causal relationship between the exercise of leave rights and the chal-

32.3 Developments in the Law of Employment Discrimination

Supreme Court decisions have addressed such diverse issues as when punitive damages may be awarded,<sup>1982</sup> the intersection of the employment discrimination statutes and the First Amendment,<sup>1983</sup> and the sovereign immunity of the states under the Eleventh Amendment.<sup>1984</sup> Several decisions have resolved splits among the circuits. In Burlington Industries Inc. v. Ellerth<sup>1985</sup> and Faragher v. City of Boca Raton,<sup>1986</sup> the Supreme Court held that employers who meet a two-factor affirmative defense can avoid liability for acts of supervisors that create a hostile work environment. If an employer can show that it exercised reasonable care to prevent and promptly correct harassing behavior, and the employee unreasonably failed to take advantage of preventive or corrective opportunities provided by the employer, no liability will exist.<sup>1987</sup> Same-sex harassment was held actionable under Title VII in Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services Inc.,<sup>1988</sup> which overruled prior precedent in the Fifth Circuit rejecting such claims. “If our precedents leave any doubt on the question, we hold that nothing in Title VII necessarily bars the claim of discrimination because of sex merely because the plaintiff and the defendant (or the person charged with acting on behalf of the defendant) are of the same sex.”<sup>1989</sup> In order to prevail, plaintiffs in same-sex harassment cases must show, as must plaintiffs in opposite-sex harassment cases, that the harassment they suffered was due to sex, and that it was sufficiently severe and persistent to create a hostile or abusive work environment.

In Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa,<sup>1990</sup> the Court resolved a split among the circuits as to whether a plaintiff seeking relief pursuant to Title VII was required to prove by direct evidence that an impermissible motive was a motivating factor in an adverse employment decision in order to establish liability under section 2000e-2(m).<sup>1991</sup> Noting that the language of Title VII did not impose special evidentiary burdens, the Court held that a plaintiff in a mixed-motive case was required to prove that the employment action was motivated by an impermissible factor only by a preponderance of the evidence, which could be met through either direct or circumstantial evidence. “Section 2000e-2(m) unambiguously states that a plaintiff need only ‘demonstrat[e]’ that an employer used a forbidden consideration with respect to ‘any employment practice.’ On its face, the statute does not mention, much less require, that a plaintiff make a heightened showing through direct evidence.”<sup>1992</sup>

Addressing cases arising under other employment statutes, the Court in Gebser v. Lago Vista Independent School District<sup>1993</sup> held that, under Title IX, a school district’s liability for the sexual harassment of a student by a teacher required a showing that a school district official with authority to take corrective action had actual notice of the harassment or was deliberately indifferent to it.

The Court declined to hold a school district liable based on a theory of constructive notice, stating “[w]hen Congress attaches conditions to the award of federal funds under its spending power, U.S. Const., Art. I, § 8, cl. 1, as it has in Title IX and Title VI, we examine closely the propriety of private actions holding the recipient liable in monetary damages for noncompliance with the condition . . . Our central concern in that regard is with ensuring that ‘the receiving entity of federal funds [has] notice that it will be liable for a monetary award.’”<sup>1994</sup> Imposition of liability based on constructive notice or respondeat superior was inconsistent with the enforcement mechanism of Title IX, which assumed actual notice of the violation by the recipient and an opportunity to remedy noncompliance. In Nevada Department of Human Resources v. Hibbs,<sup>1995</sup> the Court held that state employees could recover damages where the state violated the family-care provisions of the FMLA. Addressing whether Congress had acted within its authority in abrogating state immunity under the Eleventh Amendment, the Court noted that “the States’ record of unconstitutional participation in, and fostering of, gender-based discrimination in the administration of leave benefits is weighty enough to justify the enactment of prophylactic § 5 legislation.”<sup>1996</sup>

The Court also has addressed the standard for determining when an individual is substantially limited in performing manual tasks within the meaning of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) (see Toyota Mfg., Kentucky, Inc. v. Williams<sup>1997</sup>), holding that the terms “major life activity” and “substantial impairment” should be strictly interpreted.<sup>1998</sup> Accordingly, in order for a plaintiff to prove that he or she suffers from a substantial limitation of a major life activity in performing manual tasks, the plaintiff must show that he or she suffers from an impairment “that prevents or severely restricts the individual from doing activities that are of central importance to most people’s daily lives.”<sup>1999</sup> This determination must be made on a case-by-case basis.<sup>2000</sup> In examining whether the plaintiff had shown a substantial limitation in performing manual tasks, the Court rejected a focus limited only to whether the plaintiff was able to perform her specific job as proof of a substantial limitation.<sup>2001</sup> “When addressing the major life activity of performing manual tasks, the central inquiry must be whether the claimant is unable to perform the variety of tasks central to most people’s daily lives, not whether the claimant is unable to perform the tasks associated with her specific job.”<sup>2002</sup> Thus, a plaintiff seeking to establish such an impairment must show substantial impairment in both job-related and non-job-related manual tasks.

Several Supreme Court decisions have addressed procedural issues relevant to employment discrimination claims. For example, the Court resolved a split among the circuits as to the proper pleading standard in such cases. Several circuits had imposed a heightened pleading standard on plaintiffs, requiring them to plead facts in support of each element of the prima facie McDonnell

Acts falling outside of the statutory time period for filing charges,<sup>2007</sup> although no longer actionable themselves as discrete acts of discrimination or unlawful practice, may be used to support a claim based on allegations of a hostile work environment. The Court stated in National Railroad Passenger Corp. v. Morgan<sup>2008</sup> “[i]t does not matter, for purposes of the statute, that some of the component acts of the hostile work environment fall outside the statutory time period. Provided that an act contributing to the claim occurs within the filing period, the entire time period of the hostile environment may be considered . . . .”<sup>2009</sup>

Finally, the scope and effect of arbitration agreements in employment contracts was discussed in Circuit City Stores Inc. v. Adams<sup>2010</sup> and EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc.<sup>2011</sup> The Court in Circuit City rejected a Ninth Circuit decision excluding employment contracts from the scope of the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA). The Court held that section 1 of the FAA contained a limited exclusion applicable only to transportation workers, agreeing with the majority of circuits that employment discrimination claims brought by nontransportation workers could be subject to arbitration.<sup>2012</sup> The scope of the FAA was also addressed in Waffle House, resolving a split among the circuits as to whether

32.41 Initial Pretrial Conference

Efficient management of employment discrimination litigation requires that the disputed legal and factual issues be identified and, if possible, narrowed early in the case. The pleadings often will reveal jurisdictional issues that must be addressed at the outset. In some cases, discovery may be necessary on factual issues underpinning a motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction.<sup>2014</sup> The complaint can be dismissed after notice and hearing, where it is apparent that jurisdiction is improper.<sup>2015</sup> At the initial pretrial conference,

Nat'l Inst. of Standards & Tech.*, 282 F.3d 1320, 1326 (10th Cir. 2002) (“Although a district court has discretion in the manner by which it resolves an issue of subject matter jurisdiction . . . a refusal to grant discovery constitutes an abuse of discretion if the denial results in prejudice to a litigant.” (citations omitted)).

2015. See, e.g., Tang v. State of R.I., Dep't of Elderly Affairs, 904 F. Supp. 55, 58–59 (D.R.I. 1995) (courts have held that the receipt of a right-to-sue letter is a statutory prerequisite, not a jurisdictional prerequisite).

the court should attempt to identify the specific acts of discrimination that each plaintiff claims to have suffered, as well as the particular relief sought. Many employment discrimination claims are brought as class actions, and early identification of the specific claims being pursued in such cases is necessary for determining whether they qualify for class certification,<sup>2016</sup> as well as for developing an appropriate plan for discovery and trial. The court also should ascertain whether plaintiffs have timely satisfied any administrative prerequisites to the filing of the action.<sup>2017</sup> Inquiry into the following areas, either before or in conjunction with the initial Rule 16 conference, will help identify possible jurisdictional problems:

- Is the case barred by the statute of limitations?<sup>2018</sup>
- Has the plaintiff exhausted administrative remedies?<sup>2019</sup>
- Do any pending parallel state or agency actions involving the same parties and issues warrant consolidation or a stay of proceedings?<sup>2020</sup>

2016. See Gen. Tel. Co. of Southwest v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147 (1982).

2017. Harriss v. Pan Am. World Airways, Inc., 74 F.R.D. 24 (N.D. Cal. 1977). Although claims under Title VII require the prior filing by the individual claimant of a charge with the EEOC, claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 (racial discrimination) and 42 U.S.C. § 1983 (discrimination by government employers) do not require filing of an administrative charge, but are subject to state statutes of limitations. See also Sizova, 282 F.3d at 1325 (noting that although failure to file a charge with the EEOC is a jurisdictional bar to suit, failure to timely file an administrative charge is not jurisdictional).

2018. See, e.g., Nat'l R.R. Passenger Corp. v. Morgan, 536 U.S. 101, 108–10 (2002). Courts generally treat discrete employment decisions that occur over a period of time as individual violations for limitations purposes, although a series of adverse actions can constitute a single continuing violation if the plaintiff was unaware he or she was a victim of discrimination until a pattern emerged. See, e.g., Jones v. Merchs. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 42 F.3d 1054, 1058 (7th Cir. 1994) (discussing three scenarios under which continuing violation can be shown).

2019. A plaintiff must file a timely charge of discrimination with the EEOC as a prerequisite to maintaining a Title VII, Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA), or Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) claim. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e)(1), (f)(1) (2000) (Title VII); 42 U.S.C. § 12117(a) (2000) (ADA); 29 U.S.C. § 626(d) (2000) (ADEA); see also Jackson v. City of Chi., No. 96 C 3636, 1996 WL 734701, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 18, 1996). A plaintiff's failure to file a charge with the EEOC in a Title VII claim can result in a dismissal of the complaint. See, e.g., Sizova, 282 F.3d at 1325 (stating that “exhaustion of administrative remedies is a jurisdictional prerequisite to suit under Title VII”); Tang, 904 F. Supp. at 58–59.

2020. See, e.g., Currie v. Group Ins. Comm'n, 290 F.3d 1, 12 (1st Cir. 2002) (holding “there is no danger that the plaintiff will be prejudiced by ineffective prosecution of the state law claim. Nor will the defendant be prejudiced by our staying the action . . . .”); Murphy v. Uncle Ben's, Inc., 168 F.3d 734, 740 (5th Cir. 1999) (ADEA “does not constitute express Congressional authorization for federal courts to enter injunctions staying state judicial proceedings involving parallel state law age discrimination claims”).

- Is the claim subject to arbitration?<sup>2021</sup>
- Is the plaintiff seeking to pursue claims against unnamed parties?<sup>2022</sup>

Issues usually can be narrowed initially without discovery, and disputed jurisdictional facts—such as when a plaintiff received a “right to sue” letter—can be resolved through an expedited hearing if necessary.

Plaintiffs often seek relief that might adversely affect other employees or proposed employees of the defendant. Where potentially affected employees are represented by a labor organization, even if only the employer was named in the administrative charges or is alleged to have engaged in discrimination, consider joining the organization as a necessary party or having it intervene in order to make any decree binding should the plaintiffs prevail.<sup>2023</sup> Similarly, in some cases joinder or intervention of other employees who would be adversely affected by the plaintiffs’ success may be warranted to ensure that all competing interests are adequately represented and to protect against subsequent claims of reverse discrimination.<sup>2024</sup>

2021. See, e.g., EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc., 534 U.S. 279, 289 (2002) (“The FAA provides for stays of proceedings in federal district courts when an issue in the proceeding is referable to arbitration, and for orders compelling arbitration when one party has failed or refused to comply with an arbitration agreement.”); Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp., 500 U.S. 20, 26–27 (1991) (ADEA claims arbitrable under FAA); Carter v. Countrywide Credit Indus., Inc., 189 F. Supp. 2d 606, 612–14 (N.D. Tex. 2002) (Fair Labor Standards Act claims arbitrable under FAA).

2022. In some instances, plaintiffs may seek to bring claims against defendants who were not named in the EEOC charge. The courts have liberally construed the requirement, focusing on whether the party had adequate notice of the charge and an opportunity to participate in the conciliation process. See Fernandez Molinary v. Industrias La Famosa, Inc., 203 F. Supp. 2d 111, 116–17 (D.P.R. 2002) (plaintiff failed to exhaust administrative remedies where plaintiff failed to name respondents in EEOC complaint); Frazier v. Smith, 12 F. Supp. 2d 1362, 1369 (S.D. Ga. 1998) (sheriff should have had notice of claim from plaintiff’s naming of Camden County sheriff’s department and allegations of particular events naming sheriff specifically); Afande v. Nat’l Lutheran Home for the Aged, 868 F. Supp. 795, 800 (D. Md. 1994) (plaintiff properly named defendant in EEOC charge where plaintiff identified defendant as plaintiff’s supervisor in attached affidavit and defendant availed self of opportunity to participate in EEOC’s resolution and conciliation).

32.42 Class Actions

Many employment discrimination cases, particularly Title VII cases, are brought on behalf of a proposed class. For such actions to proceed, a named representative must have filed a timely charge with the EEOC. Plaintiffs must have exhausted administrative remedies on behalf of the class “and with respect to any claim that was the subject of or could reasonably have been expected to grow out of the EEOC’s investigation.”<sup>2025</sup> The statutory basis for the claim can also affect how a class action proceeds. The provisions of Rule 23 will apply to most employment discrimination class actions, but not all. For example, Rule 23’s opt-out provisions do not apply where proposed class claims are brought pursuant to the ADEA or the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).<sup>2026</sup> Collective actions under the ADEA are authorized by 29 U.S.C. § 626(b), which adopts the opt-in class mechanism of section 216 of the FLSA. Section 216 of the FLSA, in turn, provides that plaintiffs must affirmatively opt into a collective action in order to be considered a class member.<sup>2027</sup> “Rule 23 and § 216(b) class actions are ‘mutually exclusive and irreconcilable’ and those who choose not to opt-in to a class action under § 216(b) are not bound by and may not benefit from the judgment.”<sup>2028</sup> There is discretion to authorize notice of the class to similarly situated employees in order to afford them an opportunity to opt in.<sup>2029</sup>

While all included plaintiffs need to be similarly situated in order to maintain an opt-in class action under section 216(b), the possibility of varying defenses does not vitiate a collective action. See Lockhart v. Westinghouse Credit Corp., 879 F.2d 43, 52 (3d Cir. 1989) (“While the potential for problems with respect to class management may arise from the assertion of individualized defenses, a district court has the discretion to determine whether such problems would make manageability of the class impossible.”), overruled on other grounds, Starceski v. 2029. See Hoffmann-La Roche Inc. v. Sperling, 493 U.S. 165, 169 (1989); Hall, 2002 WL 413901, at *2. In order to serve as the basis for an ADEA class action, the underlying EEOC

In class actions subject to Rule 23, deciding whether the action should be maintained under Rule 23(b)(2) or (b)(3) will make a significant difference with respect to various aspects of the class litigation, in particular the definition of the class, entitlement to damages, class notice, and opt-out rights. Employment discrimination cases that meet the prerequisites of Rule 23(a) may qualify as class actions under Rule 23(b)(2) where the defendant “has acted . . . on grounds generally applicable to the class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief with respect to the class as a whole.”<sup>2030</sup> They may also qualify under Rule 23(b)(3) on the ground that a common question of fact or law predominates; indeed, where monetary relief is sought, a (b)(3) class is generally the appropriate vehicle.

Class action certification of disparate treatment claims under Rule 23(b) has become more complicated since the 1991 amendments to Title VII.<sup>2031</sup> Members of a Rule 23(b)(2) class generally are not entitled to recover anything other than incidental damages (i.e., damages to which the plaintiffs would be automatically entitled once liability is established). The 1991 amendments, however, permit plaintiffs alleging intentional discrimination to seek monetary relief in the form of compensatory or punitive damages. These damages would otherwise not be considered “incidental” to the relief sought,<sup>2032</sup> making certification under Rule 23(b)(2) inappropriate. At the same time, certification may still be improper under Rule 23(b)(3) because individual concerns may outweigh legal questions common to the class.<sup>2033</sup> In Allison v. Citgo Petroleum Corp.,<sup>2034</sup> the Fifth Circuit rejected certification under both Rules 23(b)(2) and (b)(3), noting that “the predominance of individual-specific issues relating to the plaintiffs’ claims for compensatory and punitive damages in turn detracts from the superiority of the class action device in resolving these claims.”<sup>2035</sup> The court viewed the issue as one of manageability, particularly in light of the number of potential plaintiffs, the length of time over which the discrimination was alleged to have occurred, and the number of departments involved in the alleged discrimination.<sup>2036</sup>

Other courts have declined to follow the reasoning in Allison, or have found that the decision did not establish a bright-line rule that a class seeking compensatory and punitive damages in a jury trial can never be certified.<sup>2037</sup> In Robinson v. Metro-North Commuter Railroad Co.,<sup>2038</sup> for example, the Second Circuit declined to follow Allison, holding that the district court should “assess whether Rule 23(b)(2) certification is appropriate in light of ‘the relative importance of the remedies sought, given all of the facts and circumstances of the case.’”<sup>2039</sup> In particular, the Second Circuit instructed the district court to ensure that the value to the plaintiffs of the equitable relief sought was predominant (i.e., plaintiffs would still bring the action for injunctive relief even if monetary damages were unavailable) and that class treatment would be “efficient and manageable.”<sup>2040</sup>

Rule 23(c)(4) permits maintaining an action as a class action with respect to particular issues. Several courts have suggested a “hybrid” approach in discrimination cases to deal with the problems created by the enhanced-damages provision of the Civil Rights Act. Hybrid options include a Rule 23(b)(2) class with an opt-out provision<sup>2041</sup> or certifying a Rule 23(b)(2) class with respect to the injunctive aspects of the suit and a Rule 23(b)(3) class to consider the claims for monetary relief.<sup>2042</sup> Other alternatives include certification of a Rule 23(b)(2) class for class-wide damages and severing the issue of individual damages to be considered later in the suit.<sup>2043</sup> Consider whether one of these approaches would be useful and, specifically, whether a Rule 23(b)(3) or (b)(2) class should be certified for bifurcated adjudication of a common issue (Phase I), to be followed by separate trials (coordinated or consolidated as may be appropriate) to adjudicate individual damage claims (Phase II). Once there has been a finding in Phase I of a class-wide violation, “the court should decide the issue of class-wide relief, typically in the form of an injunction prospectively prohibiting the discriminatory practice.”<sup>2044</sup> There are cases, however, where injunctive relief would not remedy the challenged employment practice, such as where the practice has been discontinued or the plaintiff is no longer employed by the defendant.<sup>2045</sup> The court can then determine what individual relief is appropriate for class members.

In a motion for class certification, consider whether the complaint challenges an employment practice affecting a class of employees as opposed to challenging the individual treatment of employees. In general, disparate impact cases are more suitable to class treatment, because they arise out of a neutral policy or practice that plaintiffs say has a disproportionate impact on a protected class.<sup>2046</sup> As a result, plaintiffs can more easily satisfy the typicality and commonality requirements of Rule 23 in such cases.<sup>2047</sup> Class certification of actions based on disparate treatment claims, however, is more complicated.<sup>2048</sup>

Where disparate treatment forms the basis of the action, individual issues are more likely to predominate and class certification may not be warranted.<sup>2049</sup> Plaintiffs seeking class-wide relief on the basis of the impact of a policy on their individual employment conditions must show that their claims are sufficiently similar to those of the proposed class members that they meet the requirements of commonality and typicality for the class.<sup>2050</sup> The commonality requirement is rarely satisfied by broad allegations of discrimination.<sup>2051</sup> Courts have refused to certify classes where, for example, the named plaintiffs worked in different groups and job types;<sup>2052</sup> the proposed class included current, past, and present employees in both supervisory and non-supervisory positions in addition to job applicants;<sup>2053</sup> or the employees worked in different facilities or geographical locations.<sup>2054</sup> In General Telephone v. Falcon,<sup>2055</sup> however, the Supreme Court noted that commonality may be satisfied where the plaintiffs can demonstrate that “an employer operated under a general policy of discrimination . . . [that] manifested itself . . . in the same general fashion, such as through entirely subjective decisionmaking processes.”<sup>2056</sup> Inquiry into whether the practice or conduct complained of involves the entire operation of the employer, or only a specific facility, department, or individual supervisor, will assist in determining whether the requirements of Rule 23 are met.

To ascertain the precise nature of the class claim and determine whether it meets the prerequisites of Rule 23(a), the court should probe beneath the pleadings at an early stage to identify the particular practice or procedure complained of and the extent to which the evidence to be offered in support of the named plaintiffs’ claims will also support the claims of other class members. Some discovery may be needed, although precertification discovery should be held to a minimum.<sup>2057</sup> Occasionally, the class claims will be consolidated with individual claims, and there may be reasons for proceeding with merits discovery on the latter. If so, the attorneys should be instructed to organize discovery so as to avoid duplication. A ruling that the class representatives’ individual claims have merit will not determine whether class certification is appropriate. The court will still need to determine if common issues predominate. A named plaintiff with a claim that lacks merit, however, will not be an adequate class representative.

Less precision is required in the definition of a Rule 23(b)(2) class. Members of a Rule 23(b)(2) class generally are limited to equitable relief (and appropriate incidental damages), and res judicata considerations with respect to individual claims are not significant. On the other hand, in a Rule 23(b)(3) action, plaintiffs’ primary claim is for damages. Thus, the class must be defined with more specificity, and the court must satisfy itself that the determination of individual claims does not preclude the existence of a predominant common question. The ruling on certification should describe the class (and any subclasses) as precisely as possible, both to facilitate planning for discovery, trial, and settlement and to define the persons (and claims) that will be entitled to relief under, or barred by, a final judgment in the action.<sup>2058</sup> To the extent feasible, this definition should be stated in objective terms: e.g., all female applicants during a specified time who, like the plaintiffs, failed to meet the employer's height and weight requirements. If unclear from the description of the class itself, the ruling should indicate the nature of the claimed class discrimination: e.g., all persons of color employed by the defendant during a specified period who allege that they were denied promotion during that period on account of their race. Criteria that are subjective or depend on the merits of the claim should be excluded. Although Rule 23(c)(1) authorizes a conditional order of certification and modification of that order prior to final judgment, such modification can be prejudicial to class members and interfere with the effective management of the action.<sup>2059</sup> In cases brought pursuant to the FLSA or ADEA, however, a determination whether similarly situated employees exist will help to determine whether notice of a right to opt in should be given and whether to conditionally certify the class. Once notice has been given and the time for opting in has expired, the judge can reexamine whether the class should be decertified.

Rule 23(c)(2) entitles each class member in a class certified under Rule 23(b)(3) to personal notice and an opportunity to opt out of the class.<sup>2060</sup> Rule 23 does not provide for opt-out by members of a (b)(2) class. If certain members of the class should be excluded, perhaps because their interests are aligned with management or to avoid conflicts within a class, the class definition should be tailored to reflect their exclusion or to create one or more subclasses.<sup>2061</sup>

Notice to class members must be given when a Rule 23(b)(3) class is certified.<sup>2062</sup> Although not required for a (b)(2) class, notice may still be advisable for a number of reasons, such as to bring to light possible conflicts and to ensure the res judicata effect of a judgment. The form of notice—individual mailing, posting on bulletin boards, or inclusion in pay envelopes—will depend on the circumstances of the case. While the cost of notice generally is

32.43 Discovery

- .431 Identification of Source Materials 586
- .432 Computerized Records 587
- .433 Confidential Information 588
- .434 Preservation of Records 589
- .435 Statistical Evidence and Expert Testimony 589
- .436 Discovery from Class Members 590

Five considerations are important in planning the discovery program for employment discrimination litigation:

1. Many aspects of the company's employment practices and its workforce may be potentially relevant as circumstantial evidence.
2. Most of the information will be within the control of the employer, often in computerized form.
3. Except for the government, plaintiffs usually have limited resources.
4. Expert testimony and complex statistical evidence will play an important role at trial.
5. Trial often will be conducted in stages.

32.431 Identification of Source Materials

The judge can simplify and expedite discovery by directing the parties to exchange core information before discovery begins. Core information includes information required under Rule 26 or local rules. It also includes potentially relevant documentary materials, such as statements of employment policies, policy manuals and guides, and an identification and general explanation (perhaps with samples) of the types of records that contain data that may be relevant to the issues in the case. After obtaining this information, plaintiffs may need to depose the personnel director or other individuals responsible for maintaining such records in order to clarify the nature of the information contained in the records, how the information is coded or compiled, and how data may be extracted from the various sources.

Employers frequently maintain the same or similar information in different forms. For example, earnings information may be in a personnel file, in tax records, and in payroll records. Job histories of employees may be determined from periodic transfer and promotion records, from individual work record cards, or from personnel files. The company may also have compiled relevant data regarding its workforce and employment practices for reporting to governmental agencies or for use in other litigation. Many aspects of the company's employment practices may have some potential relevance as circumstantial evidence, and various records may contain information about these practices. The parties can determine the most efficient and economical method for the employer to produce, and for plaintiffs to obtain, the most relevant information. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(g) directs counsel to weigh the potential value of particular discovery against the time and expense of production, and Rule 26(b)(2) expects the judge to limit discovery to avoid duplication and unjustified expense.<sup>2064</sup>

32.432 Computerized Records

The time and expense of discovery may sometimes be substantially reduced if pertinent information can be retrieved from existing computerized records. Moreover, production in computer-readable form of relevant files and fields (or even of an entire database) can reduce disputes over the accuracy of compilations made from such data and enable experts for both sides to conduct studies using a common set of data.<sup>2065</sup> On the other hand, accessing and using computer-generated evidence is subject to numerous pitfalls. For a more complete discussion see section 11.446. The parties' computer experts should informally discuss, in person or by telephone, procedures to facilitate retrieval and production of computerized information; the attorneys can then confirm these arrangements in writing.

2064. See Aramburu v. Boeing Co., 885 F. Supp. 1434, 1444–45 (D. Kan. 1995) (holding that production of 1,700 personnel files would unduly burdensome in light of information already produced by defendant and relevance appeared negligible in light of burden, but giving plaintiff leave to seek reconsideration should additional discovery prove necessary); Zapata v. IBP, Inc., No. CIV.A. 93-2366, 1994 WL 649322, at *3 (D. Kan. Nov. 10, 1994) (requiring defendant to produce computerized records and noting that all discovery is burdensome and burden is on party resisting discovery to demonstrate it would be unduly burdened by the discovery request); Couplin v. Lee, 946 F.2d 1152, 1160 (5th Cir. 1991) (district court abused discretion in limiting plaintiff's access to personnel files, and although some limitations can be imposed on ground of burdensomeness, the "more important the information sought in discovery is to the case, the greater the burden the opposing party can be legitimately required to shoulder"). In Sattar v. Motorola, for example, the district court denied plaintiff's discovery request for hard copies of over 200,000 pages of E-mail messages. The court instead ordered the defendant to accommodate the plaintiff in one of several alternative ways, such as downloading the data onto diskettes (as opposed to submitting the tapes on which the information was maintained), permitting the plaintiff to use the software needed to read the tapes, or giving the plaintiff access to the defendant's computer system, otherwise the parties would be required to split the costs of hard copies. 138 F.3d 1164, 1171 (7th Cir. 1998).

2065. See Hines v. Widnall, 183 F.R.D. 596, 601 (N.D. Fla. 1998) (requiring defendant to produce computer images to plaintiffs even though defendant computerized records after litigation began).

32.433 Confidential Information

Employees' privacy interests may be protected by excluding from production records or portions of records irrelevant to the litigation (employees' medical histories, for example, are rarely of significance in a discrimination case) or by masking the names of individuals in particular compilations.<sup>2066</sup> If the company fears exposure to privacy claims were it to disclose personal information voluntarily, consider issuing a protective order barring unnecessary disclosure of sensitive items to facilitate the production of sensitive information. The protective order may identify information regarding the employee, such as names or social security numbers, and may limit the persons to whom plaintiffs' counsel will be permitted to disclose confidential materials. For example, counsel might be allowed to disclose some sensitive information to the plaintiffs or even to class members, but permitted to disclose information about tests only to an expert.

Discovery sought by the defendant employer often targets private information regarding the plaintiffs or nonparty witnesses. In sexual harassment cases, defendants may seek discovery as to the plaintiff's emotional well-being, including medical and psychological records, or the plaintiff's sexual history.<sup>2067</sup> As always, the plaintiffs (and nonparty witness's) privacy interests

2067. See, e.g., Gatewood v. Stone Container Corp., 170 F.R.D. 455, 460 (S.D. Iowa 1996) (“[A] defendant is entitled to discover whether there have been other stressors relating to plaintiff's mental and physical health during the relevant time period which may have contributed to the claimed emotional distress.”); *Fox v. should be balanced against the probative value of the information sought.<sup>2068</sup> Determinations as to whether the plaintiff may have waived any physician–patient privilege also may be required.<sup>2069</sup>

32.434 Preservation of Records

When a charge of discrimination or a civil action has been filed, EEOC regulations require that employers “shall preserve all personnel records relevant to the charge or action until final disposition of the charge or action.”<sup>2070</sup> The parties may disagree on which records are covered by this mandate, particularly with respect to computerized data that may be periodically erased as new information is electronically stored. A separate order may be needed to clarify what records must be preserved and to provide relief from unduly burdensome retention requirements.

32.435 Statistical Evidence and Expert Testimony

Employment discrimination litigation frequently involves the collection and presentation of voluminous data regarding characteristics of the company’s workforce and its employment practices. In addition to using data already computerized by the company, the parties often prepare new databases, electronically storing information manually extracted from other records. Disagreements may arise about the accuracy of these new databases, and preparing and verifying separate databases involves time and expense. Consider encouraging the parties to agree on joint development of a common database on which their respective experts will conduct their studies. If they cannot agree on a common database, the court should direct them to use pretrial verification procedures to eliminate (or quantify) errors in the different databases. Whenever possible, complex data should be presented at trial through summaries, charts, and other tabulations.<sup>2071</sup> actions, “[i]n order not to undermine the rationale of Rule 412 . . . courts should enter appropriate orders pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c) to protect the victim against unwarranted inquiries and to ensure confidentiality”).

2071. In discrimination cases, the parties sometimes attempt to introduce in bulk numerous personnel files, work history cards, and other similar documents. See, e.g., Crawford v. W. Elec. Co., 614 F.2d 1300, 1319 (5th Cir. 1980) (the court may insist on compilations and is not required to “[wade] through a sea of uninterpreted raw evidence”).

Adopting pretrial procedures to facilitate this presentation will reduce disputes over the accuracy of the underlying data and the compilations derived from such data. Indeed, to the extent practicable, disputes at trial regarding statistical evidence should be limited to its interpretation, relevance, and weight, not its accuracy. Experts submitting statistical studies in the form of written reports should include, among other things, the data and information considered in arriving at their conclusions. Such information includes the applicable labor or employment pool, historical data, and other characteristics.<sup>2072</sup> After reviewing these reports and considering the comments of counsel, it may be appropriate to appoint an independent statistical expert under Federal Rule of Evidence 706. The court should be wary of making such an appointment, however, if the plaintiffs will be able to pay their share of any assessed fees only if they prevail.<sup>2073</sup>

The extent of permissible discovery from class members, as well as its timing and form, will depend on the circumstances of the case. The judge should require the parties to obtain court approval before taking any discovery from class members and should limit that discovery to what is genuinely needed. Depositions of a limited number of proposed class members are sometimes needed prior to a ruling on class certification. In some cases, limited discovery from class members may be conducted in a bifurcated case in the liability phase of the pretrial proceedings, with any remaining discovery deferred.<sup>2074</sup> Each party ordinarily should be permitted to depose any class member whom the other party plans to call as a witness. Discovery of a class member whose employment history will be used as evidence to show the existence (or nonexistence) of the alleged discrimination may also be appropriate. Whether anecdotal experiences of individual class members are relevant at a Phase I trial will depend on the circumstances of the case. Consider deferring discovery from those class members if such evidence will become relevant at subsequent proceedings only if liability to the class is established. Similarly, class members on whose behalf claims for individual relief are presented after a finding of class-wide liability may be treated as subject to discovery.

32.44 Summary Judgment

Summary judgment can be an effective tool in employment discrimination cases. Although typically brought by one of the parties, some courts have approved the use of summary judgment sua sponte in appropriate cases.<sup>2075</sup> The courts have consistently held that the McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting framework, applicable where the plaintiff's case rests on circumstantial evidence of discrimination, governs summary judgment but should not be introduced to the jury.<sup>2076</sup> The Ninth Circuit noted in Costa v. Desert Palace Inc.<sup>2077</sup> that the presumption of discrimination may be relevant at trial where the employer does not rebut the prima facie case, but factual disputes remain. In most cases, however, “[r]egardless of the method chosen to arrive at trial, it is not normally appropriate to introduce the McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting framework to the jury.”<sup>2078</sup> Accordingly, once the employer proffers a nondiscriminatory reason for the employment practice at issue, the plaintiff must offer evidence to show that the defendant's asserted reason is pretextual in order to defeat summary judgment in favor of the employer.<sup>2079</sup> It may be enough for the plaintiff to establish a prima facie case, together with sufficient evidence to challenge the credibility of the employer's proffered explanation, in order to create a triable issue of fact.<sup>2080</sup> The plaintiff is not required to introduce independent evidence of discrimination in order to avoid summary judgment. Rather, once the plaintiff adequately challenges the credibility of the explana-

The Seventh Circuit in Jones v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., noted that with respect to the issue of pretext, the “question is not whether the employer's reasons for a decision are ‘right but whether the employer's description of its reasons is honest.” 302 F.3d 735, 744 (7th Cir. 2002) (quoting Kariotis v. Navistar Int'l Transp. Co., 131 F.3d 672, 677 (7th Cir. 1997)). However, the court also seemed to require the plaintiff to provide admissible evidence that the employer's reason was pretextual “and that the actual reason was discriminatory.” Id. at 743.

tion, it is within the province of the fact-finder at trial to look at the totality of the evidence and then determine whether such evidence creates an inference of discrimination.

32.45 Trial

Employment discrimination class actions have commonly been tried in separate stages under Rule 42(b).<sup>2081</sup> In some cases the class issues may themselves be severed, with the Phase I trials of different class issues conducted separately. The Phase I trial determines whether the defendants have discriminated against the class. Whether the merits of the individual claims of the class representatives should be tried in Phase I depends on whether proof of those claims is essential to establishing liability on the class claim. If class-wide discrimination is found, issues of relief are tried in Phase II. The 1991 CRA entitles parties in disparate treatment cases to request a jury trial. If a jury is requested, the bifurcation of class actions will be substantially more complicated. Although the class-wide issue of discrimination is readily tried to a jury in Phase I, the trial of individual damage claims to a jury in Phase II will result in potentially lengthy trials. In some cases, Title VII permits recovery of front and back pay as well as compensatory damages, including future loss, and pain and suffering. Consider whether fairness to the parties requires that both liability and relief be tried to a single jury.<sup>2082</sup>

Where the case is tried to the court, the judge should determine, in Phase I, the appropriateness of class-wide injunctive relief. Injunctive relief commonly ordered in employment discrimination cases includes the following: establishing goals to diversify the workforce; implementing mandatory hiring or promotion of specified individuals or groups of individuals; abolishing or restricting testing procedures; instituting training programs; establishing or modifying recruitment policies; or imposing an affirmative action plan in one form or another.<sup>2083</sup> Reinstatement may also be a viable remedy depending on the circumstances of the case.<sup>2084</sup> An immediate appeal of the ruling on injunctive relief is permissible under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a). Because resolution of claims for injunctive relief can be an expensive and time-consuming process, such an appeal may be desirable as a means for obtaining early appellate review of a finding of liability. If an appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a) is unavailable, consider certifying the ruling on class liability for appeal under section 1292(b). The award of attorneys' fees may be deferred until completion of proceedings for individual relief; an interim award, however, frequently is made after a grant of injunctive relief.<sup>2085</sup>

The individual damage claims of the class members should be resolved in Phase II. In some instances, a period of additional discovery may be necessary. In this second stage, the claimants—who, by proof of their membership in the class, are presumed to have been subjected to the discrimination practiced against the class<sup>2086</sup>—are permitted to present their individual claims of injury,<sup>2087</sup> subject to the right of the employer to raise defenses to those claims that were not resolved during the Phase I proceedings. Further severance may be useful at the individual remedy stage. For example, consider identifying those entitled to relief before the parties proceed with discovery and possible trial regarding the amount of damages. One approach is to require class members to complete information forms disclosing the critical facts on which their claims of individual injury is based (e.g., the job bids that they assert were discriminatorily rejected by the company). It may also be feasible to establish a claims resolution procedure administered by a magistrate judge or special master under Rule 53.<sup>2088</sup> In some cases, class-wide monetary relief may be appropriate.<sup>2089</sup> Where calculation of the pecuniary effects of the discrimination would be nothing more than guesswork based on hypothetical analyses, an individualized determination of the amount a particular class member should recover may not be possible.<sup>2090</sup> Other factors that may weigh on the appropriateness of class-wide relief include the size of the class, whether the promotion or hiring practices are ambiguous, and the length of time the challenged practices continued.<sup>2091</sup>

Club of Chi., Inc.*, 49 F.3d 1219, 1231 (7th Cir. 1995) (noting that courts should not compel reinstatement “where such debilitating frictions between employer and employee can be anticipated that the court might have to exercise continuing supervision over the employment relationship for many years”). In addition, where reinstatement would require the removal of another employee from the desired position, reinstatement may not be feasible. See Avitia, 49 F.3d at 1231–32.

When the trial of the action is bifurcated, the court should define precisely the issues to be resolved at each stage of the trial. This delineation will not eliminate all duplicative evidence. For example, anecdotal testimony may be admissible as circumstantial evidence at the first trial and, if liability is established, be offered as direct evidence on individual claims in later proceedings. The delineation, however, will enable counsel to prepare more effectively for both stages of the litigation. Issues generally are separated according to the extent they depend on the particular circumstances of individual employers; for example, defenses such as “business necessity”<sup>2092</sup> and “bonafide occupation qualification”<sup>2093</sup> usually are resolved in the first phase, while the issue of whether employees may be excused from applying for a position is typically reserved for decision in later proceedings.

Statistical evidence and expert testimony typically play a significant role in the liability phase of the trial,<sup>2094</sup> especially where the plaintiff is alleging disparate impact as opposed to intentional discrimination. The probative value of statistical evidence offered by the parties will depend on, among other things, the relevant labor pool,<sup>2095</sup> the geographic area, and other comparison pools.<sup>2096</sup> The court must ensure that such evidence meets the requirements of Daubert v. Merrel Dow Pharmaceuticals.<sup>2097</sup> The “Reference Guide on Statistics” in the Reference Manual on Scientific Evidence<sup>2098</sup> may be helpful in assessing statistical evidence in employment discrimination cases.

Judges routinely admit expert testimony regarding statistical evidence, but disagree about the need or value of expert testimony on other issues.<sup>2099</sup> It is helpful to consider in the pretrial planning stage the extent to which “anecdotal” evidence regarding the individual experiences of various employees, union stewards, supervisors, and managers will be admitted. Plaintiffs or defendants may offer to provide illustrative support for their respective positions and for the studies conducted by their experts.<sup>2100</sup> Some limits on the number of witnesses may be appropriate. To avoid unnecessary duplication, the court should require pretrial disclosure of witnesses’ names and the general subject matter of their expected testimony.<sup>2101</sup>

- .462 Affirmative Relief 596
- .463 Attorney Fees 597
- .464 Settlement Hearing 597
- .465 Implementation 597

32.461 Timing

Precertification settlements of discrimination cases brought as class actions present special problems. If the parties propose settlement of only the individual claims of the named plaintiffs and abandonment of the class claim, the judge should ensure that members of the proposed class are not prejudiced. It is appropriate to consider whether the proposed class should be notified of the proposed settlement and given an opportunity to intervene to pursue the class claims. Although the parties should be encouraged to engage in settlement negotiations early in the litigation, formal settlement negotiations in class actions ordinarily should be deferred until there is a certification ruling. In employment discrimination litigation, the parties should explore settlement possibilities as the case proceeds toward trial after the certification ruling and, if those initial efforts are unsuccessful, they should renew their discussions after the liability phase of the trial.

32.462 Affirmative Relief

Many employment discrimination cases terminate in consent decrees or in litigated judgments that order implementation of certain employment practices that may be seen as constituting affirmative action.<sup>2102</sup> Such provisions raise difficult issues concerning their effect on groups of employees that may be adversely affected by the provisions and their vulnerability to subsequent legal challenge. The Civil Rights Act establishes procedures for precluding subsequent challenge by persons (1) who, prior to entry of the order, had actual notice of the potential adverse effect and an opportunity to object, or (2) who were adequately represented.<sup>2103</sup> Parties to the decree may also seek to intervene or join persons who may claim to be adversely affected.

32.463 Attorney Fees

The court should be wary of parties' attempts to settle claims for attorney fees before a settlement of the class claims has been effected or where the defendants offer to settle class claims by payment of a lump sum on condition that attorney fees be waived. The parties should be encouraged to settle claims regarding attorney fees, but these negotiations preferably should not be commenced until the class claims have been resolved by trial or settlement.

32.464 Settlement Hearing

Hearings on approval of class action settlements in employment discrimination litigation may generate vigorous objections. Opposition often stems from misunderstandings about the terms of the proposed settlement and will be mitigated if the notice of settlement provides full information in comprehensible form. Class counsel may also schedule, in advance of the hearing, meetings with the class at which counsel and the class representatives can explain in person the terms of the agreement and can answer questions. At the outset of the hearing, before the judge hears objections from class members or others, counsel should again describe in plain language the key features of the settlement, clarify misunderstandings, and indicate why they believe it to be advantageous to the class. The judge may also explain portions of the proposed settlement that may have been confusing to class members. The judge's notice to the class of the proposed settlement typically should require that any objections or requests to be heard be filed in writing by a specified date. It is prudent, however, to permit persons who have not filed timely objections to express their views at the hearing, including representatives of employees who, while not members of the class, claim they will be adversely affected by the settlement.

32.465 Implementation

Settlements of employment discrimination cases sometimes specify the persons to whom awards will be made and the amount each person is to be paid. More frequently, however, settlements provide only the basic principles for determining these awards, contemplating further proceedings to ascertain the factual matters on which the awards depend. The settlement may, for example, establish one or more funds to be shared by persons satisfying prescribed criteria; in this situation, class counsel may be required after the settlement to preliminarily identify those class members eligible to participate in distribution, and provide those found ineligible an opportunity to present their claims to the court or a special master. The settlement may provide for a specified payment—whether a flat sum or an amount determined under a formula—to each class member meeting specified criteria. If so, the defendants may have a financial interest in challenging the claims of class members, and referral to a magistrate judge or special master may be necessary in order to conduct individual hearings. Also, a special master appointed under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53 can monitor future implementation of injunctive features of the settlement. Although Rule 53 contemplates that the appointment of a special master “shall be the exception and not the rule,”<sup>2104</sup> Title VII cases have a relaxed standard for assessing whether there are exceptional circumstances that warrant reference to a special master.<sup>2105</sup> The statute authorizes the appointment of a special master where necessary to ensure compliance with Title VII’s mandate to expedite discrimination cases, even though the circumstances might otherwise be unexceptional.<sup>2106</sup>

33.1 Introduction

Intellectual property litigation comprises three related areas of the law: patent, copyright, and trademark. Trade secret claims—seeking to protect state-law-based rights in information—can appear under supplemental jurisdiction and often are related to patent issues (e.g., inventorship, ownership, “best mode”).<sup>2107</sup> Copyright actions arise out of the unauthorized copying or exploitation of the “pattern of expression” reflected by writings, music, and art.<sup>2108</sup> Trademark cases, on the other hand, do not involve the protection per se of an invention or original work, but involve disputes over the unauthorized use of those “marks” of a product or service that are associated in the public’s mind with that product or service.<sup>2109</sup> Intellectual property litigation has grown increasingly more complicated as technology, biology, and communications have advanced, expanding claims beyond the traditional mechanical processes originally contemplated by the various statutes in each area. Motions for temporary and permanent injunctive relief, frequently filed on an expedited basis,

33.21 The Statutory Framework

Patent law derives from Article 1, section 8 of the U.S. Constitution, which authorizes Congress “[t]o promote the progress of . . . useful arts, by securing for limited times to . . . inventors the exclusive right to their . . . discoveries.” Congress exercised this authority through the 1793 Patent Act, most recently revised in 1952 and codified at 35 U.S.C. § 101.<sup>2110</sup> Patent law grants the inventor of a product or process, together with its useful improvements, exclusive right to the use and marketing of the invention, and protects the underlying concept or system as “usefully embodied.”<sup>2111</sup> Obtaining a patent can be lengthy and involved. The applicant must satisfy certain statutory conditions: the invention must be (1) useful;<sup>2112</sup> (2) novel;<sup>2113</sup> and (3) non-obvious.<sup>2114</sup> The patent document itself contains a set of claims to identify the bounds of the 2110. See Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 3 (1966) (discussing constitutional grant of authority and history of Patent Act).

2111. Section 101 of the Patent Act provides: “Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.” 35 U.S.C. § 101 (2000).

2113. 35 U.S.C. §§ 101 & 102 (2000). In order to satisfy the requirement of novelty, the invention cannot be anticipated by a product or process that is already in the public domain, or cannot have an insignificant enough difference from that existing in the public domain that it would have been obvious to a person skilled in the art of the invention.

patent owner's monopoly. These claims define the limits of the invention and serve to set the bounds for the patentee's rights. Typically they are the result of a back and forth negotiation between the patent applicant and the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office (PTO). "Because others look to the patent claims to determine what cannot be done without the patent owner's permission, the inventor must present claims that particularly point out and distinctly claim the invention."<sup>2115</sup> To further the Act's goals of promoting the "progress of the useful arts,"<sup>2116</sup> it also requires the patentee to make certain disclosures as to the best mode of practicing the invention and to include a description sufficient to enable a person of ordinary skill in the art of the invention to do so. Once the patent has been issued, the owner of the patent has the exclusive right to make, use, or sell the invention for twenty years from the date of the original patent application, at which time the patent expires and the invention becomes part of the public domain. Extensions of the patent may be granted under limited circumstances.

Patent litigation typically arises out of the patent owner's assertions of infringement of the patent resulting from unauthorized use of the patented product or process.<sup>2117</sup> Actions may also be brought by others to challenge the validity of the patent itself, either through the PTO or by way of a declaratory judgment action in federal court.<sup>2118</sup> In addition, appeals from proceedings or decisions of the Patent Office Board of Appeals, such as the denial of a patent, can be brought in the district court for the District of Columbia. Patent appeals from any of the ninety-four district courts go to the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Patent cases can and often do involve a number of separate, but related, claims and defenses. In addition to seeking injunctive relief and damages for alleged infringement, plaintiffs may assert causes of action for unfair competition, antitrust, interference with business or contractual relations, and other related claims.<sup>2119</sup> Plaintiffs almost always allege willful infringement in order to increase the damages potentially available should their claim prevail or as an avenue to collect attorneys' fees. Most defendants assert defenses of noninfringement, invalidity based on the prior art, and invalidity based on other defects.<sup>2120</sup> Defendants may plead several of the statutory bars under 35 U.S.C. §§ 102 and 103 or other sections of Title 35, as well as assert misuse of the patent or various equitable defenses. Equitable defenses include laches, unclean hands, estoppel, patent misuse, and inequitable conduct before the PTO.<sup>2121</sup> Just as plaintiffs often allege willful infringement, defendants will often raise a defense of inequitable conduct based on a patentee's failure to satisfy its obligations of full disclosure and candor to the PTO during prosecution of the patent application.<sup>2122</sup>

The construction of patent claims is pivotal to infringement actions (or those challenging the validity of a patent), because the patent claims define the patentee's rights. It is only after the claims have been properly construed by the court that the trier of fact can determine whether each element of the claim is present, either literally or under the doctrine of equivalents, in the allegedly infringing product or process.<sup>2123</sup> The doctrine of equivalents extends patent

2120. Allegations of invalidity challenge whether the invention met the statutory requirements for patentability, such as novelty or non-obviousness. Section 103(a) of Title 35 precludes issuance of a patent "if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which such subject matter pertains." Section 103(b) excepts biotechnological processes under certain circumstances from the operation of (a). Several primary considerations were identified by the Supreme Court in Graham v. John Deere Co., as relevant to a determination of nonobviousness, such as the scope and content of the prior art, as well as inquiry into "objective" considerations relating to economic success or social need. 383 U.S. 1, 17–18 (1966). 2123. See, e.g., Loral Fairchild Corp. v. Sony Corp., 181 F.3d 1313, 1321 (Fed. Cir. 1999) ("An infringement analysis entails two steps: (1) the claims must be construed; and (2) the protection to include accused products or processes that, although not infringing on the literal meaning of the claims, are not substantially different from the patented device.<sup>2124</sup> In a significant development, the Federal Circuit foreclosed all resort to the doctrine of equivalents for any amendments narrowing a patent claim during prosecution, but the Supreme Court vacated the appellate decision, rejecting the absolute bar rule adopted by the Federal Circuit. The Court, however, held the burden was on the patentee to prove that the amendment should not give rise to estoppel.<sup>2125</sup>

Construing claims may also reveal whether the claim is novel or whether it is obvious in light of the prior art, and the court applies the same claim construction for purposes of analyzing both infringement and validity. As a result, claim construction can be, and often is, outcome determinative.

Markman v. Westview Instruments<sup>2126</sup> reflected a significant development in the construction of patent claims. The Court held that the interpretation of a patent is exclusively a question of law for the court.<sup>2127</sup> Likening claim construction to the interpretation of other written documents, the Court stated “[t]he judge, from his training and discipline, is more likely to give a proper interpretation to such instruments than a jury; and he is, therefore, more likely to be right in performing such a duty, than a jury can be expected to be.”<sup>2128</sup> Removing the issue of claim construction from the jury, it said, would also contribute to certainty and uniformity in patent litigation.<sup>2129</sup> Claim construction is now subject to de novo review by the Federal Circuit, even where construction involves determination of underlying factual issues.<sup>2130</sup>

As a result, many patent cases are resolved once the claim construction is decided, either through summary judgment or settlement, with substantial savings in judicial time and resources that would otherwise be spent in a lengthy, often complicated trial.<sup>2131</sup> Claim construction also puts the court and the parties in a better position to determine what issues remain in the case in light of the court’s construction and to tailor the remaining course of the litigation accordingly.

There is no consistent approach among the courts as to the procedural boundaries of claim-construction proceedings. Markman did not establish when or how a patent was to be construed, only that it must be done prior to submission of the case to the jury.<sup>2132</sup> At least one jurisdiction has adopted a special set of “Patent Local Rules” that dictate a prescribed series of disclosures by each party that help to define the claim-construction issues in dispute and lead directly to briefing on claim construction and a Markman hearing.<sup>2133</sup> Accordingly, decisions on how to structure claim-construction proceedings involve several interrelated questions, the answers to which can affect subsequent case-management strategies:

- Is a Markman hearing necessary? If so, what claim terms need to be construed?
- How should the hearing be structured, and what submissions should be considered?
- When should the hearing be held?
- What is the procedural vehicle through which claim-construction issues are raised?
- What happens if the claim construction is reversed on appeal?

33.221 Holding a Markman Hearing

There is no requirement that the court conduct a formal hearing to interpret the patent. Whether a hearing is warranted often turns on the degree of ambiguity in the patent claim. Where the language of the patent claim is clear the judge may be able to construe the claim based solely on the paper record.<sup>2134</sup> If the language is truly unambiguous, the judge should not resort to the use of extrinsic evidence or testimony.<sup>2135</sup> The degree of ambiguity notwithstanding, the court has the discretion to consider both intrinsic and extrinsic evidence, including expert testimony, in interpreting the claims.<sup>2136</sup> As a consequence, some courts routinely conduct Markman hearings before construing the claim.<sup>2137</sup> Markman hearings offer the court the opportunity to question any expert or other witnesses offered (such as the inventor) on issues related to the patent process and the technology. This enables the judge to gain a better understanding of the claims as a whole and the meaning of the patent's terms from the perspective of a person "skilled in the relevant art." The Federal Circuit has cautioned, however, that such extrinsic evidence may not be used for any purpose other than to assist the court in understanding the science and what "one skilled in the art" would understand. at the hearing on claim construction and again at trial, thereby increasing litigation costs. The court should determine, based on the disputed claim terms and the complexity of technology, whether a hearing is appropriate and what type of evidence will aid the court in construing the claims.

In constructing procedural devices, two practical realities are likely to arise at trial. First, no matter how well considered the court’s claim-construction ruling, the parties are likely to “construe the construction”—i.e., disputes will arise regarding the exact meaning of the court’s ruling. Second, the meaning of a term previously thought to be undisputed may suddenly become disputed at trial, perhaps because the term’s meaning was not considered to be significant at the time of the Markman hearing. This typically occurs when both parties initially agree that a term should be given its “usual meaning,” and the parties then discover at trial that they disagree on the usual meaning of a previously insignificant claim term.

33.222 Structuring the Markman Hearing

Claim construction hearings have “run the gamut from mid-trial sidebar conferences that undergird relevance rulings . . . to virtual mini-trials extending over several days and generating extensive evidentiary records.”<sup>2138</sup> The length of the hearing, the evidence permitted, and the scope of the hearing are all within the discretion of the trial court. Prior to holding a hearing, however, consider requiring the parties to submit, in addition to any briefs, statements setting forth each side’s proposed construction of the claims in dispute. Courts have required parties to exchange proposed claim-construction statements that include (1) any contentions regarding specialized meaning to be given claim language; (2) a description of each element of the claim together with supporting specifications or material in the prosecution history; and (3) extrinsic evidence that supports the parties’ proposed construction.

Parties also have been required to meet and confer in an effort to narrow the issues and to prepare and submit a joint statement<sup>2139</sup> that identifies (1) the construction of the claims and terms to which the parties agree; (2) each side's construction of disputed claims and terms; (3) each side's rebuttal to the proposed construction submitted by the opposing party; and (4) each proposed witness at the claim-construction hearing together with a description of the witness's testimony.<sup>2140</sup> These procedures apprise the judge of those portions of the patent actually in dispute, helping the judge understand the relevant technology and determine the need, if any, for tutorials or the assistance of court-appointed experts prior to the hearing.<sup>2141</sup> These procedures also force the parties to state definitively their competing positions, thereby avoiding the “shifting sands”<sup>2142</sup> approach to claim construction.

33.223 Timing the Markman Hearing

Timing is one of the more problematic issues. Claim construction involves interpreting the words of the claim from the perspective of one skilled in the art, construed in light of the patent documents and the prosecution history.<sup>2143</sup> Theoretically, claim construction can occur at virtually any point in the case: prior to discovery, pursuant to motions for summary judgment,<sup>2144</sup> or following the close of evidence at trial.<sup>2145</sup> Nevertheless, the timing of the Markman hearing can significantly affect the pretrial proceedings. Several courts and commentators agree that early Markman hearings are preferable to delaying claim construction until after the evidence has been heard at trial.<sup>2146</sup> Although ciency by presenting to the Court clearly delineated disputes of claim construction and clearly defined issues of infringement and validity prior to any Markman hearing or trial”).

construing the claim after trial will permit the judge to hear all of the evidence in the case, and thereby better understand the background of the patent and any prior art,<sup>2147</sup> there are several disadvantages:

- causing delay in submitting the case to the jury while the claim is being construed, thereby making the evidence less fresh;<sup>2148</sup>
- requiring the jury to disregard evidence and testimony relating to alternative claim interpretations;<sup>2149</sup> and
- forcing the parties to try the case presenting alternative claim constructions—parties will not likely base their case on a claim construction that has yet to be determined.

Holding Markman hearings prior to trial allows the court and the parties to narrow the issues and, in some cases, provides an opportunity to focus discovery.<sup>2150</sup> Early claim construction may also facilitate settlement and may permit resolution, either in whole or in part, through dispositive motions, thereby reducing litigation costs.<sup>2151</sup> More importantly, once aware of the interpretation being given to the patent, the parties can plan their cases accordingly,

Mass. 2001) (noting Markman hearings “now required as a practical matter in virtually every patent case before serious settlement negotiations take place”). However, some commentators argue that Markman hampers settlement and prolongs the litigation because of the large percentage of reversals on appeal, leading to intransigence by defendants losing on the issue of claim construction and forcing trial in order to have another opportunity at the appellate level. Lee & Krug, supra note 2131, at 69–70.

eliminating the need to propose alternative claim constructions to the jury and reducing the expense and complexity of the trial.<sup>2152</sup>

A number of scheduling options are available within the various pretrial phases, such as holding the hearing before discovery, after expert discovery but before concluding fact discovery, or after all discovery. There are advantages and disadvantages to each. In most cases, the optimal time for a Markman hearing will depend on the court's assessment of which approach will best utilize judicial resources in the specific case before it.<sup>2153</sup> Construing claims at the close of discovery is advisable if the parties have all relevant and necessary information to articulate the issues or terms in dispute; parties must also be able to provide the court with a full factual background within which to construe the claim.<sup>2154</sup> In addition, should the case settle during discovery or as a result of information developed during discovery, a potentially lengthy and expensive hearing can be avoided.

One option is to permit the parties initially to conduct limited discovery, including that of experts, only on issues relevant to claim construction. The burden would be on the parties to conduct sufficient discovery to reveal all relevant information not considered during the prosecution of the patent that may affect the interpretation of the claim, as well as information bearing on which claims are important to resolution of the dispute. The parties would also have the burden of assisting the judge in understanding the technology and technical language, through the use of tutorials or by consenting to a special master or neutral expert. Once the claims have been construed, general discovery can proceed on the remaining issues, including questions related to validity, infringement, and other matters.

It is often difficult, however, to attempt to separate the discovery needed for claim construction from fact discovery in general, and attempts to do so can increase the number of discovery disputes. It may be advisable, therefore, for the court to focus on the timing of the Markman hearing and allow the Austrian & Mohler, supra note 2146, at 228 (“Pretrial discovery, the selection of experts, and the content of their testimony on the issues of validity and infringement will depend almost entirely on claim construction.”). However, the claim construction may be subject to modification following trial and prior to the submission to the jury, where the court concludes after listening to all the evidence presented, and considering the claim in context, that its previous construction was erroneous. parties to proceed with fact and expert discovery in accordance with the set schedule, so long as there is sufficient time for necessary discovery to be completed prior to the Markman hearing.

33.224 Requesting a Markman Hearing

Inextricably tied to the question of when a Markman hearing should be held is the court's determination of how counsel should raise the issue procedurally. Some judges have incorporated dates for hearings in early scheduling orders or resorted to the promulgated local rules to address claim construction issues, including timing.<sup>2155</sup> Others have addressed claim construction upon motion by the parties, such as a motion for claim construction or for a Markman hearing, or alternatively within the context of summary-judgment motions.<sup>2156</sup> The advantage of claim construction in the context of a motion for summary judgment is that only those elements of the claims that are truly in dispute will be presented for construction. Claim construction can also arise in the context of motions for injunctive relief, although the patent need not be definitively construed in such instances.<sup>2157</sup> When construing claims in conjunction with dispositive motions, however, it is important to separate the question of claim construction from other legal issues in the case. One judge noted the need not to conflate “the legal explication required by Markman

Those courts favoring early Markman hearings generally have held them at the close of discovery or used summary judgment as the procedural vehicle through which the claims were construed. But see *Control Res., Inc. v. with the fact finding that the Seventh Amendment ultimately reserves for the American jury.”<sup>2158</sup>

33.225 Appeal

Markman implicates case management beyond when or how to conduct a hearing. One significant implication stems from the de novo standard of review applied on appeal to the court’s interpretation of the patent claim.<sup>2159</sup> The Federal Circuit has reversed a significant number of claim constructions since Markman.<sup>2160</sup> The parties can be assured of the certainty of the claim interpretation only after proceeding from the Markman hearing through discovery, trial, and posttrial motions to the Federal Circuit.<sup>2161</sup> Reversal of the district court’s claim construction may result in a new trial, efforts to reopen discovery and revise expert reports, and efforts by the parties to change their theory of infringement.<sup>2162</sup> The impact on judicial time and resources can be substantial. Although interlocutory appeal of the court’s claim construction is theoretically available, the Federal Circuit has been disinclined to grant such petitions. Another alternative is to submit claim construction issues to the jury through special verdicts or interrogatories for an “advisory determination,” which the court can either accept or reject.<sup>2163</sup> As discussed in section 33.223, however, delaying claim construction until after the trial can carry several disadvantages.

33.23 Defining the Issues in Patent Litigation

Patent cases often involve only one party, or a few interrelated parties, on each side of a case, but can involve more than one patent or claim and multiple allegedly infringing products, and can also include antitrust claims and consumer class actions. The technical nature of the subject matter further complicates the action. Litigation over a patent or a series of related patents sometimes proliferates and leads to multiform federal litigation requiring coordination through MDL proceedings, the imposition of stays on redundant actions, or informal cooperative arrangements. Discovery delays can be lengthy without court management. Some of the obstacles in managing patent litigation can be avoided through consideration of the following issues before or at the initial pretrial conference:

- Is there any related litigation pending in other federal courts that would warrant transfer, dismissal, consolidation, or a stay of proceedings? In many cases, the owner of the patent has filed infringement suits against other defendants in other jurisdictions, or is defending challenges to the validity of the patent elsewhere. Piecemeal litigation in patent cases generally is disfavored.<sup>2164</sup> The initial case-management order should direct counsel to identify other cases relating to infringement of the patent, their status, and the judges to whom they are assigned. Consolidation often is warranted where more than one action involving or related to the patent is pending before the same court.<sup>2165</sup> The judge should review the cases to determine common questions of law,<sup>2166</sup> and also to ascertain whether to exercise the court's discretion to transfer pursuant to section 1404(a)<sup>2167</sup> or whether Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation transfer is appropriate under 28 U.S.C. § 1407 for centralized pretrial proceedings. The MDL panel may decline to order such transfers, however, on the ground that coordination can be achieved through the cooperative efforts of the affected courts and counsel. Often the real parties in interest and the attorneys are the same, or at least related, in all of the cases.

The court also has the discretion to dismiss the case in favor of litigation pending in another jurisdiction “for reasons of wise judicial

Supp. 6, 7 (D.D.C. 1989) (“Piecemeal litigation in the complex and technical area of patent and trademark law is especially undesirable. Rather, all of the parties’ related patent and trademark infringement claims should be decided in the same court.”).

administration.”<sup>2168</sup> The general rule is that the first-filed suit will proceed while other pending litigation is dismissed or stayed.<sup>2169</sup> In some instances (such as where the identity of the parties is not the same or jurisdiction is unavailable over all necessary parties), the priority rule is not followed and other considerations take precedence.<sup>2170</sup> Related proceedings also may be pending before the Patent and Trademark Office, and a stay may be warranted while those proceedings are resolved.<sup>2171</sup>

- Have there been any past decisions by other courts involving the same patent? A final decision holding the patent invalid will preclude further efforts to enforce the patent against others, provided the patentee “had a full and fair chance to litigate” its validity<sup>2172</sup> and regardless of any earlier decisions upholding the patent.<sup>2173</sup> In such circumstances, however, the patentee must have the opportunity to demonstrate under the factors outlined in Blonder-Tongue Laboratories v. University of Illinois Foundation<sup>2174</sup> that “in justice and equity”<sup>2175</sup> it should not be 2171. Reexamination and reissues are proceedings where stays may be sought pending resolution of the PTO proceedings.

2172. Blonder-Tongue Labs., Inc. v. Univ. of Ill. Found., 402 U.S. 313, 333 (1971).

2173. Miss. Chem. Corp. v. Swift Agric. Chems. Corp., 717 F.2d 1374, 1378 (Fed. Cir. 1983). Although a finding of validity does not preclude subsequent challenges to the patent, it is entitled to some weight. The rationale behind the rule that a single finding of invalidity is fatal to the patent but a finding upholding the patent does not rule the patent valid as against all others, is that although one challenger may be unable to introduce clear evidence of invalidity, another challenger may be able to do so.

2174. 402 U.S. 313, 334 (1971).

collaterally estopped by the adverse decision. On the other hand, a decision upholding the validity of the patent will not bar a new defendant from attacking the patent, and such a decision is not necessarily binding even on the same court under the doctrine of stare decisis.

- Are there multiple patents or claims at issue in the case, and has the plaintiff identified all of the defendant's allegedly infringing products or processes? Cases involving multiple patents, each with multiple claims, can be a source of confusion, resulting in unduly lengthened and expanded pretrial and trial proceedings. Consider encouraging the parties to agree to proceed on a limited number of representative claims and disputed models, so that findings regarding infringement on the representative claims will apply to all claims.<sup>2176</sup> This may simplify the action and reduce jury confusion.
- Is venue appropriate? Section 1400(b) of Title 28 of the U.S. Code governs venue determinations in patent infringement cases. A corporate defendant “is said to reside in any judicial district in which it is subject to personal jurisdiction at the time the action is commenced.”<sup>2177</sup> Thus, in many cases the determination of proper venue and personal jurisdiction coalesce into a single inquiry.<sup>2178</sup> In cases involving multiple defendants, venue must be proper as to each defendant.<sup>2179</sup> Venue relating to other causes of action involving a patent are subject to the general venue statute.<sup>2180</sup>
- Is the case subject to arbitration? Section 294 of Title 35 provides for voluntary arbitration in patent cases. Agreements to arbitrate must be in writing and usually will be found in license agreements or technology transfer agreements. Issues that can arise include choice of law provisions, whether any arbitration award will be res judicata as to issues that were or could have been raised in arbitration, and whether collateral estoppel will apply (although section 294 may limit any preclusive effect against nonparties).

- Is there a need for judicial education? The judge often will need some general explanation of the substance and terminology of the science or technology addressed by the patent before dealing with the issues in the case or developing a plan for discovery and trial. Some judges ask counsel to provide a concise and objective overview—orally, in writing, or on tape or CD—of these technical matters, including a definition of key terms and concepts, at or before the initial conference. To encourage candor, consider directing that these statements not bind the parties and not be used later in the proceedings. Increasingly, judges are seeking additional pretrial briefing on relevant technological or scientific issues.<sup>2181</sup> Although experts will address those issues in their trial testimony, the court may find it more helpful to learn the fundamentals—the vocabulary and general intellectual framework of the subject matter—in a setting with less immediate time constraints in order to deal more intelligently with issues during the trial. Requesting that tutorials be videotaped will allow the court to review the technology behind the patent as often as necessary over the course of the litigation.
- Is referral to a magistrate judge, special master, or court-appointed expert warranted? Use of a magistrate judge or court-appointed expert may be warranted in handling discovery in patent cases or in assisting the judge in understanding the technology involved.<sup>2182</sup> Courts also have appointed special masters, with technological expertise in the area, to provide a report and recommendation on technical issues or claim construction in patent cases.<sup>2183</sup>

- Has the plaintiff alleged willful infringement or is the defendant claiming inequitable conduct? Whether the defendant engaged in willful infringement is an issue for the jury, while issues relating to the plaintiff's inequitable conduct usually require a separate bench trial. Assertions of the defendant's willful infringement or of the patentee's inequitable conduct or fraud on the PTO<sup>2184</sup> may further complicate discovery and trial by opening the door to discovery into matters otherwise protected by attorney–client privilege. Where these assertions have substance, discovery into matters normally protected by attorney–client privilege may be warranted and can undermine the effectiveness of litigation counsel.<sup>2185</sup> Relevant issues include whether litigation counsel was involved in the prosecution of the patent before the PTO or provided pre-litigation advice regarding validity in cases where the patentee is alleged to have acted with unclean hands. A willful infringement claim may require inquiry into whether the defendant continued to market a product after notice of a patent, and whether the defendant received advice of counsel.<sup>2186</sup>
- Should the case be bifurcated? Consider whether to bifurcate, or even trifurcate, issues for purposes of discovery and for trial. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 42(b) states “[t]he Court, in furtherance of convenience or to avoid prejudice, or when separate trials will be conducive to expedition and economy, may order a separate trial . . . of any issue . . . .” Bifurcation is appropriate where determination of one issue could wholly eliminate the need to try another complicated or time-consuming issue, where used to negate prejudice to a party, and where the need to examine the same witnesses in both phases of the sepa-court); Xilinx, 1997 WL 581426, at *1 (appointing independent technical advisor to assist in understanding the relevant technology).

2184. An assertion that the patentee acted with unclean hands, which is typically based on an alleged misrepresentation or failure to disclose pertinent prior art or test results, merits attention by the court. Fraud may be asserted not only as a defense to the infringement claim, but also as part of the foundation for an antitrust counterclaim. See Walker Process Equip., Inc. v. Food Mach. & Chem. Corp., 382 U.S. 172, 173–74 (1965).

rated trial would be minimal.<sup>2187</sup> The most common type of bifurcation in patent cases involves separating issues of liability from damages. In many patent cases, severing damages from other issues will simplify the fact-finder's task.<sup>2188</sup> Bifurcation of the damages issue may be particularly appropriate where multiple patents are involved.<sup>2189</sup> Issues of willfulness<sup>2190</sup> or equitable defenses<sup>2191</sup> are potential candidates for bifurcation,<sup>2192</sup> and separating antitrust counterclaims also is common. Deferral of claims asserting unfair competition or antitrust until resolution of the patent issues frequently results in the claims' voluntary dismissal or settlement. In determining whether bifurcation is appropriate, the judge in THK America Inc. v. NSK Co.<sup>2193</sup> cited these 2188. See, e.g., Pioneer Hi-Bred Int'l, Inc. v. Asgrow Seed Co., No. CIV. 4-98-CV-90577, 90578, 2000 WL 33363188, at *3 (S.D. La. May 5, 2000) (concluding the bifurcation of patent and nonpatent issues was not appropriate "due to the complexity of, and inter-relationship among, the issues," but finding bifurcation of liability and damages warranted). Trifurcation of the statutory issues, equitable defenses, and damages may be advisable. But see T.S. Ellis, Judicial Management of Patent Litigation in the United States: Expected Procedures and Their Effects, 9 Fed. Cir. B.J. 541, 545 n.11 (2000) (commenting that "[i]n my experience, more often than not, bifurcating the liability and damages issues in the typical patent case does not result in the speedy and efficient resolution of the entire case").

factors as relevant: “(1) convenience; (2) prejudice; (3) expedi-tion; (4) economy; (5) whether the issues sought to be tried separately are significantly different; (6) whether they are triable by jury or the court; (7) whether discovery has been directed to a single trial of all issues; (8) whether the evidence required for each issue is substantially differ-ent; (9) whether one party would gain some unfair advantage from separate trials; (10) whether a single trial of all issues would create the potential for jury bias or confusion; and (11) whether bifurcation would enhance or reduce the possibility of a pretrial settlement.”<sup>2194</sup>

Complaints in patent infringement usually consist of broadly drafted, gen-eralized claims of infringement sufficient to satisfy Federal Rule of Civil Proce-dure 8, but are otherwise of little assistance to the court or the parties. Rule 9(b) governs allegations of fraud and may afford a basis for early dismissal of inadequately pleaded fraud claims. Although an adequate basis for these alle-gations may exist for purposes of Rule 11, many may prove to be without merit. In addition, answers tend to be pleaded generally—for example, by al-leging noninfringement and invalidity without specifying more than the appli-cable statutory section. In many cases, defendants probably cannot provide an answer in substantial detail if the lawsuit is the first notice regarding alleged infringement of the patent. As a preliminary matter, the defendant will need to order the file history for the patent from the PTO, which often takes several weeks even if a request is made to expedite handling. The defendant also will need to search for prior art, which, depending on the technology, may take months of diligent searching.

Of course, the nature of a patent infringement claim or invalidity defense encourages strategies to delay producing information through discovery or otherwise until the opposing side has disclosed the basis for its claims, contrib-uting to lengthy delays and high costs. One approach is to require the parties to submit detailed statements of their claims and defenses early in the litigation, either at the outset of the case, as part of a discovery scheduling order, or, where the accused product is unavailable or otherwise not subject to examina-tion, following limited discovery.<sup>2195</sup> The plaintiff’s statement is generally ex-pected to contain a detailed explanation of the infringement contentions, per-haps through an element-by-element claims chart for each infringement claim asserted. The claims chart’s purpose is to specify how each element of a claim is present in or “reads on” the allegedly infringing product or process. The de-defendant similarly would be required to respond in a corresponding level of detail, including disclosures of all prior art relied upon to support challenges to the patent's validity.<sup>2196</sup> Because claims of infringement and validity are closely intertwined, the parties may seek to avoid disclosures, or they may provide disclosures that lack sufficient detail. "First, the plaintiff does not want to be pinned down to a claim construction until it knows what prior art exists . . . [T]he defendant does not want to disclose the prior art it knows of, or its contentions as to how this art invalidates the claims asserted against it, until after plaintiff announces its claim construction."<sup>2197</sup> Accordingly, the court should scrutinize actions by the parties that are designed to delay disclosures (such as requests for additional discovery); the court should also balance the competing interests in setting disclosure dates.

With judicial encouragement, counsel may be willing to drop marginal claims or defenses at the time of the initial conference, or at least agree that discovery on those issues should be deferred. Consider at the initial pretrial conference whether multi-staged discovery is appropriate, and then set a discovery schedule that affords sufficient time at each stage to permit the parties to obtain factual support for their claims. Depending on how discovery is structured, it may be helpful to set a date at the initial conference by which time the defendant will be required to state those defenses it expects to litigate. The court might also require disclosure of all prior art that the defendant will use to challenge the patent. Under 35 U.S.C. § 282, disclosure of prior art must be made "at least thirty days before the trial." In order to permit adequate time for trial preparation, however, generally it is wise to fix an earlier deadline.

33.24 Injunctive Relief

Intellectual property cases often are candidates for requests for injunctive relief.<sup>2198</sup> Preliminary injunctive relief in patent cases protects the value of the statutory right to exclude, which cannot always be compensated through money damages.<sup>2199</sup> Under the traditional test, followed by the Federal Circuit,<sup>2200</sup> a plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must demonstrate that 2198. 35 U.S.C. § 283 (2000) authorizes injunctive relief in patent cases.

(1) it will suffer irreparable injury absent the injunction, (2) its injury will outweigh the harm imposed upon the defendant if the injunction is granted,<sup>2201</sup> (3) it is likely to succeed on the merits of the case,<sup>2202</sup> and (4) issuance of an injunction will not adversely affect the public interest. This four-factor test applies to temporary restraining orders as well. To carry its burden of proving a likelihood of success at trial, the plaintiff must show that the patent is valid<sup>2203</sup> and that it has been infringed. A showing of reasonable likelihood of success and irreparable injury are crucial factors supporting issuance of an injunction in patent cases. Failure to meet either will result in an injunction's denial regardless of findings on the remaining factors,<sup>2204</sup> although the court must consider all four factors in granting an injunction.<sup>2205</sup> The Federal Circuit has held, however, that where the defendant raises a “substantial question of invalidity,” the plaintiff has not met its burden on the validity of the patent and a preliminary injunction will be denied.<sup>2206</sup> In addition, although irreparable injury will be presumed upon “a strong showing of likelihood of success on the merits coupled with continuing infringement,”<sup>2207</sup> this presumption can be rebutted

2201. See, e.g., A&M Records, Inc. v. Napster, Inc., 239 F.3d 1004, 1025 (9th Cir. 2001) (“Any destruction of Napster, Inc. by a preliminary injunction is speculative compared to the statistical evidence of massive, unauthorized downloading and uploading of plaintiffs’ copyrighted works—as many as 10,000 files per second by defendant’s own admission.”).

2202. Schwartz, supra note 2115, at 173 (“[A] patent owner will show a reasonable likelihood of success on the merits if, in light of the presumptions and burdens that apply during trial, the patent owner clearly shows that (a) it will likely prove infringement and (b) its claim will likely withstand a challenge to the validity and enforceability of the patent . . .”). As part of their burden of showing a likelihood of success on the merits, plaintiffs must show the likelihood that they will prevail against any affirmative defenses. See, e.g., Dr. Seuss Enters. v. Penguin Books USA, 924 F. Supp. 1559, 1562 (S.D. Cal. 1996) (“The plaintiff’s burden of showing a likelihood of success on the merits includes the burden of showing a likelihood that it would prevail against any affirmative defenses raised by the defendant.” (copyright/trademark case)), aff’d, 109 F.3d 1394 (9th Cir. 1997).

Such a case might be supported, for example, by showing that the patent in suit had successfully withstood previous validity challenges in other proceedings. Further support for such a clear case might come from a long period of industry acquiescence in the patent’s validity.”) (citation omitted).

by the defendant.<sup>2208</sup> For example, a showing that the plaintiff delayed in seeking an injunction is evidence that the plaintiff has not suffered irreparable harm.<sup>2209</sup>

Markman hearings are sometimes held in conjunction with preliminary injunction motions, because a determination of reasonable likelihood of success can require construction of the patent in order to assess whether the patent has been infringed by the defendant's product or process. Claims construction conducted at injunction proceedings is not always definitive, however, and the court might change its interpretation of the patent as the litigation progresses. In addition, the parties sometimes request expedited discovery prior to a hearing on injunctive relief.<sup>2210</sup> In some instances, granting a motion for expedited discovery may be appropriate: more developed records prior to the preliminary injunction hearing will better enable the court to judge the parties' interests and respective chances for success on the merits. In such cases, discovery should be limited in scope to information needed to respond to the motion for injunctive relief.<sup>2211</sup> The parties should be encouraged to reach an agreement prior to a hearing. To this end, consider requiring the parties to meet and confer to determine whether resolution of the issues raised in the motion for injunctive relief is feasible through a stipulated order, eliminating the need for court intervention.

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65(c) requires successful plaintiffs to post a bond for damages incurred by the enjoined party in the event that the injunction was wrongfully issued. The enjoined party also may request a stay of the

In such instances, the court may conclude that although a stay is not warranted, some additional time is appropriate before the injunction becomes effective.<sup>2212</sup>

33.25 Discovery

Discovery sometimes can be conducted according to a prescribed sequence of issues, particularly if severed trials are contemplated under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 42(b).<sup>2213</sup> At the pretrial conference, however, it is helpful to discuss with the parties whether discovery on priority issues will involve examination of the same witnesses and exhibits as discovery on the subsequent issues, causing unnecessary expense and delay,<sup>2214</sup> and whether deferral of discovery regarding damages may complicate efforts to evaluate the litigation for settlement.

Limitations on the scope of discovery may be appropriate where the court already has construed the patent claims. Regardless of the timing of the claim construction, however, the parties should be prohibited from offering alternative constructions throughout the litigation and thereby expanding the scope of discovery. Where the court has determined that a Markman hearing will be held post-discovery, one option is to offer a window of additional and narrowly prescribed discovery post-claim construction, to take into account the judge's interpretation and minimize prejudice to one of the parties arising out of an unexpected interpretation of the claim.

The large number of motions to compel in patent cases may result from legitimate differences of opinion between the parties as to the interpretation to be given terms of art used in discovery requests, thereby causing disputes over whether information falls within the scope of the request. In other instances, the responding party may be using differing definitions to avoid producing information that may be harmful to its case. Instructing the parties that all terms of art used in discovery are to be read broadly, inclusive of all applicable definitions, will minimize motions to compel and accompanying requests for sanctions.<sup>2215</sup>

Allegations of willful infringement present thorny discovery disputes. It is best to ascertain at the initial pretrial conference the extent to which discovery will be sought of matters that may be protected by the attorney–client privilege or work-product doctrine and, if so, whether disclosure will be resisted. Reliance on opinions of counsel is the only prudent course for a defendant to follow in litigation. However, once the defendant asserts reliance on the advice of counsel, the defendant voluntarily waives privilege over the opinion itself, and straightforward application of the general case law regarding voluntary privilege waivers can lead to unanticipated results.<sup>2216</sup> For example, application of “subject–matter waiver” would require the defendant to disclose all privileged communications on the subject of the opinion—typically infringement and validity. On its face, this approach would require disclosure of all communications with counsel, including trial counsel, regarding infringement and validity.<sup>2217</sup> If treated also as a traditional waiver of work-product immunity, the waiver would result in disclosure of all of trial counsel’s internal communication and trial preparation materials. Recognizing this dilemma, courts have tended toward practical solutions that balance a plaintiff’s reasonable inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the opinion of counsel and the defendant’s right to mount a defense and maintain confidential communications with trial counsel.<sup>2218</sup> Consider whether the privilege has been waived and the need to control the scope of discovery from counsel or clients to ensure that the privilege is respected. Particularly in nonjury cases, the trial judge may conclude that it is feasible to call on another judicial officer to conduct any in camera inspections necessary to determine whether sufficient evidence of fraud exists for the privilege to be waived. Use of a special master may be warranted if such 2215. See Amend, supra note 2176, at 25–26.

2216. In Novartis Pharm. Corp. v. Eon Labs. Mfg., Inc., 206 F.R.D. 396, 399 (D. Del. 2002), Judge Farnan held that the alleged infringer waived privilege to withhold from discovery any documents or material related to counsel’s noninfringement opinion, including work product.

2218. For example, in situations where the opinion of counsel was prepared by a lawyer at a firm different from trial counsel, courts will limit the waiver to communications with “opinion counsel.” Where the opinion of counsel was prepared by the same firm as the firm serving as trial counsel, but by a lawyer not actively involved in the litigation or a part of the litigation team, courts again often limit disclosure to communications between the opinion writer and the client representative who received the opinion. However, the thorniest issues arise where the opinion writer is an active part of the trial team, although this circumstance is becoming exceedingly rare, in part because of the potential for the opinion writer to be a witness at trial.

It is helpful to inquire early about use of out-of-court “tests” of allegedly infringing products (including software in copyright actions) or in-court demonstrations. If tests are contemplated, protocols should be established at an early conference with respect to whom may attend or observe, criteria to permit use of the results in court, and when to disclose the results. It is also advisable to set a deadline for pretrial disclosure of any such tests or proposed demonstrations and indicate when objections to the admissibility of such evidence will be considered.

Discovery delays may be eliminated by entering protective orders prior to initial discovery being served. Some courts have incorporated standing protective orders as part of the initial pretrial conference;<sup>2219</sup> however, the particular patent case may dictate a more tailored order. The parties may prefer restricting disclosure of particularly sensitive information—such as production processes and customer information—to counsel and their experts. This procedure is acceptable, but counsel should be cautioned to exercise restraint in designating materials as confidential.<sup>2220</sup> Issues may also arise where a party’s patent counsel or in-house counsel is also counsel of record in the litigation. In such cases, consider “the nature and extent of the risk involved and the efficacy of protective measures that have been or can be imposed”<sup>2221</sup> in determining whether to permit access to the opposing party’s confidential information. Relevant considerations might include whether counsel is in-house or at an outside firm, as well as his or her activities, including any involvement in matters relating to product design or related competitive decisions.<sup>2222</sup> To the extent access is permitted, also consider including a provision in the protective order that restricts any participation in the prosecution of patent applications in the technical area at issue for a designated period of time.<sup>2223</sup> It is best to address early the identification of experts who will review confidential materials.

2219. See infra section 40.25 for a sample order regarding preservation of documents, data, and tangible things.

2220. See also In re Omerprazole Patent Litig., No. MDL 1291, 2001 WL 394843, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 18, 2001) (protective order would contain safeguards that avoided inadvertent disclosure of “attorney confidential” information).

2223. Id. § 11.03[4].

In some cases the parties may prefer to have review of such information done by a court-appointed expert or special master, rather than by someone associated with their adversary. For further protection, filing of sensitive documents may either be waived under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 5(d) or be made under seal. Finally, consider circumstances under which a party may seek modification of the order and whether, and to what extent, any protective orders should provide for the protection of confidential information that may be sought from third parties.

33.26 Experts

Expert witnesses in patent cases typically fall into one of two categories: (1) technical and damage experts; and (2) patent law experts. Technical experts are those whose special training or experience in the applicable technology or science qualifies them to express opinions bearing on

- the validity or invalidity of the patent, such as the scope and content of the prior art, the level of skill in the art, and the obviousness or nonobviousness of the claimed invention in view of the prior art; and
- whether with respect to the alleged infringement the elements of the claim are met by the accused product or process.

Technical experts include both experts retained by the parties, as well as experts appointed by the court pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 706. Damages experts usually have training in accounting, patent licensing, and economics, and will testify about such issues as reasonable royalty, lost profits, price erosion, convoyed sales, and the proper definition of the relevant market. Patent law experts—patent attorneys, patent law professors, or former officials of the PTO—are frequently offered to express background in the form of opinions on the patent process, the duty of disclosure to the PTO, and whether or not that duty has been violated by particular acts or omissions during the prosecution of the patent. The use of patent law experts is controversial and their acceptance varies widely from court to court.<sup>2224</sup>

<sup>2224</sup> See, e.g., Endress + Hauser, Inc. v. Hawk Measurement Sys. Pty. Ltd., 122 F.3d 1040, 1042 (Fed. Cir. 1997) (stating “this court has on numerous occasions noted the impropriety of patent lawyers testifying as expert witnesses and giving their opinion regarding the proper interpretation of a claim as a matter of law, the ultimate issue for the court to decide”); Talarico v. Marathon Shoe Co., 182 F. Supp. 2d 102, 113–14 (D. Me. 2002) (patent attorney’s testimony helped to articulate defendant’s defense); Neupak, Inc. v. Ideal Mfg., Sales Corp., 168 F. Supp. 2d 1012, 1016–17 (D. Minn. 2001) (patent attorney allowed to testify); Biomedical Polymers, Inc. v. Evergreen Indus., Inc., 976 F. Supp. 98, 100 (D. Mass. 1997) (noting court has discretion whether it will adopt expert legal opinion as own, use it for guidance, or ignore or exclude it).

The Supreme Court’s decision in Markman has affected the role of expert testimony in patent cases. Although expert testimony remains admissible in a Markman hearing—to aid the court’s understanding of the technology involved where the patent claim is ambiguous, or to explain the meaning of terms of art within the relevant field as one skilled in the art would understand them—the Court cautioned that the trial court is “not, however, obliged to blindly follow such testimony.”<sup>2225</sup> Accordingly, consider the purpose for which expert testimony is being offered and whether, in light of the claim language, such testimony is necessary or would aid in understanding the technology or terms of art as needed to construe the claim.<sup>2226</sup>

Setting rules to govern the scope of expert discovery is advisable. Expert reports in patent cases are often extremely complex, and a lengthy report typically will require significant back and forth between expert and counsel. Consider what types of expert material should be produced—for example, technical documents that the expert relied on in forming opinions—and whether draft reports should be excluded from production. At trial, expert testimony should be monitored to ensure that testimony regarding construction or interpretation of the claim is not offered. Expert testimony remains appropriate, however, to explain the technology to the jury. Expert testimony may be appropriate to assist the jury in assessing the accused product or process in light of the claim construction by the court, so that the jury can determine whether the accused product has infringed the claims, either literally or under the doctrine of equivalents. Examples of other areas where expert testimony may prove helpful include the patent examination process and the qualifications of a person of ordinary skill in the art.<sup>2227</sup> Testimony by patent law experts should be avoided where the testimony seeks to give legal opinions or attempts to address “reasonable reliance” by the client on advice of counsel.<sup>2228</sup>

The court may also conclude that an independent expert should be appointed under Federal Rule of Evidence 706, particularly if the subject matter is complex and the differences between the experts offered by the parties are not attributable to factual disputes that a trial can readily resolve.<sup>2229</sup> For example, such an expert may be helpful if the parties' facilities or processes need to be inspected and they are reluctant to permit access by the opposing experts. A number of issues, including the timing, selection, discovery, and compensation of court-appointed experts, their specific duties, and the handling of expert communications, all require consideration by the court. Limiting the use of court-appointed experts to explaining the general subject matter, without becoming involved in the disputes of the parties, will make it easier to maintain neutrality. The court-appointed expert should generally have no ex parte communications with the judge. Finally, consideration may also be given to referral of the patent for reexamination by the PTO under 35 U.S.C. § 302, with citations of prior art furnished under 35 U.S.C. § 301. In some cases, the court may conclude that reference to a special master under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53 is warranted.

33.27 Trial

To ensure a fair trial, whether it is a bench trial or a jury trial, the fact-finder's comprehension of the issues and of the evidence is critical. Bifurcation of a patent jury trial or a phased trial considering major issues separately can sometimes assist in properly focusing the jury's attention.<sup>2230</sup> For example, issues of infringement can be tried prior to other issues in the case, with the issue of remedies, including damages, often deferred.<sup>2231</sup> On the other hand, bifurcation sometimes results in a "piecemeal" trial, making it harder for the jury to see the case as a whole.<sup>2232</sup> Additional techniques designed to improve juror comprehension, as well as to assist in reducing the complexity of patent trials, are discussed in Patent Law & Practice,<sup>2233</sup> published by the Federal Judicial Center. These techniques include

Section 102 of the Copyright Act provides specifically that copyright protection is accorded to “original works of authorship fixed in any tangible medium of expression, now known or later developed, from which they can be perceived, reproduced, or otherwise communicated, either directly or with the aid of a machine or device.”<sup>2236</sup> Under the Act, the work itself must originate with the author, even though the idea itself may have originated elsewhere. “originality” required is fairly minimal: There must be some element of creativity reflected in the work, and the work must be independently created by the author.<sup>2237</sup> Protected works include, although are not limited to, literary, dramatic, and musical works, audiovisuals, movies, recordings, and art, without regard to their level of value or subjective view of artistry.<sup>2238</sup> The Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990<sup>2239</sup> extends protection to single or limited editions of visual art, such as paintings, sculpture, and photography. The statutory rights accorded under the Copyright Act do not attach until the work has been “fixed,” at which point state common-law rights against copying and related injuries are preempted.<sup>2240</sup>

Copyright protection is limited to the expression of the idea, not the idea itself.<sup>2241</sup> “In no case does copyright protection for an original work of authorship extend to any idea, procedure, process, system, method of operation, concept, principle, or discovery, regardless of the form in which it is described, explained, illustrated, or embodied in such work.”<sup>2242</sup> Copyright protection further will not extend to purely utilitarian works,<sup>2243</sup> or to forms,<sup>2244</sup> compilations such as ordinary telephone directories,<sup>2245</sup> or where the subject matter necessarily has limited forms of expression.<sup>2246</sup> The creative selection, coordi-

Authors of works of visual arts have rights to claim authorship and prevent the use of their names with works of visual arts they did not create, or with works of visual art that have been distorted, mutilated, or otherwise modified in a way that harms the author’s honor or reputation. They can also prevent certain intentional distortion, mutilation, or other prejudicial modification and intentional or grossly negligent destruction of their works.

nation, or arrangement of unprotected facts or ideas, however, can be protected as long as the work meets the “minimal degree of creativity” standard established by the Supreme Court in Feist Publications, Inc. v. Rural Telephone Service Co.<sup>2247</sup>

The Copyright Act confers certain protection on the owner of a copyright, whether such ownership is vested in the original author, joint authors, employers where the work was created pursuant to employment, or persons to whom a copyright has been transferred or licensed.<sup>2248</sup> The Act accords to copyright owners six exclusive rights, which are set forth in section 106: (1) reproduction; (2) derivative works; (3) distribution; (4) performance; (5) display; and (6) digital transmission.<sup>2249</sup> A copyright is infringed by the unauthorized exercise of any of these exclusive rights by another. Although the facts in many copyright cases are not necessarily complex, the legal analysis often involves subtle concepts regarding whether section 106 rights have been infringed and whether that infringement was direct or contributory.<sup>2250</sup> Infringement can be innocent or intentional, and a plaintiff is permitted under copyright law to assert a claim for contributory or vicarious infringement as long as the plaintiff can also demonstrate an underlying act of direct infringement.<sup>2251</sup>

To prevail in a copyright infringement claim, the plaintiff must prove (1) ownership of a valid copyright; and (2) that at least one of the exclusive rights under section 106 has been violated.<sup>2252</sup> The plaintiff must demonstrate either actual copying (as opposed to independent creation) or proof of access to the copyrighted work and that the copied work is “substantially similar” to the original, to prove a violation of section 106.<sup>2253</sup> Equitable remedies in the form of injunctive relief are available in addition to money damages, reflecting either actual damages or, at the plaintiff’s election, statutory damages.<sup>2254</sup> Registration is a prerequisite to maintaining a suit for infringement and in order to obtain statutory damages, the copyright must have been registered under the Act prior to infringement.<sup>2255</sup>

Among the defenses to an infringement claim is a common law doctrine commonly referred to as the “fair use” doctrine, which has now been codified in 17 U.S.C. § 107 to preserve the use of creative artistic works for purposes of teaching, research, criticism, and news reporting.<sup>2256</sup> Section 107 sets out several factors to be considered in assessing whether the defendant’s use was “fair,” which are then balanced against the interest in protecting the exclusive rights of copyright owners. These factors include (1) the purpose and character of the defendant’s use, such as whether the use is commercial or private; (2) the nature of the copyrighted work; (3) the amount and substance of the portion of the copyrighted work used in relation to the whole of the copyrighted work; and (4) the effect of the use on the market for the copyright owner’s rights.<sup>2257</sup> Congress also has created a statutory “safe harbor” for “providers of online services or network access, or the operator of facilities therefore”<sup>2258</sup> through the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA).<sup>2259</sup> The DMCA protects service providers who do not control the content transmitted via their servers, as well as search engines that merely provide links to allegedly infringing content.<sup>2260</sup> “The DMCA’s protection of an innocent service provider disappears ‘at the moment the service provider loses its innocence, i.e., at the moment it becomes aware that a third party is using its system to infringe.’”<sup>2261</sup>

Rep. No. 105-551(I), at 11 (1998))). Although the DMCA protects service providers from money damages arising from posting or transmitting infringing content, in most cases injunctive relief will still be available. To avail themselves of the protection of the DMCA safe harbor, however, the defendant service providers must have, and communicate to users, a policy for removing allegedly infringing material. ALS Scan, 239 F.3d at 625.

Many of the complexities accompanying copyright litigation arise out of the growth and development of new technologies and transmissions, particularly on-line dissemination.<sup>2263</sup> Works can now be easily replicated and accessed by numerous users, and new categories of works (such as hypertext) have developed.<sup>2264</sup> On-line linking and framing can create the potential for copyright infringement, although the mere use of a copyrighted work in a search engine may be a fair use.<sup>2265</sup> The increasing use of the Internet as a means of communication, and the ease with which material can be copied, create difficulties in copyright application and protection not contemplated by the current Act and have spawned new legislation targeting these issues.<sup>2266</sup> Other developments in copyright law, many attributable to changing technology, are designed either to protect the right in the work itself, such as performance rights in digital transmissions, or to protect the measures used to prevent the copying of works available in digital and other advanced technologies, such as encryption and other programs.<sup>2267</sup> The courts have continued to struggle with the challenges presented by computer technologies and computer networks and the role that copyright protection should play. These complexities will vary from case to case, and inquiry into the following areas at the initial pretrial conference will help to assess the need for close supervision:

- Has the copyright been registered? Before an action for copyright infringement can be instituted, the copyright must have been registered

Supp. 2d 345, 346 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (noting that the Internet “is one of the most fluid, rapidly developing, and virtually daily changing areas of commerce that the law has had to focus upon and endeavor to apply established principles to”).

in the Copyright Office.<sup>2268</sup> Registration timing, however, affects the types of damages available. Where the copyright was not registered prior to the infringing activity or within ninety days of the date the work was first published, the plaintiff is precluded from seeking attorney fees or statutory damages.<sup>2269</sup>

- Where did the activity take place? Where the allegedly infringing activity takes place is an important question, in determining personal jurisdiction and venue, and also in determining whom the plaintiff can sue. Plaintiffs may base claims on actions by foreign defendants that occurred outside the United States, or interrelated activities involving both U.S. corporations and foreign affiliates.<sup>2270</sup> Foreign defendants add additional complexity to the management of discovery and other pretrial issues.<sup>2271</sup> Jurisdictional issues may be more complicated where the infringing activity took place over the Internet.<sup>2272</sup> The courts have held that where infringing material is posted on a Web site, the infringing acts occurred in the place where the Web site is created and maintained.<sup>2273</sup> Courts have looked to the “nature and quality of commercial activity that an entity conducts over the Internet” in assessing whether personal jurisdiction can be exercised.<sup>2274</sup> A relevant inquiry is whether the defendant’s activity was active or passive. “A passive Web site that does little more than make information available

- Does the dispute raise issues of international law? One or more of the various treaties that address copyright issues may become relevant if international components are involved.<sup>2276</sup> Plaintiffs may be alleging infringement of foreign copyrights, as well as infringement under the Copyright Act.<sup>2277</sup> In addition, conflicts may result in the application of foreign copyright law to resolve disputes.<sup>2278</sup>
- Are there any other actions pending in the same or other jurisdictions? Copyright cases rarely involve infringements sufficient to trigger multidistrict litigation or class actions,<sup>2279</sup> but the Internet has created the potential for multiple infringements in numerous jurisdictions. For example, in In re Aimster Copyright Litigation,<sup>2280</sup> nine actions involving whether the distribution of MP3 music files through a Web site operated by Aimster constituted copyright infringement were transferred for coordinated and consolidated pretrial proceedings by the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation. Declaratory judgment actions seeking a determination of noninfringement can raise questions of jurisdiction and whether the action should be transferred or stayed.<sup>2281</sup> In some instances, the action reflects simply a “race to the courthouse.”<sup>2282</sup> Finally, issues of collateral estoppel may arise where multiple infringements have occurred.<sup>2283</sup>

- Are there any criminal proceedings pending or matters under criminal investigation? The Copyright Act provides for criminal penalties, including imprisonment and a fine, for willful copyright infringement,<sup>2284</sup> as well as penalties if the defendant engaged in fraud.<sup>2285</sup> The Act provides additional remedies in the form of mandatory seizure and forfeiture or destruction.<sup>2286</sup> If there is a pending criminal investigation, a motion to stay the civil action pending resolution of the criminal case may occur.

The courts have held that arbitration agreements arising out of the Copyright Act are enforceable. “Congress has not asserted any ‘policy against arbitration of [a] claim for the infringement of a valid copyright.’”<sup>2289</sup> Arbitration agreements are especially common in licensing agreements. The court should inquire into the existence of any agreement that may underlie the claims and whether any or all claims are subject to arbitration. - Is the plaintiff seeking impoundment as one of the remedies sought? The plaintiff may be seeking impoundment of the allegedly infringing material pursuant to section 503 of the Copyright Act.<sup>2290</sup> Seizure can be ex parte where the plaintiff shows a likelihood the allegedly infringing goods may be destroyed or hidden, although the defendant can request a post-seizure hearing.<sup>2291</sup> There is judicial discretion under section 503(b) to permanently dispose of the infringing material after final judgment, although destruction is not mandatory, as it is where the defendant is criminally convicted of willful infringement.<sup>2292</sup>

- Do the parties anticipate seeking protective orders? Motions for protective orders are common in copyright actions.<sup>2302</sup>
- Does the plaintiff assert vicarious or contributory infringement? The scope of discovery will be affected by assertions of vicarious or contributory infringement.

33.311 Discovery

Two central issues in copyright cases are whether the copyright was infringed and the nature of the infringement. As a result, discovery may be merits based, looking at the infringement itself, or jurisdictional, seeking information on where and how the infringement occurred.<sup>2303</sup> Complex damages calculations often become necessary, and discovery into the defendant's finances, including costs of production, overhead, and cost and expense allocation, among other matters, can be extensive. Protective orders may be sought where discovery pertains to the parties' financial affairs.

Much of the information sought during discovery will be maintained in electronic form. Discovery orders may be necessary to ensure that the form in which information is maintained is not utilized by the parties to hinder or obstruct the discovery process.<sup>2304</sup> Consider whether the parties should be required to provide print versions of extensive databases as opposed to transmitting the data in an electronic format. To the extent that print versions are supplied from electronic data, the court should address whether a party will be permitted to provide print versions that contain less information than their electronic counterparts. Additional information available in electronic format may include, for example, hidden notations (metadata) indicating changes or authors. The expense of access or production is also a factor. For example, in cases where reconstruction of data or recovery from obsolete formats is at issue, allocating the costs of electronic discovery may be appropriate.<sup>2305</sup> The committee note to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 34 recognizes that the burden “will vary from case to case, and the courts have ample power under Rule 26(c) to protect respondent against undue burden or expense, either by restricting discovery or requiring that the discovering party pay costs.”

Data retention (or destruction) policies can also be an issue, and different computer back-up procedures may affect the availability, as well as the expense, of discovery. It is advisable to prohibit the routine deletion of relevant documents, particularly E-mail,<sup>2306</sup> and determine whether forensic analysis or mirroring of computer hard drives is appropriate. Where the risk of spoliation is high, ex parte seizure and forensic analysis of the offending party’s computer equipment and data-storage facilities may be warranted. However, these measures should not be undertaken lightly, as the economic impact of such measures could be substantial. To the extent a party is permitted access to the source of the electronic information, the court should address how the hard drive contents and data storage facilities will be analyzed for relevant materials. Trade secret and other sensitive or confidential information that is either undiscoverable or otherwise not relevant should be protected from disclosure, and retained computer forensic experts should be closely supervised. One approach is to utilize a court-appointed computer expert, who would be subject to a protective order precluding the disclosure of confidential information and otherwise protecting the privacy rights of the parties. In one case, the court-appointed computer specialist provided a mirror image of the defendant’s hard drive to the defendant’s counsel, who was then to review all recovered documents and produce those that were responsive to prior discovery requests. The defendant’s attorney was to be the “sole custodian” of both the mirror image disk and copies of documents retrieved from it over the course of the litigation.<sup>2307</sup>

33.312 Motions

Motions for injunctive relief are frequently sought in copyright cases. The Copyright Act provides for a preliminary injunction “to prevent or restrain infringement of a copyright”<sup>2308</sup> and, although not automatic, injunctions are commonly granted where infringement is found.<sup>2309</sup> In copyright cases, irreparable harm will be presumed where a likelihood of success in the copyright claim has been shown.<sup>2310</sup> The fact that money damages may be quantifiable will not, in itself, preclude a finding of irreparable harm.<sup>2311</sup> Similar to the analysis under patent law, however, a finding of delay or laches on the part of the party in seeking injunctive relief can rebut a showing of irreparable harm.<sup>2312</sup> In addition to enjoining further infringing conduct, the court may order the defendant to recall the infringing products as part of the injunction.<sup>2313</sup> The circuits have adopted varying tests in analyzing whether injunctive relief is appropriate.

Summary judgment may be appropriate in cases where copying is not in dispute. Many copyright infringement cases, however, turn on the issue of substantial similarity, which usually must be resolved by the fact-finder.<sup>2314</sup> Summary judgment is available where the works are “so dissimilar as to protectible elements that no reasonable jury could find for the plaintiff on the question of substantial similarity.”<sup>2315</sup> In other cases, the similarities relate to nonprotected portions of the work, precluding infringement.<sup>2316</sup> Summary judgment is also warranted where preliminary issues, unrelated to “substantial similarity,” are dispositive, such as whether the plaintiff obtained a valid copyright<sup>2317</sup> or the rights of a licensee.<sup>2318</sup>

33.313 Experts

Expert testimony in copyright cases is primarily focused on whether actual copying has occurred. “Copying may be established either by direct evidence of copying or by indirect evidence, including access to the copyrighted works, similarities that are probative of copying between the works, and expert testimony.”<sup>2319</sup> Thus, for example, in Repp v. Webber,<sup>2320</sup> expert testimony was probative on the similarities between two musical works, although a determination of whether in light of those similarities infringement had occurred was a question for the fact-finder.<sup>2321</sup> Similarly, “the opinions of experts may be called upon in determining whether there is sufficient similarity between the works so as to conclude that the alleged infringer ‘copied’ the work.”<sup>2322</sup> Once actual copying is established, the inquiry turns to whether the copying was “actionable.”<sup>2323</sup> Expert testimony may also be appropriate to explain technology or related processes,<sup>2324</sup> but it is generally not admissible on liability.

33.32 Trademarks

Trademark claims are governed by the Lanham Act.<sup>2325</sup> A trademark is “any word, name, symbol or device” used to “identify and distinguish” goods.<sup>2326</sup> Trademarks identify the source or origin of a product. To be accorded protection, the trademark must be “distinctive” or have become identified with a particular source through its use in “commerce.”<sup>2327</sup> The protec-

2325. 15 U.S.C. § 1051 (2000). The Lanham Act also covers service marks, which distinguish services of one person from another, and trade names. See id. § 1127.

2327. Id. § 1052(f).

tions offered by trademark law are less than those accorded copyright or patents. For instance, unlike owners of patents or copyrights, trademark owners do not have exclusive use of a mark. Protection extends only to prevent the mark from being used by others in a manner likely to cause confusion, mistake, or deception among consumers as to the source of the goods or services. For a discussion of survey research methods applicable to trademark litigation, see section 11.493. Courts have applied a number of factors to assess whether an allegedly infringing use is likely to cause consumer confusion. These factors include the similarity of the marks, the similarity of the parties' products and services, the strength of the plaintiff's mark, evidence of actual consumer confusion, the markets involved, likelihood of confusion, and the sophistication of buyers.<sup>2328</sup>

Trademarks are valid and enforceable as long as the mark is used in commerce, the owner adequately seeks to protect its rights to the mark, and the mark has not been abandoned or become generic.<sup>2329</sup> A mark need not be registered with the Patent and Trademark Office, although registration can be considered conclusive evidence of validity and ownership. Where the owner has met the incontestability requirements of section 1065 of the Lanham Act, an allegedly infringing defendant is limited to the defenses set forth in section 1115(b) of the Act.<sup>2330</sup> In addition, a federal trademark registration also affords the owner nationwide rights, well beyond the local geographic market where the mark is used. This attribute of federal registration affords wider protection than state registration. To enforce a trademark in a foreign country, however, the owner must comply with the trademark requirements of that country.

Many of the case-management considerations in a copyright case also apply to trademark cases. Similar issues arise relating to arbitrability, remedies sought, and the scope and issuance of protective orders. Motions for injunctive relief are common in trademark litigation and can be accompanied by requests for seizure of the allegedly infringing goods.<sup>2331</sup> The owner of a mark can also seek to freeze the assets of the defendant under certain circumstances.<sup>2332</sup> Damage to the goodwill associated with a trademark will usually meet the requirements for irreparable injury, and a showing of the likelihood of consumer confusion together with evidence of prior rights in the mark are significant factors in demonstrating a likelihood of success on the merits.

Technological advances also affect the application of trademark law. Infringement of trademarks in cyberspace complicate issues of origin, affiliation, or sponsorship, as well as the extent of protection accorded trademark use in metatags,<sup>2333</sup> hyperlinks, and caching. Other considerations include the following:

- Is foreign commerce involved and extraterritorial jurisdiction sought?<sup>2334</sup>
- Are the issues presented purely equitable or do they include distinct legal claims that will require a jury trial? For example, whether the plaintiff is entitled to money damages upon a finding of infringement is a jury question. Where the jury awards no damages, leaving only equitable issues, courts have considered whether the jury verdict may be treated as advisory and enter a contrary verdict.<sup>2335</sup>
- Where the Internet forms the vehicle for the infringing activity, is the defendant subject to personal jurisdiction? Personal jurisdiction over nonresident owners of Web sites often turns on whether the site is active or passive.
- If the action is in rem against an infringing domain name, has the plaintiff met the requirements to bring an in rem action pursuant to the Anticybersquatting Consumer Protection Act?<sup>2336</sup>
- Has there been a request for expedited discovery?<sup>2337</sup>

34.1 Introduction

- .11 Statutory Framework 646
- .12 The Three Phases of CERCLA Litigation 650

In 1980, Congress passed the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA), 42 U.S.C. §§ 9601–9626 (1994), to respond to the growing problem presented by abandoned or inactive hazardous waste sites.<sup>2338</sup> CERCLA, often referred to as the Superfund, is premised on the “polluter pays” principle.<sup>2339</sup> It permits quick government response to threats presented by hazardous contaminants and seeks to place the ultimate cost of cleanup of hazardous sites directly on those responsible for the contaminants.<sup>2340</sup>

2339. S. Rep. No. 96-848, at 13 (1980) (reflecting adoption of the principle that the polluter should pay for hazardous waste remediation).

CERCLA's primary goal is to address threats to human health and the environment from the release or threatened release of hazardous substances.<sup>2341</sup> CERCLA directs the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to create and maintain, based on certain criteria, a prioritized list<sup>2342</sup> of hazardous sites eligible for cleanup under the Superfund. These sites form the basis for most CERCLA claims. Once the site has been listed, EPA undertakes a Remedial Investigation/Feasibility Study (RI/FS) to develop, among other things, alternative cleanup strategies and determine the scope of the remedial action. In the remedial investigation phase, EPA conducts a detailed investigation at the site, seeking information regarding all site operations, and the extent of contamination at the site.<sup>2343</sup> The feasibility study looks at remedial goals and alterna-

2340. See, e.g., Tippins Inc. v. USX Corp., 37 F.3d 87, 92 (3d Cir. 1994) (“CERCLA . . . has its ‘bite’ in holding responsible parties financially accountable for the costs associated with a remedial action at hazardous waste facilities.”).

2341. Although CERCLA authorizes the President to undertake response actions, much of this authority has been delegated to EPA to function as the lead federal agency with responsibility for site cleanup pursuant to Exec. Order No. 12580, 52 Fed. Reg. 2923 (Jan. 23, 1987). The authority to conduct certain response actions at certain sites under the jurisdiction, custody, or control of other federal agencies, however, has been delegated to those agencies. Id.

2342. This list is referred to as the National Priorities List (NPL). See 42 U.S.C. § 9601 (West 2003). If a site is not listed on the NPL, EPA may only undertake removal, not remedial, efforts using the Superfund. See, e.g., SCA Servs., Inc. v. Thomas, 634 F. Supp. 1355, 1382 (N.D. Ind. 1986). A removal action is considered a short-term cleanup and typically is undertaken to deal with an imminent threatened release. Expenditures by EPA are “limited by law to $2 million and a duration of one year (unless a waiver is issued).” Probst & Konisky, supra note 2338, at 33.

2343. Section 104(e) of CERCLA grants EPA broad information-gathering authority, including access to information from persons who might know about the presence of hazardous wastes at the site, and it permits imposition of a civil penalty against anyone who unreasonably fails to comply with a section 104(e) information request. 42 U.S.C. §§ 9604(e), 9604(e)(5) (West 2003). See United States v. Martin, No. 99 C 1130, 2000 WL 1029188, at *10 (N.D. Ill. July 26, 2000) (assessing a civil penalty of “$75 per day for each of the 607 days the defendant unreasonably delayed” in responding to government information requests under section 104); United States v. Barkman, 784 F. Supp. 1181, 1190 (E.D. Pa. 1992) (“[The defendant’s] delay of over 700 days in answering completely the Information Requests of the EPA constitutes, by virtue of the duration itself, an unreasonable delay.”); United States v. Tannery, No. 99 C 1130, 1992 WL 1458802, at *1 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 7, 1992) (imposing maximum penalty of $13,452,324 on the defendant who failed to comply with the government’s information request). EPA will also have done extensive sampling and testing and may, in some instances, have undertaken a removal action to remedy an immediate hazard. 42 U.S.C. § 9604 (West 2003).

tives. EPA then prepares a record of decision (ROD), which sets forth the remedy selected and the anticipated costs.<sup>2344</sup>

The cleanup then moves into an engineering phase to design the remedy, called remedial design, and finally into the remedial action phase, where the remedy is actually implemented. Depending on the nature and extent of the contamination and the cleanup technology selected, it can take many years—an average of 11.4 years—to complete a cleanup at an NPL site, especially a site involving contaminated groundwater.<sup>2345</sup> Complicating this process, EPA often initially divides a site into more than one “operable unit” corresponding “to different physical areas at a site or different environmental media (such as soil or groundwater).”<sup>2346</sup> To the extent that the site includes more than one operable unit, each unit goes through the process described above, although multiple operable units sometimes proceed through the process simultaneously.

EPA can bring a CERCLA action at almost any point in the remedial process with respect to any operable unit or the site as a whole. Remediation need 2344. See 40 C.F.R. § 300.430(c)(5)(I), (f)(4), (f)(5) (1990). The selection of the remedy in the ROD is governed by the National Contingency Plan (NCP) and is solely determined by EPA. EPA is required to publish a proposed plan for remediation in the Federal Register for public comment and then issue a ROD selecting the response action once public comments on the proposed plan have been considered. United States v. Rohm and Haas, 721 F. Supp. 666, 674, n.8 (D.N.J. 1989) (“The ROD presents the remedy in general terms and an estimate of its costs. The figure may change during the remedial design phase when detailed engineering plans are developed to implement the general remedial concept.”). Remedies must be in compliance with all applicable or relevant and appropriate requirements (ARARs), which include any federal and state cleanup standards or laws relating to a hazardous substance or remedial action (where more stringent than any federal requirement or contained in a program authorized by EPA). Probst & Konisky, supra note 2338, at 34; 42 U.S.C. § 9621(d)(2)(A)(i), (ii) (West 2003).

2345. U.S. GAO Rep. 97-20, Superfund Times to Complete the Assessment and Cleanup of Hazardous Waste Sites 3 (Mar. 31, 1997). Completion of the remedy is assessed as of the date of completion of construction. EPA considers “remedial action complete when a system for pumping and treating contaminated groundwater has been installed, even though the system may have to operate for years before the contamination is reduced to acceptable levels.” Id. at 7. However, “[r]egardless of whether a site is on the NPL, and regardless of whether the EPA undertakes to clean it up or to order the PRPs [potentially responsible parties] to clean it up, a CERCLA site may be cleaned up by any party, including but not limited to a state, a locality, a corporation or an individual, who may then sue the PRPs for reimbursement directly under CERCLA § 107(a)(4)(A) [for states] or (B) [any other party] and/or § 113(f).” Maxine Lipeles, Hazardous Wastes 277 (3d ed. 1997).

2346. U.S. GAO Rep., supra note 2345, at 7, 8. See, e.g., United States v. Occidental Chem. Corp., 200 F.3d 143 (3d Cir. 1999) (EPA divided remediation into two operable units); Kalamazoo River Study Group v. Rockwell Int’l, 107 F. Supp. 2d 817, 819 (W.D. Mich. 2000) (“four Operable Units consisting of five disposal areas”).

not be complete before EPA acts. CERCLA requires only that there be an imminent release or threatened release of hazardous contaminants to initiate a governmental response, or that the government (or a private plaintiff undertaking cleanup) has incurred response costs.<sup>2347</sup> Many of the general principles applicable to complex litigation apply to CERCLA actions.<sup>2348</sup> A CERCLA case demands “the attention of the judge as an administrator, adjudicator and mediator like no other civil litigation . . . [C]ourts are called upon to employ procedures in the multi-party Superfund site cases to foster economy and fairness in a process which cannot be economical and often cannot be fair to all participants.”<sup>2349</sup> This subsection addresses some of the special features of CERCLA and discusses issues and problems peculiar to this type of litigation.<sup>2350</sup>

34.11 Statutory Framework

CERCLA cases often arise differently from most other complex litigation and can take several forms. Typically, the process begins after the government (usually EPA) has determined the need for a response action at the site. As part of its investigation, EPA may seek information regarding the identity of all persons or entities that may have owned or operated the site, or generated or transported hazardous substances found at the site. These persons or entities are statutorily liable under CERCLA and considered potentially responsible parties, or PRPs.<sup>2351</sup> CERCLA affords EPA (and, to a limited extent, private parties that undertake a cleanup effort) several options, the choice of which can shape the subsequent action:

- Section 107 cost recovery actions. Section 104 of CERCLA authorizes EPA to conduct certain response actions using monies from the Superfund. Removal actions are considered interim actions and defined 2347. See, e.g., Romeo v. Gen. Chem. Corp., 922 F. Supp. 287, 289 (N.D. Cal. 1994) (suit may be filed once a party has incurred some recoverable response cost).

2348. See infra section 10.

2349. Stanley S. Brotman & Jerome B. Simandle, Superfund Case Management and Settlement Processes, C352 ALI-ABA 175, 177 Superfund and Toxic Substances (Dec. 1, 1988). For an excellent overview, see Ridgway M. Hall, Jr., et al., Superfund Response Cost Allocation: The Law, the Science, and the Practice, 49 Bus. Law. 1489 (1994).

2350. A number of useful resources provide a good overview of CERCLA and how it has been interpreted and applied by the courts, as well as by EPA. See Lipeles, supra note 2345; Robert V. Percival et al., Environmental Regulation: Law, Science, and Policy (4th ed. 2003); William H. Rodgers, Environmental Law (2d ed. 1994); Allan J. as those necessary to prevent the release of a hazardous substance,<sup>2352</sup> while remedial actions are defined as actions consistent with a permanent remedy “taken instead of or in addition to removal actions.”<sup>2353</sup> After EPA has incurred costs at the site and remedial actions are completed, the government can file a cost-recovery action against the PRPs under section 107 to recover those costs. Section 107 also permits innocent plaintiffs, i.e., persons who are not also responsible or potentially responsible parties, to file a cost-recovery action against responsible parties to recover all monies expended in cleaning up a hazardous facility. Liability to the government (as well as to “innocent plaintiffs”) under section 107 is typically joint and several; the appropriate allocation of responsibility among PRPs is typically addressed in private actions for contribution under section 113. These claims for contribution are often asserted as cross-claims or third-party claims by defendants in section 107 actions initiated by the government.

- Issuance of a section 106 administrative order. CERCLA section 106(a) authorizes the government to seek injunctive relief or to issue an administrative order compelling responsible parties to clean up, abate, or otherwise remediate contamination at a site where EPA has determined that there is an “imminent and substantial endangerment to the public health or welfare.”<sup>2354</sup> Incentives for cooperation are fairly strong: Failure to comply with an administrative order carries civil penalties up to $27,500 per day for each violation occurring on or after January 30, 1997.<sup>2355</sup> PRPs who incur response costs in complying with an administrative order may seek contribution from other liable parties pursuant to section 113(9f)(1) of CERCLA, described below. Section 106 orders issued by EPA can name as few as one and as many as all PRPs at a site, and PRPs who refuse to comply with a section 106 order without “sufficient cause”<sup>2356</sup> do so at their peril.

2353. Id. § 9601(24).

2354. Id. § 9406(a).

2355. Id. § 9604(e)(5), amended by Omnibus Consolidated Rescissions and Appropriations Act of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104-134, 110 Stat. 1321, and Civil Monetary Penalty Inflation Adjustment Rule, 61 Fed. Reg. 69360 (Dec. 31, 1996) (to be codified at 40 C.F.R. pts. 19, 27). Penalties for violation of a section 106 order and treble damages under section 107(c)(3) are cumulative. 42 U.S.C. § 9607(c)(3) (West 2003).

2356. 42 U.S.C. § 9606(b)(1) (West 2003); see United States v. LeCarreaux, Civ. No. 90-1672, 1991 WL 341191, at *25–27 (D.N.J. July 30, 1991) (financial condition not sufficient cause for failure to comply).

CERCLA explicitly precludes jurisdiction to review section 106 orders, except in an action by EPA to enforce an order or to recover penalties for its violation, in an action for reimbursement by participating PRPs under section 106(b)(2), or pursuant to a cost recovery action under section 107.<sup>2357</sup> Typically, EPA will first notify all identified PRPs of its intent to issue a section 106 order in an effort to encourage the PRPs collectively to undertake a remedial action.<sup>2358</sup> CERCLA encourages EPA to minimize litigation by facilitating agreements with PRPs.<sup>2359</sup> To the extent that the PRPs agree to a cleanup effort, the government will enter into a consent decree with cooperating parties, setting forth the work to be performed and the liabilities assumed.<sup>2360</sup> Even in cases where agreement has been reached and a consent order signed, judicial review may nonetheless arise where the PRPs subsequently challenge EPA actions (such as the remedy selected<sup>2361</sup>), oversight costs, consistency with the National Contingency Plan (NCP),<sup>2362</sup> or proposed set-

2357. 42 U.S.C. § 9613(h) (West 2003).

2359. 42 U.S.C. § 9622(a) (West 2003). See also id. § 9622(g)(1) (EPA will also negotiate settlements with de minimis PRPs (PRPs with extremely small volumetric contributions)); United States v. Occidental Chem. Corp., 200 F.3d 143, 147 (3d Cir. 1999) (“It is through § 122 that PRPs may agree, as opposed to being ordered under § 106(a), to do the remedial work at a site in the first instance.”). Any sums recovered will be applied to reduce cleanup costs at the site. See United States v. Cannons Eng’g Corp., 899 F.2d 79, 91 (1st Cir. 1990) (“The statute immunizes settling parties from liability for contribution and provides that only the amount of the settlement—not the pro rata share attributable to the settling party—shall be subtracted from the liability of the non-settlers.”).

2360. See CERCLA §§ 122(d)(1)(A) & (B). It is not unusual for EPA to have reached agreement with PRPs to conduct an RI/FS. However, the PRPs’ failure to agree to undertake any other additional work at the site presents a challenge for subsequent efforts at settlement negotiation during litigation, as well as uncertainty as to total cleanup costs. See Model Superfund Consent Decree, supra note 2358.

2361. See, e.g., In re Bell Petroleum Servs., Inc., 3 F.3d 889, 904–05 (5th Cir. 1993) (holding EPA could not recover costs for implementation of interim measure found to be “arbitrary and capricious”).

2362. United States v. N.E. Pharm. & Chem. Co., 810 F.2d 726, 747–48 (8th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 848 (1987); United States v. Am. Cyanamid Co., 786 F. Supp. 152, 158 (D.R.I. 1992); United States v. Kramer, 757 F. Supp. 397, 436 (D.N.J. 1991). The NCP is codified at 40 C.F.R. § 300 and specifies the procedures and requirements that apply to removal and remedial actions under CERCLA. Response actions by the government under section 107 must be tlement agreements between EPA and other PRPs.<sup>2363</sup> In some cases, the primary PRP group may have reached a settlement and entered into a consent decree with the government on removal or remediation efforts, but failed to agree on reimbursement of past costs, which may trigger an action under section 107 by the government on that unresolved portion. Those PRPs that refuse to participate in cleanup actions or otherwise settle with EPA face issuance of the section 106 order, a possible enforcement action, or, if EPA has expended any monies at the site, a cost-recovery action under section 107.<sup>2364</sup>

- Section 113 contribution actions. Private-party PRPs may themselves incur response costs a number of different ways, including by reimbursing the government for its response costs through a judgment or settlement of a section 107 cost-recovery action; by performing actions pursuant to a section 106(a) administrative order; by performing response actions pursuant to a settlement agreement with the government; or even by performing a voluntary cleanup. Private-party PRPs generally will seek to recover an equitable portion of such costs from other PRPs through a contribution action under section 113(f)(a) of consistent with the NCP. United States v. Hardage, 982 F.2d 1436, 1444 (10th Cir. 1992) (“Costs, by themselves, cannot be inconsistent with the NCP . . . As long as the government’s choice of response action is not inconsistent with the NCP, its costs are presumed to be reasonable and therefore recoverable.”). Response costs must be “consistent with” the NCP, as well, for actions by private parties under section 113. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 9607(4)(A) & (B) (West 2003). See also Trimble v. Asarco, Inc., 232 F.3d 946, 956–57 (8th Cir. 2000) (where plaintiffs had no existing obligation to reimburse attorneys for response costs incurred on their behalf, they did not have a viable cost recovery claim); Romeo v. Gen. Chem. Corp., 922 F. Supp. 287 (N.D. Cal. 1994) (response costs must be cognizable under CERCLA in order to make out prima facie case (citing Ascon Props., Inc. v. Mobil Co., 866 F.2d 1149, 1153–54 (9th Cir. 1989))).

Ot-tati & Goss, Inc.*, 900 F.2d 429, 443–45 (1st Cir. 1990) (raising issue of whether EPA overhead costs could be reduced because EPA was at fault in delaying the litigation).

2364. See, e.g., Occidental Chem. Corp., 200 F.3d at 153 (issuing of a section 106 order against the defendant after settlement negotiations failed); United States v. LeCarreaux, Civ. No. 90-1672, 1991 WL 341191 (D.N.J. July 30, 1991) (recalcitrant PRPs held liable for EPA response costs and treble damages in EPA enforcement action). Often PRP groups that have agreed to undertake a cleanup and enter into a consent order will have negotiated with EPA an agreement that nonparticipating PRPs be named in a section 106 order. EPA further has determined that “one important measure to encourage settlement is to maintain aggressive use of Section 106 administrative and judicial enforcement authorities to compel private party response.” Memorandum: Interim Guidance: Streamlining the CERCLA Settlement Decision Process, 17 Envtl. L. Rep. (Envtl. L. Inst.) 35014 (1987) [hereinafter Streamlining].

CERCLA. These actions are brought either as original claims or, where the original PRPs are defendants in a cost-recovery action, as third-party claims.<sup>2365</sup> In addition, PRPs that have settled with the government (e.g., pursuant to a consent order) or have otherwise undertaken a removal or remedial effort can file an action for contribution or indemnity under section 113 against nonsettling or nonparticipating PRPs. Where EPA allegedly failed to follow regulations and to perform nondiscretionary acts, section 113(h)(4) also permits citizen suits brought pursuant to section 310.<sup>2366</sup>

34.12 The Three Phases of CERCLA Litigation

Generally, CERCLA litigation will comprise three interrelated phases, each of which have case-management implications: (1) liability; (2) determination of remedy and recoverable costs, including challenges to response actions for which costs were incurred; and (3) equitable allocation of response costs among defendants. Cases that also involve government claims for damages for destruction, injury, or loss of natural resources may require an additional phase or may considerably complicate the first and second phases. In practice, issues may cut across these phases:

1. Liability. CERCLA imposes liability on four classes of defendants for cleanup of a site or facility: (1) past or present owners; (2) past or present operators; (3) generators; and (4) transporters.<sup>2367</sup> In order to make out a prima facie case, a plaintiff must show only that the defendant is a responsible party under section 107(a) (i.e., owner, operator, generator, or transporter) and that there has been a release or threatened release of a hazardous substance<sup>2368</sup> from a “facility”<sup>2369</sup>

2365. But see Aviall Servs., Inc. v. Cooper Indus., Inc., 263 F.3d 134, 137–38 (5th Cir. 2001) (costs incurred for voluntary cleanup not recoverable in contribution action in the absence of a federal or state action under CERCLA § 106 or § 107(a)).

2366. 42 U.S.C. § 9613(h)(4) (West 2003). See Schalk v. Reilly, 900 F.2d 1091, 1095 (7th Cir. 1990) (in order to prevent unnecessary delay, a citizen suit may not challenge a cleanup prior to completion of the remedy); Ala. v. United States EPA, 871 F.2d 1548, 1557 (11th Cir. 1989).

2367. 42 U.S.C. § 9607(a) (West 2003).

2368. Id. § 9601(22) defines a “release” as “any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying, discharge, injecting, escaping, leaching, dumping, or disposing into the environment.”

2369. Id. § 9601(9) defines a “facility” as

(A) any building, structure, installation, equipment, pipe or pipeline (including any pipe into a sewer or publicly owned treatment works), well, pit, pond, lagoon, impoundment, that has caused the plaintiff to incur “response costs.” It is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove that the defendant “caused” the release, improperly disposed of the waste, or was otherwise “at fault.”<sup>2370</sup> Indeed, the plaintiff need only prove that some amount of response cost has been incurred in response to a release or threatened release of a hazardous substance.<sup>2371</sup> Moreover, where hazardous substances from multiple parties are commingled, the government need not establish that a particular defendant’s release caused the incurrence of response costs.<sup>2372</sup> CERCLA defenses are limited and, although disputes about whether a particular defendant qualifies as a responsible party under section 107(a) may require factual development, defendants have usually found it difficult to avoid liability.<sup>2373</sup> Some equitable defenses do exist in an action for contribution under section 113, however, and defenses that negate an element of liability are occasionally successful.<sup>2374</sup> Resolution of a PRP’s liability as soon as practicable can facilitate negotiations on allocation and settlement.

Liability is joint and several in government actions under CERCLA unless the defendant can prove that the environmental ditch, landfill, storage container, motor vehicle, rolling stock or aircraft, or (B) any site or area where a hazardous substance has been deposited, stored, disposed of, or placed, or otherwise come to be located; but does not include any consumer product in consumer use or in any vessel.

2370. See, e.g., Acushnet Co. v. Mohasco Corp., 191 F.3d 69, 77 (1st Cir. 1999) (“To satisfy the causal element, it is usually enough to show that a defendant was a responsible party within the meaning of [section] 9607(a); that cleanup efforts were undertaken . . . and that reasonable costs were expended during the operation.”).

2371. United States v. Kramer, 757 F. Supp. 397, 417 (D.N.J. 1991); United States v. W. Processing Co., 734 F. Supp. 930, 936–37 (W.D. Wash. 1990).

2372. United States v. Alcan Aluminum Corp., 990 F.2d 711, 721 (2d Cir. 1993); United States v. Rohm & Haas Co., 939 F. Supp. 1142, 1150 (D.N.J. 1996). (“[F]inding a causal connection between [defendant’s] wastes and USA-EPA’s costs is not required by statute.”).

2373. CERCLA § 107(b) provides a defense to liability for releases caused solely by acts of God, acts of war, or certain acts or omissions of unrelated third parties. 42 U.S.C. § 9607 (West 2003).

2374. See, e.g., Gould, Inc. v. A & M Battery & Tire Serv., 232 F.3d 162, 170 (3d Cir. 2000) (Under the Superfund Recycling Equity Act, section 107(a) liability will not attach to persons “who arranged for recycling of a recycling material.”); RSR Corp. v. Avanti Dev., Inc., 69 F. Supp. 2d 1119, 1126 (S.D. Ind. 1999) (“[A]rranger liability may be defeated when a defendant . . . was not disposing of, or delivering for treatment, a hazardous substance, but was selling a useful product.”); but see United States v. A & N Cleaners & Launderers, Inc., 854 F. Supp. 229 (S.D.N.Y. 1994) (third-party defense and innocent landowner defense unavailable to PRP defendants when they failed to show they satisfied due care and precautionary requirements).

harm is divisible.<sup>2375</sup> In determining divisibility of harms, many courts have looked to section 433A of the Restatement (Second) of Torts (1965), which provides that “[d]amages for harm are to be apportioned among two or more causes where (a) there are distinct harms; or (b) there is a reasonable basis for determining the contribution of each cause to a single harm.”<sup>2376</sup> This is a narrower inquiry than that undertaken in allocating costs in contribution claims. However, factual issues relating to the divisibility of harm or apportionment may be closely related to factual issues concerning allocation. Even where these issues prove insufficient to defeat joint and several liability, they may be of critical importance in allocation.

2. Determination of remedy and damages. Under section 121(a) and (b)(1), remedies must be “cost effective.”<sup>2377</sup> EPA administrative action in selecting a remedy is likely to be determinative in a cost-recovery action by the government seeking to recover “response costs” incurred in a full or partial remediation at the site. In fact, CERCLA precludes judicial challenge of a selected remedy prior to its implementation.<sup>2378</sup> Any judicial review of the government’s choice of remedy is limited to the administrative record.<sup>2379</sup> However, parties can and do challenge, among other things, whether the 2375. See, e.g., Centerior Serv. Co. v. Acme Scrap Iron & Metal Co., 153 F.3d 344, 348 (6th Cir. 1998) (“Given the nature of hazardous waste disposal, rarely if ever will a PRP be able to demonstrate divisibility of harm, and therefore joint and several liability is the norm.”). The legislative history of the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act (SARA) reflects that Congress intended liability under CERCLA to be joint and several where appropriate. H.R. Rep. costs sought by EPA were “response costs”<sup>2380</sup> and whether the remedy was consistent with the NCP.<sup>2381</sup> When a private party brings a cost-recovery action, the burden is on the plaintiff<sup>2382</sup> to prove that the costs incurred were “necessary” at the time the remedial effort was undertaken (i.e., an actual threat existed) and that the costs were consistent with the NCP.<sup>2383</sup> In an action brought by the government, the burden is on the defendant.

3. Allocation of response costs. Allocation issues center on equitably apportioning the costs of cleanup among the defendants. Section 113(f)(1) provides that the court “may allocate response costs among liable parties using such equitable factors as the court determines are appropriate.” Because allocation decisions require the application of a host of factors to a complex factual record involving a 2380. Recoverable response costs include (1) the costs of investigating and monitoring releases of hazardous substances and costs incurred in planning and undertaking response actions, including health assessment costs incurred by the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry (Folino v. Hampden Color & Chem. Co., 832 F. Supp. 757, 763 (D. Vt. 1993)); (2) the costs of administration, including the response agency’s indirect costs associated with cleanups and related enforcement efforts (United States v. Am. Cyanamid Co., 786 F. Supp. 152, 157 (D.R.I. 1992)); (3) the costs of contractors that perform or support response actions on behalf of the response agency (United States v. Lowe, 118 F.3d 399, 404 (5th Cir. 1997)); (4) the costs of attorney time and other litigation expenses incurred by the response agency and the Department of Justice (DOJ) (United States v. Gurley, 43 F.3d 1188, 1200 (8th Cir. 1994)); (5) DOJ indirect costs (United States v. Findett Corp., 75 F. Supp. 2d 982, 989–90 (E.D. Mo. 1999); and (6) prejudgment interest (United States v. Mottolo, 695 F. Supp. 615, 631 (D.N.H. 1988)). Oversight costs, site security costs and actual costs for implementing a remedy also are recoverable. See United States v. Ottati & Goss, Inc., 900 F.2d 429, 443–45 (1st Cir. 1990) (challenging EPA overhead costs because EPA was at fault in delaying the litigation); Kelley v. Thomas Solvent Co., 790 F. Supp. 719 (W.D. Mich. 1990). Response costs have also been held to include natural resource damages that result from a release. 42 U.S.C. § 9607(a)(4)(C) (West 2003). A private plaintiff cannot recover natural resource damages, and any monies recovered by the government for natural resource damages are to be used to “restore, replace, or acquire the equivalent of such natural resources.” 42 U.S.C. § 9607(f)(1) (West 2003). But see Struhar v. City of Cleveland, 7 F. Supp. 2d 948, 951 (N.D. Ohio 1998) (response costs did not include medical monitoring).

2381. See, e.g., United States v. Chapman, 146 F.3d 1166, 1169 (9th Cir. 1998) (government must show that it incurred response costs); United States v. Hardage, 982 F.2d 1436, 1443–44 (10th Cir. 1992) (PRP could not show costs were inconsistent with the NCP simply by showing individual costs were excessive or unreasonable); United States v. N.E. Pharm. & Chem. Co., 810 F.2d 726, 747–48 (8th Cir. 1986) (holding that defendants could not dispute costs as unreasonable when they were consistent with the NCP).

CERCLA has been roundly criticized as being draconian, inefficient, and costly, with millions of dollars spent on litigation and attorney fees rather than site cleanup. CERCLA liability virtually ensures that litigation will be complex and protracted for a number of reasons. The scope of liability is extremely broad, reaching a wide range of affected parties, from individuals and corporations, both domestic and foreign, to federal, state, and municipal governments, among others.<sup>2384</sup> CERCLA draws within its net not only current and past owners and operators of a contaminated facility, but also generators and transporters of any hazardous material that was sent to the site. The quality and quantity of the waste are not factors in assessing CERCLA liability and provide no grounds for PRPs to avoid liability.<sup>2385</sup> In addition, the courts have consistently construed CERCLA provisions expansively to “avoid frustrating [its] legislative purposes.”<sup>2386</sup> For example, “owner” or “operator” liability under section 107(a) has been extended to include, among others, shareholders, officers, employees, easement holders, lenders, and contractors.<sup>2387</sup> Issues surrounding the liability of parent companies for activities of their subsidiaries<sup>2388</sup> and of the liability of successor corporations<sup>2389</sup> are still being vigorously contested,<sup>2390</sup> as are issues related to liability for passive contamination. The issue centers on whether there is a distinction between “release” and “disposal,” and whether passive movement of contaminants is sufficient for PRP liability to attach under section 107(a).<sup>2391</sup> Commonly the problem, many sites targeted by

2384. 42 U.S.C. § 9601(21) defines “person” as an “individual, firm, corporation, association, partnership, consortium, joint venture, commercial entity, United States Government, State, municipality, commission, political subdivision of a State, or any interstate body.”

2385. See Acushnet Co. v. Mohasco Corp., 191 F.3d 69, 76 (1st Cir. 1999) (CERCLA does not require that there be some minimal quantity of hazardous waste before liability will attach); B.F. Goodrich v. Betkoski, 99 F.3d 505, 517 (2d Cir. 1996) (CERCLA’s “‘hazardous substance’ definition includes even minimal amounts”). However, the Acushnet court, following in the footsteps of the Second Circuit, stated that, in apportioning costs, fairness and equity could allow “a defendant [to] avoid joint and several liability for response costs in a contribution action under § 9613(f) if it demonstrates that its share of hazardous waste . . . constitutes no more than background amounts of such substances in the environment and cannot concentrate with other wastes to produce higher amounts.” Acushnet Co., 191 F.3d at 77.

CERCLA are former hazardous waste disposal sites to which numerous companies may have sent waste over many years. Liability under CERCLA has been held to be retroactive and will attach for disposal or contamination that may have occurred in years prior to the statute's 1980 enactment.<sup>2392</sup> Indeed, one case considered whether CERCLA applied to a plant that had operated from 1886 to 1954.<sup>2393</sup> Consequently, the number of PRPs at a given site, and involved in the litigation, can number in the hundreds. These parties usually will be geographically dispersed, although CERCLA provides for nationwide service of process to ensure that these parties do not avoid, on jurisdictional grounds, responsibility for cleanup costs.<sup>2394</sup>

A CERCLA case also can be complicated because liability is strict, and CERCLA imposes liability without fault, as well as joint and several liability.<sup>2395</sup>

CERCLA (Superfund)

§ 34.2

Often, in cost-recovery actions brought under section 107, the government will name a limited number of PRPs as defendants, usually targeting those considered to have been the largest volumetric contributors of waste to the site. A defendant can avoid the imposition of joint and several liability only where it is able to show that the harm is divisible and can be reasonably apportioned.<sup>2396</sup> Defendants seeking to avoid joint and several liability bear the burden of proof on both divisibility and apportionment.<sup>2397</sup> As CERCLA liability can be extremely expensive, with site remedial costs averaging over $26 million,<sup>2398</sup> the States v. A & F Materials Co., 578 F. Supp. 1249, 1252–57 (S.D. Ill. 1984) (adopting moderate approach based on Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 443(A), § 881 (1976), but vesting the court with discretion to impose joint and several liability, even where injury is indivisible, if a fair apportionment method is available). In actions for contribution brought under CERCLA § 113, courts have held that there is no joint and several liability among defendants. Instead, the court is to equitably “allocate response costs among liable parties.” 42 U.S.C. § 9613(f)(1) (West 2003). See Redwing Carriers, Inc. v. Saraland Apartments, 94 F.3d 1489, 1514 (11th Cir. 1996).

See Redwing Carriers, Inc., 94 F.3d at 1513 (“Recognizing Congress’ intent that ‘traditional and evolving common law principles’ should define the scope of liability under CERCLA, courts have looked to the Restatement (Second) of Torts, particularly § 433A, for guidance.” (citing In re Bell Petroleum Servs., Inc., 3 F.3d 889, 895 (5th Cir. 1993))); United States v. U.S. Coast Guard, 869 F. Supp. 793, 799 (N.D. Cal. 1994), the court held that CERCLA liability could be apportioned where lead contamination at the site was divided into two discrete sections, one of which had not been used by defendants. Other courts have found imposition of joint and several liability appropriate where the site was geographically divisible. See Pneumo Abex Corp. v. Bessemer & Lake Erie R.R. Co., 936 F. Supp. 1250 (E.D. Va. 1996) (reasonable basis for apportionment); cf. United States v. Broderick Inv. Co., 862 F. Supp. 272, 277 (D. Colo. 1994) (defendant not jointly and severally liable where the harm was geographically divisible, contamination from one area has not merged or migrated to others, and defendant had no ownership interest in the land associated with one portion of site). However, although defendants have had some limited success in showing divisibility, more commonly defendants, even if able to prove the exact amount of waste they contributed to the site, find it difficult to prove the resulting proportionate harm to soil or groundwater. See O’Neil v. Picillo, 883 F.2d 176, 182 (1st Cir. 1989) (where, of 10,000 barrels excavated, only 300–400 could be attributed to any given defendant, defendants had burden of accounting for uncertainty); United States v. Ottati & Goss, Inc., 630 F. Supp. 1361, 1396 (D.N.H. 1985) (“the exact amount or quantity of deleterious chemicals or other noxious matter” couldn’t be pinpointed to each defendant); Chem-Dyne Corp., 572 F. Supp. at 811 (defendants failed to meet burden as to divisibility of harm).

specter of joint and several liability spread among only the few named PRPs, and the inclusion in section 113 of a right to contribution, encourage named PRPs to search out all other potential defendants in order to reduce the PRPs' own portion of the response costs.<sup>2399</sup> As a result, CERCLA actions can involve scores of defendants and third-party defendants, as well as multiple claims for indemnification and contribution.<sup>2400</sup>

Although CERCLA affords a right to contribution and indemnity, there is no consensus as to the statutory provision under which PRPs must proceed or the method of determining each PRP's share of liability. Circuits have generally found that non-innocent PRPs (i.e., PRPs who have liability at the site) cannot proceed under section 107 for cost recovery but are limited to bringing an action for contribution under section 113.<sup>2401</sup> The distinction is significant. Whereas there is a six-year statute for cost-recovery actions under section 107,<sup>2402</sup> actions under section 113 are subject to a three-year limitation period. Further, under section 107 a defendant sued for cost recovery may be jointly and severally liable, but would be only severally liable under section 113 where costs would be apportioned equitably by the court.<sup>2403</sup> Under either provision, however, there is no specified method of fair apportionment or factors to be considered, and models of apportionment or allocation vary widely and can result in complex technical inquiries.

tive proceedings are still ongoing. In such instances, “the litigation in the courthouse proceeds in a clumsy pas de deux with the administrative process before the agency.”<sup>2404</sup> The status of the cleanup at the time the action is filed can significantly affect both the progress of the litigation and any settlement efforts. Full information regarding the extent of contamination, including scope as well as composition, may not be available. Similarly, estimates of the total cost of remediation, central to allocation and settlement decisions, will not have been made or may still be in the early stages of development, hindering the possibility of a global settlement. Where administrative proceedings are ongoing, it is imperative that the court be informed early on of the administrative status in order to assess its likely effect on the progress of the litigation and on allocation and settlement efforts.

Efficient management of CERCLA litigation helps prevent it from overwhelming the court and the parties and assists in reducing delay. Case-management strategies differ depending on whether the case is brought by the government or by private parties and under which provision of the statute. A critical factor is the number of PRPs. Fairly small sites with a small number of PRPs will not require the oversight necessary in actions arising from larger sites. Cost-recovery and contribution actions that involve numerous parties expand the factual and legal issues. PRPs look for any avenue of escape in an attempt to either avoid or minimize CERCLA exposure, and a court can expect challenges raising a variety of issues.<sup>2405</sup> 2404. Brotman & Simandle, supra note 2349, at 188. “Discovery is being taken in the courthouse to identify new parties while the agency propounds section 104 information requests. The Record of Decision (ROD) for Phase I of a cleanup may be under judicial review while the parties battle before the agency in the Phase II RI/FS process; settlement of Phase I issues in court may also depend on the Phase II administrative process coming into focus. Efforts by PRPs in court to allocate liability shares among themselves may deter the agency from preparing a ‘nonbinding preliminary allocation of responsibility’ (NBAR) under SARA § 122(e)(3).” Id.

2405. See, e.g., United States v. Alcan Aluminum, 964 F.2d 252 (3d Cir. 1992) (also holding that CERCLA liability does not require the presence of a “threshold quantity of a hazardous substance”); United States v. Alcan Aluminum, 755 F. Supp. 531, 537 (N.D.N.Y. 1991) (presence of a hazardous substance in waste sufficient for CERCLA liability); United States v. Carolawn Co., 21 Env’t. Rep. (BNA) 2124, 2126 (D.S.C. 1984) (rejecting defendant’s argument that hazardous constituents in waste in negligible amounts were not sufficient to meet CERCLA’s “hazardous waste” definition). See also Textron, Inc. v. Barber-Coleman Co., 903 F. Supp. 1570, 1581 (W.D.N.C. 1995) (rejecting argument that hazardous substances had biodegraded over time and therefore did not cause contamination that required remediation); United States v. Conservation Chem. Co., 619 F. Supp. 162, 238–41 (W.D. Mo. 1985) (rejecting defendants’ argument that their provision of lime slurry and fly ash for cleanup of an environmental site could not expose them to CERCLA liability); New York v. Gen. Elec. Co., 592 F. Supp. 291, 297 (N.D.N.Y.

There are several questions that recur in CERCLA litigation:

- What is the status of site cleanup and the impact on the litigation of the process? For example, have any consent decrees been entered in the case, and what do they cover? Nonsettling PRPs may also challenge proposed settlement consent decrees between the government and other parties.<sup>2406</sup> Has the action been brought by the government to recover the costs of early response actions at the site, while remedial decisions remain pending?<sup>2407</sup> Is the remedy for the site appropriate and consistent with the NCP, eliminating those challenges from the litigation?<sup>2408</sup> What is the history of settlement negotiations and the best way to structure a settlement process?<sup>2409</sup> In cases where remedial decisions have yet to be made, is a stay of the litigation appropriate?

1984) (rejecting argument that used transformer oil, sold to control dust, was a product not subject to CERCLA); United States v. A & F Materials Co., 582 F. Supp. 842, 844–45 (S.D. Ill. 1984) (sale of spent “caustic solution” could be a waste for purposes of CERCLA). But see 3550 Stevens Creek Assoc. v. Barclays Bank, 915 F.2d 1355 (9th Cir. 1990) (use of asbestos as a building material did not constitute hazardous waste for purposes of CERCLA).

2406. See, e.g., United States v. Kramer, 19 F. Supp. 2d 273, 276 (D.N.J. 1998) (non-settling defendants raised numerous objections to a proposed consent decree between the government and settling defendants).

2407. See, e.g., id. (cost-recovery action filed by government because of imminent expiration of statute of limitations on an initial removal action, although remedy had not yet been implemented).

2408. In most cases the remedy (i.e., how the site is to be cleaned up) has been administratively selected by EPA. PRPs can and do raise challenges to the appropriateness of the remedy, as well as to costs that EPA (or private parties) are seeking to recover. An example of a challenge to the remedy might be that EPA is demanding the groundwater be made “drinking water” safe where the water table is not used for residential purposes. Challenges to costs being sought by EPA are typically based on the assertion that the costs were incurred pursuant to response actions inconsistent with the NCP. United States v. Kramer, 757 F. Supp. 397, 436 (D.N.J. 1991). However, arguments that costs are the result of response actions inconsistent with the NCP are not defenses to liability, but only to the recovery of specific costs. Ill. v. Grigoleit Co., 104 F. Supp. 2d 967, 980 (C.D. Ill. 2000); United States v. Cantrell, 92 F. Supp. 2d 704, 717 (S.D. Ohio 2000). Where the action involves private parties seeking cost recovery, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove that the response actions for which the costs were incurred were “necessary” and “consistent with” the NCP. 42 U.S.C. § 9607(a)(4)(B) (West 2003); City of Heath v. Ashland Oil, Inc., 834 F. Supp. 971, 976 (S.D. Ohio 1993). Response actions “carried out in compliance with the terms of an order issued by EPA pursuant to section 106 of CERCLA, or a consent decree entered into pursuant to section 122 of CERCLA will be considered ‘consistent with the NCP.’” 40 C.F.R. § 300.700(c)(3)(ii) (2003). Other response actions must be in “substantial compliance” with the NCP to allow for private cost recovery. Id. § 300.700(c)(3), (c)(5)–(6).

2409. Defendants may seek a global settlement of the litigation, which may be difficult to achieve where remedial decisions remain.

CERCLA (Superfund)

§ 34.2

- What is the likely size and scope of the case? Is referral to a magistrate judge, special master, or allocation consultant warranted in light of the likely size of the case? Are there sizeable groups of de minimis or de micromis litigants, and is it possible to settle these groups out early in the litigation? What is the feasibility of exercising supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims given the size and posture of the case? Can the case be segmented and phased and, if so, what sequence will best facilitate resolution?
- What costs are being sought and what is the best structure for achieving a fair allocation among the PRPs? Relevant to this inquiry is whether the plaintiff can prove causation and whether any PRP will be able to show divisibility of harm given the characteristics of the site and the contamination. Although CERCLA is a strict liability statute, PRPs nonetheless frequently challenge causation. Most courts have held that proof of liability under CERCLA requires only that the plaintiff prove the PRP deposited waste at a site from which there was a release or threatened release, and the government, particularly, is not required to “fingerprint” waste.<sup>2410</sup> Other factors that can affect the costs recovered by the government, or equitable allocation among the PRPs in contribution claims, include the size of the “orphan shares” and how they are handled. Orphan shares are the shares of companies that are out of business, bankrupt, or dissolved and therefore cannot be assigned a share of responsibility.

2410. See, e.g., Kalamazoo River Study Group v. Menasha Corp., 228 F.3d 648, 654 (6th Cir. 2000); Alcan Aluminum Corp., 964 F.2d at 266. But see Idaho v. Bunker Hill Co., 635 F. Supp. 665, 674 (D. Idaho 1986) (finding damage for which recovery is sought must still be causally linked to the act of the defendant where plaintiff is seeking recovery for injury to natural resources). Actual contamination of the plaintiff's property is unnecessary. Dedham Water Co. v. Cumberland Farms Dairy, Inc., 889 F.2d 1146, 1154 (1st Cir. 1989). Moreover, a plaintiff is not required to prove either that the specific defendant's waste was “released” at the site or that it caused actual contamination, to establish liability. United States v. Alcan Aluminum, 990 F.2d 711, 721 (2d Cir. 1993); United States v. Monsanto Co., 858 F.2d 160, 169 (4th Cir. 1988); Artesian Water Co. v. New Castle County, 659 F. Supp. 1269, 1281–82, aff'd, 851 F.2d 643 (3d Cir. 1988) (neighboring owners may recover response costs incurred as the result of the threat that wastes from a hazardous site could migrate into their wells). However, several courts have held that defendant's waste must have caused the plaintiff to incur response costs before liability can be imposed. See Acushnet Co. v. Coaters, Inc., 937 F. Supp. 988, 994–96 (D. Mass. 1996) (where plaintiffs were unable to prove that the defendant's creosote-treated utility pole butts contributed to response costs incurred by the plaintiffs, defendant would be absolved of CERCLA liability); Dedham Water Co., 889 F.2d at 1152–54 (defendant's waste must have caused the plaintiff to incur response costs through either release or threatened release before liability can be imposed). In addition, causation is a major player in pendent state tort claims for negligence.

34.21 Setting Up the Case

Early institution of an initial case-management order will help organize the case, provide a preliminary identification of legal and factual issues, and educate the court as to the potential size and complexity of the litigation. The case-management order can then be revised as the case progresses. Counsel will welcome a detailed agenda in advance of the conference. It is also helpful to caution the parties to anticipate schedules with firm deadlines for the filing of third-party claims or cross-claims for contribution and indemnity, amendment of the pleadings, the filing and hearing of motions, and the joinder of additional PRPs identified as the litigation progresses. Timely joinder of all PRPs is an important facet of judicial management in a CERCLA case. The court should closely monitor identification of PRPs as discovery progresses. Discuss with counsel the feasibility of an on-line depository for docket information, orders, opinions, or other information that the court or the parties may want to disseminate.

In addition to items recommended in section 11, the following actions are worth considering early on in the case and can be effected either through an order sua sponte or through a case-management order issued in conjunction with the initial Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 16 conference:

- consider whether the case is appropriate for liaison or joint counsel, soliciting views of the parties in the method of selecting such counsel, and establishing litigation committees or subcommittees to facilitate communications between various groups of parties, liaison counsel, and the court;
- consider whether the case should be bifurcated or trifurcated into two or more phases, such as liability, amount, and recoverability of response costs and allocation;
- order the early exchange of information between the parties regarding the identity of all known PRPs, including those documents reflecting a party's relationship with the site, and the production by the government to PRPs of all files relating to the site, including documents reflecting the history, operation, investigation, sampling, monitoring, and remedial actions at the site—where EPA is a party, it can be ordered to produce the data it has collected through its site investigation as well as the PRP responses to information requests under section 104(e), and its official record of decision created to determine the appropriate response under section 113(k);
- identify separate private party or government cases regarding the same site, and any pending state or administrative actions at the site, and

CERCLA (Superfund)

§ 34.21

- consider whether to consolidate private party and/or government cases;
- identify any other proceedings arguably related to the CERCLA case (e.g., toxic tort, insurance, bankruptcy);
  - require parties to disclose the settlement history, if any, and inquire into the existence of nonbinding allocation agreements or other preliminary allocation attempts—section 122(e)(3) encourages the government to provide a nonbinding preliminary allocation of responsibility (NBAR) to facilitate settlement negotiations (NBARs are not admissible);
  - if the action is based on a settlement consent decree, establish the type of consent decree, whether the decree includes all PRPs, and whether the parties anticipate objecting to or opposing the consent decree or the existence of any other procedural or substantive issue; persons or entities seeking to oppose the entry of the consent decree may seek leave to intervene during the public notice period triggered by the notice of lodging of the consent decree;
  - determine whether the case would benefit from a stay of litigation to allow the parties to engage in serious settlement negotiations or, alternatively, whether the use of alternative dispute resolution strategies would be helpful;<sup>2411</sup>
  - encourage early discussions for de minimis settlements to minimize the transaction costs incurred by small contributors—one commentator has estimated that “those costs can easily reach $200,000–$300,000 every six months for small groups of de minimis or mid-volume PRPs”;<sup>2412</sup>
  - create a schedule for the identification, discovery, and coordination of experts—a case-management order can promote cordial discussion, providing that discussions among groups of litigants will not constitute evidence of a conspiracy and that an expert’s inadvertent disclosure of confidential information during such discussion will not waive trade-secret or attorney work-product protections (in cases brought by the government, the nature and scope of permissible expert testimony may be more limited than expert testimony relevant in private party contribution actions. (For example, in government cost-recovery cases, expert testimony might be limited to liability issues, divisibility questions, and cost-accounting matters. Consider the schedule of expert identification and discovery in conjunction with the various phases of the litigation. For example, expert testimony or allocation issues in private party contribution cases will not be necessary until the contribution claims are prepared and tried, which, in a case initiated by a government cost-recovery action, is often in the third phase of litigation.);

- establish a schedule for filing and hearing of motions;
- require each side to meet and agree on a statement of the factual and legal issues in dispute, including defenses being asserted to liability and any challenges to government action, particularly challenges to the selection of remedy; stipulations as to liability, or to elements of liability, are useful in streamlining the case, particularly where the parties can agree that such issues are not seriously in dispute; and
- determine the need for a document repository and other shared databases.

34.22 Special Masters and Magistrate Judges

Generally, the use of special masters in CERCLA cases has been approved only for limited pretrial purposes. Several circuits have specifically rejected reference to a special master to make recommendations on dispositive motions or to preside at trial in CERCLA cases.<sup>2413</sup> Circuits have approved reference where there is a need for extraordinary pretrial management as a result of the large number of parties and vast amounts of evidence, in light of the significant technical issues that pervade CERCLA litigation.<sup>2414</sup> Special masters may also prove helpful in analyzing the database and assisting in the development of an allocation model.<sup>2415</sup> Allocation inquiries typically involve technically complex issues and review of sampling data, waste synergies, migration, and toxicity, as well as the remedial measures proposed. Reference to a magistrate judge may be appropriate for discovery, particularly to ensure the identification of all necessary PRPs. Reference also may facilitate settlement negotiations, thereby limiting the district judge's involvement and preserving the ability to preside on dispositive motions and at trial.<sup>2416</sup>

34.23 Related Litigation

The court and parties may need to make special efforts to identify cases and claims that are related to the CERCLA case. Such proceedings may include actions under other federal environmental statutes, such as the Resource Conservation Recovery Act (RCRA) or the Clean Water Act (CWA), as well as state judicial or administrative proceedings to enforce CERCLA-type laws. The degree of federal–state cooperation will vary. In many instances, however, both federal and state agencies are involved in cleanup enforcement actions and will be working together. In addition, CERCLA requires that any remedies comply with “all applicable or relevant and appropriate requirements” of state environmental laws, potentially adding additional issues to the CERCLA suit.<sup>2417</sup> States also may proceed under state-administered RCRA programs.<sup>2418</sup> In some instances, state requirements may be more stringent than comparable RCRA provisions.<sup>2419</sup> CERCLA also provides for citizen suits under certain circumstances, which could arise in separate actions. Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act (SARA) § 310(a) allows citizen suits against any person (including the government) “alleged to be in violation of any standard, regulation, condition, requirement, or order which has become effective” or against the government where it has failed “to perform any act or duty [under CERCLA] . . . which is not discretionary.”<sup>2420</sup> Because SARA also contains provisions limiting preenforcement review, the courts have split over how to handle citizen enforcement, including enforcement of other federal laws.<sup>2421</sup>

<sup>2416</sup> For an example of a case where a magistrate judge was used both to manage discovery matters and to serve as settlement judge, see United States v. Kramer, 19 F. Supp. 2d 273, 278 nn.7 & 9 (D.N.J. 1998).

Further, although CERCLA cases are statutory and do not involve personal injuries, the same release of hazardous substances into the environment that triggers a statutory action may also be the basis for toxic tort cases, implicating the same defendants and raising similar issues. Other private state law claims, filed in state court or in federal court based on diversity, include insurance coverage disputes and tort claims for personal injury or property damage, typically based on negligence, nuisance, trespass, or strict liability. Finally, one or more PRPs may be in bankruptcy, introducing yet another layer of complexity.<sup>2422</sup>

If there is related litigation, consider whether coordination with the CERCLA litigation is feasible. For example, coordination of insurance coverage litigation with a CERCLA case could enhance the prospect of settlement of both groups of cases. Discovery of insurance information, however, should proceed as permitted under Rule 26(b). The same group of insurers often will have carried the policies for many of the PRPs. The court may want to avoid any formal consolidation, however, because the principal issues in these actions are distinct. Insurance litigation turns on contractual arrangements.<sup>2423</sup> Incorporating coverage questions into a larger CERCLA action can involve numerous insurers located across the country and can require application of the laws of different states. As noted by one jurist, not only are state courts “better prepared” to decide coverage cases, but “even if similar insureds were grouped together into ‘omnibus’ declaratory judgment motion practice, individual situations might not be congruent.”<sup>2424</sup> In addition, coverage litigation can involve more than one waste site at which the insured is a PRP, and therefore involve facts and issues not relevant to the CERCLA litigation at hand. Consider, however, whether an early order requiring production of documents and depositions produced during discovery in related cases would assist in streamlining discovery in the CERCLA case.<sup>2425</sup>

2422. Generally, governmental regulatory actions, such as EPA actions under CERCLA, are exempt from the automatic stay provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, but a money judgment obtained in a CERCLA proceeding cannot be executed without approval from the bankruptcy court. 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(4) (West 2003). See, e.g., *United States v. § 34.24

The court should also consider whether it is appropriate to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims<sup>2426</sup> or whether to reject such jurisdiction to avoid unduly complicating the litigation.<sup>2427</sup> In cases involving out-of-state defendants, typical in CERCLA actions, constitutional, statutory, and fairness issues arise when nationwide service of process is used to obtain personal jurisdiction over parties to supplemental state law claims lacking an independent basis for federal jurisdiction.<sup>2428</sup> Such issues include whether state law claims introduce a right to a jury trial in a case that otherwise would be a bench trial, and whether the jury's findings of fact affect the outcome of what would otherwise be nonjury issues.<sup>2429</sup>

34.24 Organizing Counsel<sup>2430</sup>

CERCLA cases are strong candidates for the appointment of liaison or lead counsel, in light of the number of parties usually involved in such cases. Counsel should (1) be sensitive to conflicts between their role as liaison counsel and the representation of their individual client; (2) keep all other counsel informed and encourage their participation in the direction of the group's strategy; and (3) ensure that a balance is maintained between the "common needs of the group and the divergent needs of an individual member . . . ."<sup>2431</sup>

Organization of counsel is essential in order for the court and the parties to be able to communicate effectively. It minimizes duplicative discovery and motion practice and provides the court with an individual liaison for each group to contact about scheduling and other nonsubstantive matters. It also limits the number of attorneys seeking to argue motions or file papers. Counsel should be advised of relevant guidelines, such as the avoidance of duplicative efforts (e.g., providing in a case-management order that a party waives its right to raise an issue unless it is first presented to a committee of counsel). Subject-matter subcommittees can be created to work on what are likely to be common issues relating to defenses, liability (e.g., standards for successor liability), joinder of parties, jurisdiction, discovery, remediation, and allocation. These committees can be delegated authority to represent the parties in that group for purposes of litigation, management, and trial preparation. To do this, the court will need to determine a fair and efficient grouping of the parties. Lead or liaison counsel then can be selected after consultation with the groups of parties as to method and manner of selection, as well as compensation.

At the outset, it is useful to become familiar with the parties' own efforts to organize themselves in response to EPA's prelitigation investigation at the site. Often the primary PRPs will have formed a group that was represented in negotiations with EPA by common or joint counsel, and this same counsel may also be representing the PRP group in the subsequent litigation. These PRPs are also likely to have grouped themselves (usually by size) in a manner they have already determined to be fair and effective—at least for administrative purposes and for remediating the site—and that may be effective for the litigation as well. In such cases, the primary PRPs also may have established a binding allocation agreement among themselves and reached agreement on how any monies will be distributed, thus minimizing conflicts and cross-claims. The focus would then shift to an effective organization of the remaining parties, usually third-party defendants. In these third-party matters and in cases where no agreement exists within the primary PRP group, conflicting interests are common, and the court and the parties will need to be sensitive to the problems that can arise from grouping parties that may have adverse claims.

The method of organization may vary. One approach is to allow the parties to organize themselves, nominate lead and liaison counsel, propose a mode of payment, define the authority of lead and liaison counsel, and define a committee structure. It may be sufficient for the court to suggest these topics as an agenda for a meeting of counsel. The judicial role would then be simply to evaluate any proposal to ensure that it meets the court's litigation management needs, and to issue an appropriate order for its implementation with any necessary modifications. The judge, of course, retains the final authority over whether to enter an order adopting the parties' recommendations.

Another alternative is to organize the parties based on similar interests with respect to the legal issues, such as using the statutory classifications for liability set out in section 107(a): owners, operators, generators, and transport-

§ 34.25

ers.<sup>2432</sup> A third approach is to organize the parties by volumetric share of waste sent to the site, thus separating large generators from small or de minimis participants.<sup>2433</sup> This is a particularly useful classification for settlement purposes. In fact, the court may establish a separate “settlement committee” of counsel that focuses solely on settlement.<sup>2434</sup> Other relevant communities of interest for facilitating settlement may be defined by the type of substance a group of PRPs sent to the site, its toxicity, or where it is located on the site.<sup>2435</sup> Regardless of how the parties are organized, the court should ensure that they have agreed to a method of funding (typically pro rata) of group activities or other joint services, as well as the method of compensation of liaison counsel, and that this agreement is put in writing. For example, the parties may undertake joint expert studies, retain an allocation consultant, or engage in private mediation.<sup>2436</sup>

34.25 Centralized Document Management

CERCLA litigation involves large numbers of documents. Consider the feasibility, in light of the number of parties typically involved, of a central document depository or shared database of documents produced during discovery. The document depository can be managed through an independent entity, with the costs shared pro rata among the parties. Alternatively, to avoid the costs of establishing and maintaining a separate and independent depository, the parties may be willing to vest lead counsel with the responsibility of establishing and maintaining a uniform system of organization for all documents produced. Counsel would also be responsible for providing access for the inspection and copying of documents to all parties, with the parties paying the cost through the agreed on fee arrangement. Document databases can significantly reduce the associated cost and expense of discovery. Large volumes of documents can be copied and distributed economically to the parties. They then can be inspected and copied by interested parties, reducing the burden of production on the producing party and the associated costs for all parties. However the depository is set up, its custodian should be charged with keeping a copy of all documents produced in the case, from whatever source, as well as other litigation documents (such as responses to interrogatories, document requests, and deposition transcripts). Creating a central document depository or a computerized document storage system can help ensure that newly joined parties have access to the product of prior discovery and can hold demands for additional discovery to a minimum. The benefits and detriments of using a document depository are explored more fully in section 11.444.

34.26 Narrowing the Issues<sup>2437</sup>

Parties often plead defenses that they do not intend to pursue seriously or that fly in the face of settled law. The initial conference can be designed to eliminate such unmeritorious arguments. Requiring each side or group to meet and develop an agreed-on statement of the factual and legal issues in dispute, as well as using the Rule 16 conference to clarify any ambiguities, should help identify the genuinely controverted issues and force abandonment, or quick disposition, of marginal issues. Pressing the lawyers to identify facts supporting each element of each claim or defense and to tie the claim or defense to the legal framework of CERCLA may also help reveal the strengths and weaknesses of parties' positions. Issues can then be outlined in a logical and practical sequence, to facilitate management of motions that might result, for example, in the dismissal of parties to the litigation (e.g., if a party falls within section 107(a) or if one of the narrow statutory defenses applies), or even of the entire litigation (e.g., if the government's remedy is consistent with the NCP). Secondary issues can then be identified and incorporated into the case-management plan, which may also include a proposed structure for settlement discussions and trial. Organizing issues in terms of the liability, the amount and recoverability of costs, and the allocation phases of CERCLA litigation is helpful.

Using the Rule 16 statements, the judge can group types of motions and schedule filing of consolidated motions on similar issues according to a time schedule to avoid duplicative and piecemeal motions. For example, the court may establish a brief window within which particular types of motions may be filed, such as motions under Rule 12 or Rule 56. Certain motions and third-party complaints can be deemed to include all defendants, and answers to third-party complaints can be deemed to include all cross-claims and counterclaims against the third-party plaintiffs. There is sometimes, however, an impact of deeming cross-claims and counterclaims to encompass parties whose liability is determined to be de minimis. Exempting such parties from a deeming order avoids imposing disproportionate risks of extensive liability on them. Another option is to defer the time for filing cross-claims until after de minimis parties have settled the claims against them and generally obtained the benefit of a bar against contribution claims as permitted under sections 122(g)(2) and (5).<sup>2438</sup>

Summary judgment is a particularly effective tool for eliminating tenuous claims and defenses in CERCLA cases.<sup>2439</sup> Over the years, many issues raised by defendants in CERCLA litigation have been resolved, including retroactivity, joint and several liability, and whether CERCLA violates the Commerce Clause or Due Process Clause.<sup>2440</sup> In addition, the courts have interpreted CERCLA broadly in order to effectuate the statute's remedial purpose,<sup>2441</sup> and well-settled case law, particularly on the scope of CERCLA liability, allows courts to dispose summarily of a number of challenges.<sup>2442</sup> Summary judgment on the issue of liability is common, often leaving only issues of allocation remaining

One commentator summarizes that federal courts "are shaping CERCLA by judicial interpretation to a degree rarely if ever seen for any other statute." In the first ten years after the enactment of the Superfund, more than 1,000 reported decisions were handed down that bear on Superfund issues. Topol & Snow, supra note 2350, § 3.8.E.2.

2442. However, some issues believed to have been resolved have been reexamined, while other cases have suggested a reluctance toward any further or continued expansion of CERCLA. See, e.g., United States v. Bestfoods, 524 U.S. 51 (1998) (nothing in CERCLA suggests "that the entire corpus of state corporation law is to be replaced" and holding parent corporation cannot be held liable unless corporate veil pierced); ABB Indus. Sys., Inc. v. Prime Tech., Inc., 120 F.3d 351, 358 (2d Cir. 1997) (former owners and operators not liable for passive migration of contaminants); Dico, Inc., 189 F.R.D. at 543 (finding that the Supreme Court decision in *E. to be decided.<sup>2443</sup> Summary judgment may also be appropriate to determine the amount of the government's costs in government-initiated cost-recovery actions. Consider using evidentiary hearings under Rule 43(e) to determine the existence of a genuine issue of material fact. It may sometimes be appropriate not only to determine liability through summary judgment, but also to allocate responsibility for paying the response costs.<sup>2444</sup>

Particularly important in CERCLA litigation are prompt rulings on all motions, which can help clarify liability and clear the path for the parties to allocate damages among themselves. Where a primary party's liability turns on a legal issue of first impression, the court should balance the advantages of certifying the questions for interlocutory appeal before allocating damages against the disadvantages of delaying the progress of the case.<sup>2445</sup>

34.27 Joinder

Incentives for locating all possible PRPs can lead to a continuous parade of new parties. The pretrial conference can assist the court in assessing the likely number of additional PRPs that the parties may seek to add and help ensure control over the size and shape of the litigation.<sup>2446</sup> Where EPA's investigation

X-L Eng'g Co., 227 F.3d 776 (7th Cir. 2000) (partial summary judgment granted on issue of liability, and trial ordered for amount for which defendant was responsible). The biggest statutory area in which liability is disputed, and which is often difficult to resolve on summary judgment, is "arranger" liability. See, e.g., Mainline Contracting Corp. v. Chopra-Lee, Inc., 109 F. Supp. 2d 110, 188 (W.D.N.Y. 2000); RSR Corp. v. Avanti Dev., Inc., 69 F. Supp. 2d 1119, 1126 (S.D. Ind. 1999); Freeport-McMoran Res. Partners Ltd. P'ship v. B-B Paint Corp., 56 F. Supp. 823, 853 (E.D. Mich. 1999).

2444. See United States v. R.W. Meyer, Inc., 932 F.2d 568 (6th Cir. 1991) (affirming summary judgment allocating response costs among three entities). However, resolution of equitable allocation issues may not be possible where the court has yet to determine the criteria it will use for this process in order to permit the parties to determine what facts are relevant and not in dispute.

2445. See United States v. Fleet Factors Corp., 901 F.2d 1550 (11th Cir. 1990) (interlocutory appeal taken to obtain ruling on whether district court correctly interpreted and applied CERCLA provision in denying motion for summary judgment by holder of a security interest in contaminated real property). When the subject of the interlocutory appeal is not central to the entire case, the court may decide to continue with other aspects of the litigation while the appeal is pending. See supra section 15.12.

2446. See, e.g., City of Wichita v. Aero Holdings, Inc., No. 98-1360-MLB, 2000 WL 1480490, at *2 (D. Kan. Apr. 7, 2000) (allowing plaintiffs to add over 700 third-party defendants would cause case to "'mushroom' in all directions and greatly delay resolution of the principal case"). The court can guard against indiscriminate and fragmented joinder by requiring the parties to set forth in detail the factual basis for each joinder motion. See, e.g., Brotman & Simandle, supra note 2349, at 183-84 (suggesting party seeking joinder be required to respond to a

has been exhaustive, the number of unidentified PRPs remaining will be significantly less. Similarly, a primary PRP group that has undertaken remediation at the site will often have retained an outside investigator who will have identified most other locatable PRPs, again reducing the number of parties likely to be joined at a later date. The judge is advised to discourage joinder of insignificant parties, or parties with no more than de micromis liability. Discussions with counsel about the feasibility of joinder of very small or de micromis parties will also assist in ensuring that the parties and the court have a realistic view of the scope of the case. Each new party will likely want to catch up with discovery and motion practice, thereby delaying the progress of the action.<sup>2447</sup> Furthermore, entry of a new party may create a conflict of interest for counsel or grounds for recusal by the judge.<sup>2448</sup>

Targeting the first phase of discovery at identifying all PRPs and developing information about the quantity and quality of waste produced by each PRP during the history of the site can minimize complications arising from joinder issues. Moreover, discovery targeted at site owners and operators, and at transporters, often generates information concerning other PRPs. A reasonable but firm deadline, which might be as long as a year, is advisable for adding parties or cross-claims, absent special issues in individual instances. Once the deadline for joinder is reached, the parties and the court will have an overview of the size and scope of the litigation. At that point, pretrial, settlement, and trial plans can proceed, addressing issues relating to all the parties, while consideration of late presented claims is deferred. This approach may be conducive to a global disposition of the entire litigation. General discovery and other proceedings are sometimes stayed until the joinder deadline. In the interest of avoiding unnecessary paper, the case-management order can provide that all parties joined will be deemed to have denied the claim, obviating the need for a formal pleading. Rulings on Rule 12 motions can also be deemed to apply to new parties absent special circumstances.<sup>2449</sup> standard set of interrogatories as to factual basis for joining new party as, among other things, “an augment to Rule 11 concerning the integrity of the pleading” and to reduce “the risk of misjoinder or baseless joinder”).

2447. See, e.g., City of Wichita, 2000 WL 1480490, at *2 (where court stated that “[c]ase management of more than 700 parties would unequivocally require the implementation of new orders, some of which would necessarily impose arbitrary discovery limitations . . . [which] would be unfair . . . when the current defendants have enjoyed liberal discovery”).

2448. See United States v. New Castle County, 116 F.R.D. 19, 24 (D. Del. 1987) (denying motion to name and realign various parties; court noted that adding new parties after deadline would likely produce conflicts of interest for current counsel, would interfere with pretrial and trial case-management plans, and would likely disrupt settlement efforts).

2449. See supra section 11.32.

Another approach is to postpone or stay joinder issues, contribution claims, and other cross-claims until the litigation against the initial defendants has been resolved. In cases with large numbers of PRPs, this keeps the organization relatively simple while a plan to remedy the site or to determine the costs of the remedy is devised. The primary PRPs may also be more inclined to reach out-of-court settlements with third parties without the expense of litigation. The disadvantage is that parties joined later may wish to relitigate those issues or reopen discovery. This phased approach is more feasible where the government has initiated the case, or in some contested consent decrees, but it does not work well where the government is not involved in the litigation and the primary PRP group has filed a separate action for contribution.

A third approach is to schedule rolling joinder dates. Rather than permitting motions for joinder at any time, rolling dates give the parties windows within which to file joinder motions, permitting a consolidated hearing on all joinder motions filed during that window, and lessening the burden on the court as well as the parties. Similar orders regarding responsive pleadings and discovery would apply as well. Whatever the approach to the joinder of new parties, possible statute-of-limitations issues, both federal and state, should be considered.

34.28 Managing Discovery

The preservation of evidence is critical in CERCLA cases. In some instances, only a few invoices or the recollection of one or two persons can connect a company to a site, while other cases may involve over a million documents.<sup>2450</sup> Because relevant evidence may be decades old, PRPs may seek to preserve evidence before filing a complaint. In such cases, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 27 authorizes prefilings depositions of percipient witnesses (and, when feasible, the production or preservation of documents and other tangible things).<sup>2451</sup>

2450. See, e.g., Fike Chemical Superfund Site, Panel Discussion and Perspectives on Multi-Party CERCLA Litigation, Federal Judicial Center, Conference on Environmental Law and Natural Resources at 2 (Oct. 7, 1997) (when operator of site went out of business there were over 1.2 million business records “reflecting tens, if not hundreds of thousands of transactions with dozens of customers”).

2451. See In re Bay County Middlegrounds Landfill Site v. Kuhlman Elec. Corp., 171 F.3d 1044 (6th Cir. 1999) (district court did not abuse discretion in granting petition to take prefilings deposition); In re Petition of Delta Quarries & Disposal Inc., 139 F.R.D. 68 (M.D. Pa. 1991) (granting petition to depose ailing witness alleged to have personal knowledge of identity of companies that disposed hazardous substances at landfill fifteen years earlier).

Once the action has been initiated, CERCLA cases generally require a well-thought-out, structured discovery plan to avoid duplicative discovery, to minimize the burden to the litigants and to the court, and to create a credible database. Multiple, independent waves of discovery should be discouraged in favor of a coordinated approach. Initially, the parties can be required to engage in an informal exchange of information with appropriate protective orders for sensitive relevant information. A number of parties may have responded to EPA information requests under section 104(e), and EPA will have amassed a vast amount of documents, reports, studies, and other information regarding the site, all of which can proceed without a formal request if EPA is a party, or through a coordinated request if EPA is not a litigant. Similarly, the site owner and/or operator, almost always a party, can informally produce any records reflecting transportation and shipment of waste sent to the site, including volume and type of material.

Included among effective discovery tools, particularly in cases where joint or liaison counsel have been appointed, are the development and use of a master set of interrogatories and requests for production for each side or group. An early set of agreed-on interrogatories seeking information from PRPs as to where and how records relating to the generation and disposal of wastes were maintained, as well as identifying those persons with knowledge of generation and disposal practices, can streamline document production and make depositions more efficient. Potential areas of inquiry include the following: site investigations done by any party, including any statements taken; records of any sampling, testing, removal, or remediation conducted at the site; documents in the possession of the parties reflecting materials, hazardous and nonhazardous, shipped to the site; and contracts or other agreements relating to disposal of waste material. Depositions should also be coordinated to preclude multiple depositions of the same party, with designated counsel responsible for conducting the depositions representing their respective sides or groups of parties. One alternative is to require that all document discovery be completed prior to taking any depositions except custodial depositions. Efforts should be made to minimize discovery imposed on de minimis parties at the early stages, where it is highly likely that they will settle out of the litigation.

The need for data concerning the parties' respective contributions to the contamination at the site coincides with the need to identify PRPs promptly, but newly joined parties should not be permitted to delay the discovery process while they are getting up to speed in the case. Towards this end, the discovery plan can provide that, except upon a showing of good cause, new parties will be deemed to have accepted the discovery previously propounded or depositions by counsel on behalf of their "group." This would not preclude a party with an individual interest not addressed by previous discovery from obtaining this information. Further, coordinating deadlines for joinder of parties with the schedule set forth in the discovery plan will help ensure that all parties, including those newly joined, have a fair opportunity to conduct adequate discovery. As discussed earlier, a centralized document repository and computerized data storage and retrieval can facilitate access to all available documents and reduce discovery disputes at the same time that it creates a credible database. Without a credible database, the parties and the court cannot determine whether the proposed remedy is based on faulty assumptions about the nature of the problems, and the parties are not likely to accept proposed settlement allocations. All phases of discovery should be coordinated with plans for resolving motions and for structuring the trial (e.g., on a bifurcated or trifurcated basis).

34.29 Scientific and Technical Expert Testimony

CERCLA cases are prone to battles of experts in highly technical areas, such as chemistry, hydrology, and geology. Environmental experts testify on aspects such as site conditions, migration of contaminants, geological conditions, and toxicity. Continuous testing and sampling of soil and groundwater at a given site, as well as analyzing the synergistic and migratory capacities of contaminants, are often necessary. At a minimum, procedures should be adopted to produce a common database for the experts to analyze. The judge, to reduce unproductive contentiousness and keep the focus on genuine issues, may also encourage creation of an experts' committee with responsibility for defining issues, testing soil and allegedly hazardous materials, creating joint databases, developing proposed factual stipulations, and splitting samples.<sup>2452</sup> Some judges have directed the parties to have their experts meet without counsel to identify and consider the technical issues relating to the proposed remedial design.<sup>2453</sup> Such a meeting can uncover erroneous assumptions and avoid wasting resources on a remedy that might be technically flawed. In addition, such expert assistance may prove helpful in the settlement or allocation process. Where the case appears to be headed for trial, or where motions for summary judgment rely in part on scientific evidence, consider how best to handle Daubert issues.<sup>2454</sup>

34.31 Allocation

Allocation bears significantly on both settlement and trial. Once liability is established, allocation is usually the most hotly contested issue in CERCLA litigation. Defendants try to prove the harm is divisible in order to avert imposition of joint and several liability in cost-recovery cases by the government, as well as challenging the method for equitable apportionment in private party actions. Other arguments raised by PRPs seeking to avoid joint and several liability include (1) that the material was a product, not a waste; (2) that the amount of hazardous constituents in the waste was negligible; and (3) that the configuration of the waste was such that no hazardous constituents could escape.

A determination as to the divisibility of harm has been held to be “intensely factual,”<sup>2455</sup> raising technically complex issues, such as relative toxicity, migratory potential, synergistic capacities, and degree of migration of a particular waste, and these issues require the testimony of various technical experts. Apportionment based on equitable principles implicates these as well as other considerations.<sup>2456</sup> The statutory status of the PRP also can affect decisions on allocation. For example, under section 107(a), both generators and transporters are liable for waste sent to the site. In addition to the liability of the corporation, officers can be liable as individuals. This could mean that two parties are responsible for the same waste. Equity suggests that an apportionment scheme take this into account in assessing the amount to be paid by each.

One of the major stumbling blocks in the allocation process is determining the allocation method and the factors to consider. CERCLA § 113(f)(1) gives the court broad discretion in adopting factors to be weighed among PRPs.<sup>2457</sup>

2455. United States v. Alcan Aluminum Corp., 990 F.2d 711, 722 (2d Cir. 1993).

2456. For a discussion of some of the “equities” balanced by a court in rejecting toxicity as a basis for allocation, see Akzo Nobel Coatings, Inc. v. Aigner Corp., 197 F.3d 302, 305 (7th Cir. 1999).

2457. CERCLA § 113(f)(1) provides that “in resolving contribution claims, the court may allocate response costs among liable parties using such equitable factors as the court determines are appropriate.” 42 U.S.C. § 96113(f)(1) (West 2003). See also Kerr-McGee Chem. Corp. v. Lefton Iron & Metal Co., 14 F.3d 321, 326 (7th Cir. 1994) (court may consider factors such as the relative fault of the parties, relevant “Gore factors,” see infra note 2460, and any contracts

The simplest form of allocation is a volumetric allocation, basing apportionment on the amount of waste shipped to a site relative to the total amount of waste.<sup>2458</sup> Another basis for apportionment is to assign the parties to “tiers,” again typically determined by volume, and then apportion liability by tier, with each PRP in that tier assuming a pro rata share. The courts have also looked at factors such as the volume and toxicity of each party’s hazardous waste,<sup>2459</sup> the degree of involvement and the degree of care exercised by a party, and the extent to which a party cooperated with public officials to prevent harm to the public. These are known as the Gore factors<sup>2460</sup> and are perceived as providing a good but not exhaustive starting point for apportionment.<sup>2461</sup> Other relevant factors have included the economic status of the parties, traditional equitable defenses such as mitigation, and the expense of doing cleanup work, among between the parties regarding allocation); Env’t Transp. Sys. v. Enesco, Inc., 969 F.2d 503, 509 (7th Cir. 1992) (court has “power to weigh and consider relevant factors, including [relative] fault”).

2458. Boeing Co. v. Cascade Corp., 207 F.3d 1177, 1187 (9th Cir. 2000) (allocation by volume is reasonable basis for allocation); Acushnet Co. v. Mohasco Corp., 191 F.3d 69, 78 (1st Cir. 1999) (“[T]here is nothing to suggest that Congress intended to impose far-reaching liability on every party who is responsible for only trace levels of waste.”); Bancamerica Commercial Corp. v. Mosher Steel, Inc., 100 F.3d 792 (10th Cir. 1996); Kalamazoo River Study Group v. Rockwell Int’l, 107 F. Supp. 2d 817, 840 (W.D. Mich. 2000) (finding quantity of PCBs released was most important Gore factor under circumstances). Although pro rata apportionment is also a very simple method of apportionment and may be appropriate in some cases, courts have held that it was “at the very least, Congress’s intent that courts should equitably allocate costs of cleanup according to the relative culpability of the parties rather than an automatic equal shares rule.” Env’t Transp. Sys., 969 F.2d at 508.

2459. EPA considers toxicity to be “causally related to the cost of cleanup for only a few substances (e.g., PCBs, dioxin).” Superfund Program: Non-Binding Preliminary Allocations of Responsibility (NBAR), 52 Fed. Reg. 19,919, 19,920 (May 28, 1987) [hereinafter NBAR]. EPA has further noted that the scientific community disagrees about degrees of toxicity and synergistic effects. Id.

others.<sup>2462</sup> Several courts have also used a fault-based approach to apportionment.<sup>2463</sup> Sometimes, zero allocation might be appropriate with respect to certain PRPs, as where, for example, the PRP's disposal was "too inconsequential to affect the cost of cleaning up significantly."<sup>2464</sup> In short, the court can consider "several factors, a few factors, or only one determining factor . . . depending on the totality of the circumstances presented."<sup>2465</sup> A preliminary determination as to the relevant factors can streamline both discovery and trial. Alternatively, the court can permit the introduction of all evidence deemed relevant to the issue by the parties and then make a determination as to which factors have the most bearing on apportionment under the particular circumstances.

Orphan shares—shares of companies that are bankrupt or no longer in business—can complicate the allocation process. Related issues arising in conjunction with these now-defunct companies include whether or when a corporation is "dead and buried" for purposes of CERCLA, the liability of successor corporations, and the impact of a discharge in bankruptcy on a CERCLA claim. In the allocation process these shares must be borne by someone, and the "determination of who absorbs liability for orphan shares can have significant consequences for PRPs, because the unattributable amount of

For example, EPA, in preparing an NBAR under CERCLA § 122(e), in addition to looking at volume and toxicity, also looks at criteria included in the interim settlement policy, such as the "strength of evidence tracing the wastes at a site to PRPs, ability of PRPs to pay, . . . public interest consideration, . . . [and] inequities and aggravating factors . . ." NBAR, supra note 2459, at 19,919. liability . . . can be quite substantial.”<sup>2466</sup> A number of options are available, including apportionment among economically viable defendants only,<sup>2467</sup> allocation among all liable defendants,<sup>2468</sup> and apportionment among all viable parties, plaintiffs, and defendants.<sup>2469</sup>

Another allocation determination issue is how to account for partial settlements. Many CERCLA actions will involve multiple settlement agreements. Where the plaintiff is the government, the SARA amendments provide that any settlement received “reduces the potential liability of the others by the amount of the settlement.”<sup>2470</sup> In government-initiated actions, this translates into a dollar-for-dollar reduction in liability for nonsettlers.<sup>2471</sup> A pro tanto approach requires conducting a fairness hearing before the court approves a partial settlement.<sup>2472</sup> Unresolved is how partial settlements should be credited in private party actions. Some courts have applied the pro tanto approach to partial settlement credits in private CERCLA cases. A second method uses a “proportionate share” approach whereby nonsettlor liability is reduced by the proportionate share of fault of the settling defendants.<sup>2473</sup> Usually, this approach re-

2471. This approach, called pro tanto, is codified in the Uniform Contribution Among Tortfeasors Act (UCATA), 12 U.L.A. 98 (2002). See In re Acushnet River & New Bedford Harbor, 712 F. Supp. 1019, 1027 (D. 2473. The proportionate share approach is found in the Uniform Comparative Fault Act (UCFA), 12 U.L.A. 57 (2002). For cases that have applied the proportionate approach in private quires the settling defendant's percentage of fault be determined at trial in order to reduce the total damages to be attributed to the nonsettlor.<sup>2474</sup> One practical advantage of a proportionate share approach over a pro tanto approach is that extensive fairness hearings are not required.<sup>2475</sup> The plaintiff, however, would still have to litigate the responsibility of the settling party in order to determine the amount recoverable from nonsettlers, arguably negating some of the benefits of settlement.<sup>2476</sup> The majority of courts considering the issue of partial settlement credits have adopted the proportionate share approach.<sup>2477</sup> Others have held that the choice of approaches is within the sound discretion of the court, to be determined on a case-by-case basis.<sup>2478</sup>

There are several alternatives to consider in approaching allocation. One is to encourage the retention of an allocation consultant or expert, with costs apportioned among the parties and with possible settlement as a goal.<sup>2479</sup> The use of allocation experts has grown in CERCLA cases, and their function is to assist in estimating PRP shares, taking into account volume, toxicity, contribution to the cost of remediation, and similar factors. Second, the court can encourage the use of joint experts to share data and information. Often, the original PRP group will have established a preliminary allocation among themselves in order to apportion the immediate costs of cleanup,<sup>2480</sup> may have agreed to a process to determine binding allocation and distribution of any party actions, see, e.g., United States v. W. Processing Co., Inc., 756 F. Supp. 1424, 1430 (W.D. Wash. 1990); Lyncott Corp. v. Chem. Waste Mgmt., 690 F. Supp. 1409, 1419 (E.D. Pa. 1988).

monies received from litigation,<sup>2481</sup> and may have already retained an independent consultant or arbiter. This process may be proceeding in tandem with the litigation. EPA may also have established an informal allocation, based on its investigation, or may have prepared a nonbinding allocation report (NBAR) under section 122(e)(3), either of which can provide a good starting point for a final allocation.<sup>2482</sup>

34.32 Settlement

CERCLA cases present unique settlement challenges, and settlement plays an ongoing role in most such cases, regardless of their posture. EPA has recognized the importance of locating as many PRPs as possible as the first step in the settlement process, noting that this step is “one of the most critical to success.”<sup>2483</sup> CERCLA expressly encourages settlement and was designed “so that the threat of disproportionate liability would encourage parties to settle early with the United States and discourage dilatory and strategic behavior.”<sup>2484</sup> The SARA amendments authorize EPA to pursue settlements, and section 122 provides specific procedures and provisions to encourage settlement.<sup>2485</sup> Section 122 also contains provisions governing the scope of the covenants that can be provided. For example, except in “extraordinary circumstances,” settlement agreements must include “reopeners” for future liability arising from “un-

2481. See United States v. Amoco Chem. Co., 212 F.3d 274, 277 (5th Cir. 2000) (Although not previously obligated to execute a specific trust agreement, and having objected to trust agreement setting forth allocation, the defendant’s signature on amended consent decree, by its terms, created an obligation to “negotiate with the other settling defendants and agree to some system of allocation.”).

2482. An NBAR, once issued, acts in effect as an offer of settlement. If the NBAR is accepted by the PRPs, EPA must provide a written explanation for rejecting the PRPs’ offer. 42 U.S.C. § 9622(e)(3)(E) (West 2003).

2483. Streamlining, supra note 2364. See, e.g., United States v. Cannons Eng’g Corp., 899 F.2d 79, 83 (1st Cir. 1990) (EPA notified 671 PRPs of possible liability).

2485. See 42 U.S.C. § 9622 (West 2003); Streamlining, supra note 2364 (“The new provisions [of SARA] related to special notice, information sharing and negotiating moratoria are particularly important. They attempt to strike a balance between the competing demands of prompting more settlements, conserving limited government resources, and minimizing the delay in the clean-up process.”). See, e.g., United States v. SCA Servs., Inc., 827 F. Supp. 526, 530 (N.D. Ind. 1993); Am. Cyanamid Co. v. King Indus., Inc., 814 F. Supp. 215, 218 (D.R.I. 1993); Commercial Bank-Detroit v. Allen Indus., Inc., 769 F. Supp. 1408 (E.D. Mich. 1991). CERCLA § 122 includes, among others, provisions for mixed funding and de minimis settlements that seek to ameliorate the harshness of the Act’s strict joint and several liability. 42 U.S.C. §§ 9622(b)(1), 9622(g) (West 2003).

known conditions.<sup>2486</sup> EPA has issued numerous policies and guidance documents to inform PRPs of its approach as to these settlement provisions. For example, EPA has issued guidelines to govern settlements with de minimis and de micromis parties and to offer those parties as much finality as possible.<sup>2487</sup> Where EPA has not identified de minimis parties or at least a de minimis volume of disposal, consider encouraging the agency or the parties to do so. Similarly, at a site where a significant amount of waste is attributable to PRPs that are insolvent or defunct, EPA can provide up to a specified amount of “orphan share” funding as a settlement incentive.<sup>2488</sup> EPA also enters into settlements with major PRPs (typically consent decrees with the United States), which can include agreements to perform all site cleanup, to undertake only certain work at the site, and to pay for all or only a part of past costs at the site, leaving the remaining issues for further negotiations.<sup>2489</sup> In virtually every instance, however, some form of allocation will have to be agreed to or developed by the PRPs for any real progress on settlement, whether in an enforcement action by the government or a private action for contribution.

2486. Id. §§ 9622(c)(1), 9622(f)(2)(6).

2487. Id. § 9622(g)(1). The statutory goal is to release such parties before transaction costs accumulate. De minimis settlement decrees can also include reopeners, although the DOJ rarely will include a reopener in a de minimis settlement. Typically, however, de minimis settlements include a premium to account for the possibility that costs were underestimated, and in case the de minimis parties have obtained finality. See, e.g., Cannons Eng'g Corp., 899 F.2d 79, at 88.

2488. Orphan share funding is in effect a form of compromise that reflects the shares of defunct PRPs and results in the government recovering less than 100% of its claim from the settling defendants. See Office of Enforcement Compliance & Assurance, EPA, Interim Guidance on Orphan Share Compensation for Settlers of Remedial Design/Remedial Action and Non-Time-Critical Removals (1996), available at <http://cfpub.epa.gov/compliance/resources/policies/cleanup/superfund/> (last visited Oct. 21, 2003); Office of Enforcement Compliance & Assurance, EPA, Addendum to the “Interim CERCLA Settlement Policy” Issued on Dec. 5, 1984 (1997), available at <http://cfpub.epa.gov/compliance/resources/policies/cleanup/superfund/> (last visited Oct. 21, 2003). EPA has also issued guidance interpreting section 122(b)(3), which allows EPA to set up “special accounts” to hold money that is collected from PRPs to be used at that site. This allows the government, for example, to settle with certain parties for money and to give some or all of that money, as appropriate, to other parties who will perform site cleanup. See EPA, Consolidated Guidance on the Establishment, Management and Use of CERCLA Special Accounts (2002), available at <http://www.epa.gov/compliance/resources/policies/cleanup/superfund/congui-estmgt-specacct.pdf> (last visited Oct. 21, 2003). In addition to issuing these and other policies and guidance, EPA has developed numerous model consent decrees to streamline and speed up the settlement process. See, e.g., Office of Solid Waste & Emergency Response, EPA, Model CERCLA RD/RA Consent Decree (2001), available at <http://www.epa.gov/compliance/resources/policies/cleanup/superfund/mod-rdra-cd.pdf> (last visited Oct. 21, 2003).

2489. CERCLA § 122 and EPA’s Model CERCLA RD/RA Consent Decree largely guide the terms, and especially the covenants, of such consent decrees. 42 U.S.C. § 9722 (West 2003); Model CERCLA RD/RA Consent Decree, supra note 2488.

Judicial involvement may be desirable to structure cases for settlement. When organizing counsel, consider whether to create a committee solely for settlement issues, with the parties in agreement on the authority of the settlement representatives.<sup>2490</sup> Some courts have referred settlement negotiations to a magistrate judge or special master.<sup>2491</sup> The magnitude of these cases and the possibility that recusal would impose a serious hardship on the entire court suggest that the trial judge should not be directly involved in settlement negotiations.<sup>2492</sup> It is advisable to assess (1) whether a global settlement is possible, or whether the parties are willing to agree to settlement of only certain portions of liability; (2) which parties are interested in settlement; (3) the level at which de minimis and de micromis buyouts will occur; (4) which parties are willing to participate in good faith in settlement negotiations; and (5) what role the court should play.<sup>2493</sup> In some cases, the parties are very interested in initiating settlement discussions. Consider establishing a “settlement track,” with firm deadlines, followed by a “litigation track” if settlement efforts fail. Under such an approach the litigation aspects of the case would be stayed while the parties pursued settlement, letting the parties avoid substantial transaction costs while exploring resolution of the case. Although discovery may be necessary to further settlement negotiations and to undertake an allocation, it can occur on a less formal and narrower basis than if full-blown litigation were underway, and disagreements can be resolved without resort to motion practice. In enforcement cases brought by the government, where liability is not seriously disputed, settlements can often be achieved once the government produces its cost documents (which is often done in pre-filing negotiations) and after resolution of the validity of any asserted defenses on appropriate motions. Close supervision of the settlement process can be essential. In one case where the parties agreed to a settlement process protocol, the settlement judge found that monitoring the process through biweekly conferences, insisting on adherence to the protocol, and ensuring that the attorneys did their “homework” (e.g., submitting the names of consultants by a specific date) in accordance with timeframes set during conferences substantially contributed to a global settlement of the action.<sup>2494</sup> In many CERCLA cases, however, the parties will also be actively involved in continuous settlement negotiations outside of any judicially structured schedule.

Pending administrative proceedings and the site's status may affect the settlement process, and the court may find it easier to conduct the settlement negotiations in phases (e.g., with the first phase addressing past costs). Settlement negotiations will falter without a credible scientific and technical database and a reliable estimate as to the total cost of remediation. The court may also consider having the parties' experts involved in the settlement negotiations.<sup>2495</sup> In addition, it may be helpful to explore with the parties the use of alternative dispute resolution (ADR) strategies and techniques in designing an approach to settlement.

1. Setting the stage. The initial question is whether the parties have sufficient interest in pursuing settlement. If the parties "agree to seek to agree," they can produce a written good-faith agreement to pursue settlement of specified issues.
2. Organizing counsel and defining a timetable. Groups are created along the lines discussed earlier under "Organizing Counsel" (see section 34.24) (i.e., by selecting a settlement liaison for each group of defendants and defining the authority of the liaisons). The initial task of the liaison and the groups is to define a timetable for the process. The timetable should be coordinated with the pretrial process and should adapt the discovery program to settlement needs. A threshold issue for the group is whether to participate in EPA's formulation of the remedial design or to devise an alternative design.
3. Joining additional parties and creating a database. The database would consist primarily of data about the contributions of each party to the site. Here, the emphasis is on identifying and joining parties who contributed substantially to the problems and can be expected to contribute substantially to a financial settlement. The parties would then provide necessary information and develop the structure of a database, perhaps with the help of consultants hired jointly by the parties. Generally, information about insurance would also be collected.

4. Allocating responsibility. This stage involves the hard negotiations and should rely on outside assistance—a special master, a court-appointed mediator, or a consultant hired by the parties—to analyze the data and recommend allocation models.

The role of the district court in the process is to rule promptly on those motions that define the liability of the parties and the contours of the issues. The district judge who remains insulated from settlement discussions can more appropriately preside at a bench trial, if necessary.

34.33 Approval of Consent Decrees

Consent decrees between the government and the parties must receive public notice and comment. The United States “lodges” the consent decree with the court, and notice of the decree’s availability is published in the Federal Register. The government must consider any comments received and may withdraw the decree if the comments disclose facts or considerations that indicate the proposed decree is “inappropriate, improper, or inadequate.”<sup>2497</sup> If the government continues to support the decree, it will file with the court any comments received, along with a motion for entry of the decree once the public comment period has concluded. Often, nonsettling parties will challenge entry of the consent decree because of the contribution protection it affords to settling parties. Other common challenges are that the settling parties are not bearing their proportionate share of the costs of remediation, that the remedy selected is arbitrary and capricious, or that it is substantively or procedurally unfair.<sup>2498</sup> Another issue tied to settlement is the manner in which settlement monies will be allocated.<sup>2499</sup>

The court must then decide whether it is necessary or appropriate to hold a hearing on the decree prior to making a decision to enter or reject it. Although it may be appropriate to hold an evidentiary hearing, the cost and expense of a hearing often obviate some of the benefits of settlement, particularly where the parties are de minimis. As a result, courts will usually review the administrative record and the papers submitted and determine whether the settlement is “fair, reasonable and consistent with the Constitution and the mandate of Congress.”<sup>2500</sup> Settlements of private contribution or cost-recovery actions are not subject to the same statutory constraints as settlements with the government, and they do not carry the same deferential standard of review.<sup>2501</sup> However, courts have made similar “fair and reasonable” evaluations prior to approving them, and it is good practice to look at various aspects of the settlement negotiations.

34.34 Structuring the Trial

CERCLA cases rarely go to trial, but when they do the trial is likely to be complicated.<sup>2502</sup> Most parties typically will have settled before trial, leaving only a few parties remaining. A number of third-party claims may also have been resolved.

Consider holding separate trials on liability, damages, and allocation of response costs pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 42. Alternatively, consider bifurcating or trifurcating the trial into phases—liability, damages (remediation plans), and allocation.<sup>2503</sup> The order of trial (and of the corresponding settlement discussions) can be varied to address dispositive issues first. Addressing challenges to the proposed remedy may crystallize issues relating to response costs and how they should be allocated. EPA ordinarily has to determine the scope of proposed cleanup efforts before the court can allocate responsibility for remediation.

Except for natural resource damage claims, there is no right to a jury trial in CERCLA cases.<sup>2504</sup> One judge’s approach to a case involving damages to

Special verdict forms (see section 12.451), jury notebooks (see section 12.42), time limits for each side (see section 12.35), interim instructions (see section 12.433), and other jury aids may be appropriate. ### 35.1 Introduction

Congress enacted the 1920 Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act<sup>2508</sup> (RICO) to respond to the “infiltration of organized crime and racketeering into legitimate organizations operating in interstate commerce.”<sup>2509</sup> Congress targeted organized crime through a broad statutory scheme that included severe criminal penalties, fines, imprisonment, asset forfeiture,<sup>2510</sup> and civil remedies in an effort to undermine the economic power of racketeering organizations.<sup>2511</sup> The statute further enabled private litigants to act, in effect, as private attorneys general<sup>2512</sup> to sue for injury to their businesses or property caused by a RICO violation.

Civil RICO claims have alleged wrongs actionable under state and common law, as well as other federal statutes.<sup>2513</sup> Although the statute was targeted at organized crime, courts have broadly construed RICO's provisions, and its scope has extended well beyond its original aim. Early efforts by lower courts to restrict claims that appeared to exceed RICO's original goals were overruled by Supreme Court decisions that broadened the statute's reach.<sup>2514</sup> RICO claims can now be found in a variety of contexts, including insurance and business disputes, antiabortion and other protests,<sup>2515</sup> consumer financial services litigation,<sup>2516</sup> family law,<sup>2517</sup> and whistle-blower actions.<sup>2518</sup> Although the nontraditional uses of RICO have continued to expand despite significant criticism by commentators and the courts, Congress has shown little inclination to narrow the statute's focus or reach.<sup>2519</sup>

However, the Supreme Court has acknowledged that the statute does have some limits. See Reves v. Ernst & Young, 507 U.S. 170, 184 (1993) ("Congress did not intend to extend RICO liability under § 1962(c) beyond those who participate in the operation or management of an enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity."); *H.J. Civil RICO

RICO has been called “arcane,”<sup>2520</sup> “tormented,”<sup>2521</sup> “complicated,”<sup>2522</sup> and “agonizingly difficult.”<sup>2523</sup> Litigation under the statute is often time-consuming and burdensome, both because RICO’s inadequately defined scope has resulted in conflicting legal doctrine and because of the breadth of the supporting allegations. RICO litigation can involve multiple defendants and multi-count complaints where each count alleges a separate enterprise and a multitude of predicate acts.<sup>2524</sup> In addition, RICO cases are often brought as class actions, which can introduce additional complexities.<sup>2525</sup>

35.2 Statutory Framework

RICO liability hinges on whether the defendant “person”<sup>2526</sup> engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity through specific designated offenses, referred to as predicate acts. The specific elements necessary to state a claim vary according to whether the claim is brought under 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a), (b), (c) or (d). The plaintiff must show that the racketeering activity adversely affected an interstate enterprise,<sup>2527</sup> and that this adverse impact proximately caused injury to the plaintiff’s business or property.<sup>2528</sup> Racketeering activity is defined in section 1961 to include activities that could be charged under a broad array of federal and state criminal offenses.<sup>2529</sup> To establish a pattern of racketeering, a plaintiff must show that the defendant was responsible for at least two acts of racketeering within ten years of each other, and that the predicate acts had a common relationship and continuity.<sup>2530</sup> Further, to establish the requisite predicate acts, the plaintiff must plead and prove each element of the racketeering offense.<sup>2531</sup>

2526. “Person” is defined in section 1961(3) as including “any individual or entity capable of holding a legal or beneficial interest in property.” The term has been liberally construed. See Jund v. Town of Hempstead, 941 F.2d 1271, 1282 (2d Cir. 1991) (unincorporated political association); Pine Ridge Recycling, Inc. v. Butts County, 855 F. Supp. 1264, 1273 (M.D. Ga. 1994) (counties and solid waste authorities).

2528. See id. §§ 7.04[2][f], 7.04[2][g].

2529. Section 1961(1) defines “racketeering activity” as “any act or threat involving murder, kidnapping, gambling, arson, robbery, bribery, extortion, dealing in obscene matter, or dealing in a controlled substance which is chargeable under state law and punishable by imprisonment for more than one year,” or which is indictable under a wide variety of enumerated offenses under Title 18 of the U.S. Code. It also covers any act indictable under Title 29, any federal offense involving fraud in connection with Title 11, the sale of securities or controlled substances, as well as any acts indictable under the Currency and Foreign Transaction and Reporting Act or the Immigration and Naturalization Act.

2530. Section 1961(5) defines a “pattern of racketeering” as requiring “at least two acts of racketeering activity, one of which occurred after the effective date of this section and the last of which occurred within ten years (excluding any period of imprisonment) after the commission of a prior act of racketeering activity.” Acts of terrorism were recently added to RICO under section 1961(1)(g), which provides for the inclusion of any act under 18 U.S.C. §§ 2332b(g)(5)(B) & 2332b(a)(1)(B) (“[A]ttempting or conspiring to destroy or damage any structure . . . within the United States . . .”).

2531. See Rakoff & Goldstein, supra note 2527, § 7.04[2][c], at 7-41 to 7-44.

Civil RICO

§ 35.2

The following substantive provisions of RICO (18 U.S.C. § 1962) apply to any “person”:

- Section 1962(a) prohibits the investment of income or of the proceeds of income derived from a pattern of racketeering activity or through the collection of an unlawful debt, in an enterprise engaged in or whose activities affect interstate or foreign commerce. It specifically exempts from its scope the purchase of securities for purposes of investment and purchases “without the intention of controlling or participating in the control of the issuer,” as long as the securities do not exceed 1% of the outstanding shares of any one class of securities and do not confer the power to elect directors.
- Section 1962(b) makes it unlawful to acquire an interest in or control of an enterprise engaged in or whose activities affect interstate or foreign commerce through a pattern of racketeering activity or the collection of an unlawful debt.
- Section 1962(c) prohibits anyone employed by or associated with an enterprise engaged in or whose activities affect interstate or foreign commerce from participating in its affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity or the collection of an unlawful debt.
- Section 1962(d) prohibits conspiracies to violate section 1962(a), (b), or (c).<sup>2532</sup>

2532. To state a claim under section 1962(d), a plaintiff must plead that defendants agreed to join the conspiracy, agreed to commit predicate acts, and knew that those acts were part of a pattern of racketeering activity. See United States v. Patrick, 248 F.3d 11, 20 (1st Cir. 2001) (conspiracy can be shown by tacit agreement); Tel-Phonic Servs., Inc. v. TBS Int’l, Inc., 975 F.2d 1134, 1140–41 (5th Cir. 1992); Glessner v. Kenny, 952 F.2d 702, 714 (3d Cir. 1991); Reddy v. Litton Indus., Inc., 912 F.2d 291, 294–95 (9th Cir. 1990). Absent sufficient allegations of the substantive violation of subsection (a), (b), or (c), the plaintiff’s claim under section 1962(d) will be dismissed. See Salinas v. United States, 522 U.S. 52, 63 (1997). The circuits had split on the issue of whether the defendant must have personally participated in or agreed to participate in the commission of predicate acts. Some courts had required that a defendant agree to commit at least two predicate acts, see, e.g., Miranda v. Ponce Fed. Bank, 948 F.2d 41, 47–48 (1st Cir. 1991), while others had held that it was sufficient if a defendant agreed that some member of the enterprise would commit the predicate acts, see, e.g., United States v. Pryba, 900 F.2d 748, 760 (4th Cir. 1990). See also United States v. Kragness, 830 F.2d 842, 860 (8th Cir. 1987). Following the Supreme Court’s decision in Salinas, however, the courts have held that a defendant does not need to personally commit predicate acts, or agree to commit them, in order to be liable under section 1962(d). See, e.g., Patrick, 248 F.3d at 20; Smith v. Berg, 247 F.3d 532, 538 (3d Cir. 2001); Lachmund v. ADM Inv. Servs., Inc., 191 F.3d 777, 784–85 (7th Cir. 1999); *United States v. There has been significant litigation over the proper interpretation of several of the statutory elements common across sections 1962(a), (b), (c), and (d)—such as “enterprise” or “pattern”—as well as conflicts among the circuits over the interpretation of certain elements peculiar to section 1962(c),<sup>2533</sup> such as “conduct or participate.”<sup>2534</sup> Although sometimes referred to as “terms of art,”<sup>2535</sup> their interpretation remains a matter of debate and has varied among the circuits. Despite the confusion as to the appropriate scope of these elements, a plaintiff’s failure to include factual allegations sufficient to satisfy basic components of each element, at least as that component has been interpreted within the relevant circuit, may result in dismissal.<sup>2536</sup> Some of the most litigated statutory terms are discussed below:

- Enterprise. Section 1961(4) broadly defines an enterprise as “any individual, partnership, corporation, association, or other legal entity, and any union or group of individuals associated in fact although not a legal entity.”<sup>2537</sup> In United States v. Turkette,<sup>2538</sup> the Court held that RICO’s enterprise element encompassed both legitimate and illegitimate businesses. Turkette has been interpreted as establishing that an “enterprise” must exhibit several basic characteristics: (1) there must be a common or shared purpose among the members of the enterprise; (2) there must be some degree of continuity of organizational 2533. Section 1962(c) forms the basis for most of the civil RICO claims. In Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., 473 U.S. 479 (1985), the Supreme Court set out the four primary elements of a § 1962(c) claim. The plaintiff must show “(1) conduct (2) of an enterprise (3) through a pattern (4) of racketeering activity.” Id. at 496 (footnote omitted).

2534. See Rakoff & Goldstein, supra note 2527, § 2.03[1], at 2-38 (“Post-Sedima RICO jurisprudence has been notable for confusion and inconsistency.”).

2535. Elliott v. Foufas, 867 F.2d 877, 880 (5th Cir. 1989) (each concept “is a term of art which carries its own inherent requirements of particularity”).

2536. Jennings v. Emry, 910 F.2d 1434 (7th Cir. 1990); Schmidt v. Fleet Bank, 16 F. Supp. 2d 340 (S.D.N.Y. 1998).

2537. The Supreme Court has noted in United States v. Turkette that “[t]here is no restriction upon the associations embraced by the definition: an enterprise includes any union or group of individuals associated in fact.” 452 U.S. 576, 580 (1981). The courts generally have broadly construed the definition of “enterprise” to include various types of organizations, both legitimate and criminal, as well as combinations of different entities as “associations in fact.” See, e.g., DeFalco v. Bernas, 244 F.3d 286 (2d Cir. 2001) (town); United States v. Patrick, 248 F.3d 11, 17 (1st Cir. 2000) (gang); Bachman v. Bear, Stearns & Co., 178 F.3d 930, 931 (7th Cir. 1999) (“RICO statute reaches informal as well as formal organizations.”); United States v. Beasley, 72 F.3d 1518, 1525 (11th Cir. 1996) (religious cult); Cox v. Adm’r United States Steel & Carnegie, 30 F.3d 1347, 1349 (11th Cir.) (pension fund), modifying on reh’g, 17 F.3d 1386 (11th Cir. 1994); Am. Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Townson, 912 F. Supp. 291, 295 (E.D. Tenn. 1995) (marriage as enterprise).

structure and members; and (3) the enterprise must be separate from the pattern of racketeering activity.<sup>2539</sup> The Court further held that to satisfy the enterprise requirement, a plaintiff must show “evidence of an ongoing organization, formal or informal, and . . . that the various associates function as a continuing unit.”<sup>2540</sup> These requirements are easily met where the enterprise has a legal existence, such as a corporation or partnership.<sup>2541</sup> Where the enterprise is an “association in fact,” however, proof of the various elements becomes more difficult and proof that demonstrates continuity or organizational structure often overlaps with the proof relied on to show a pattern of racketeering activity. The courts have disagreed on the extent to which the same evidence used to prove a pattern of racketeering activity can also be CommonPoint Mortgage Co.*, 210 F.3d 696, 700 (6th Cir. 2001) (alleged enterprise of mortgage lender and secondary lender market “too unstable and fluid an entity to constitute a RICO enterprise”); Stachon v. United Consumers Club, Inc., 229 F.3d 673, 676 (7th Cir. 2000) (enterprise of defendant, its franchisees, officers, directors, members, participating wholesalers, and participating manufacturers lacked distinct structure and function); United States v. Gray, 137 F.3d 765, 772 (4th Cir. 1998) (government evidence showed defendant ran a drug distribution ring that had identifiable structure from the existence of a leader, an assistant, stash house workers, and a system of stash houses used to distribute drugs); United States v. Parise, 159 F.3d 790, 795 (3d Cir. 1998) (continuity requirement met even though each member of enterprise didn’t participate in it from beginning to end, and government needed only to show “alleged members who participated at one time or another were part of an ongoing enterprise with a shared ‘organizational pattern’ and ‘system of authority’”); United States v. Davidson, 122 F.3d 531, 535 (8th Cir. 1997) (The number and variety of crimes, defendant’s financial support of his “underlings,” and defendant’s continued leadership of the criminal organization, among other things, “demonstrate[d] an ongoing association with a common purpose to reap the economic rewards flowing from the crimes, rather than a series of ad hoc relationships.”); Amsterdam Tobacco Inc. v. Philip Morris, Inc., 107 F. Supp. 2d 210, 215 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (“The vertical group described by plaintiff here is merely a reiteration of the (alleged) racketeering activity.”). In addition, the RICO enterprise must be separate and distinct from the RICO “person.” See, e.g., Brannon v. Boatmen’s First Nat’l Bank of Okla., 153 F.3d 1144, 1147–48 & n.4 (10th Cir. 1998).

2541. See, e.g., United States v. Kirk, 844 F.2d 660, 664 (9th Cir. 1988) (“Although the circuits are divided on the requirements for proof of an enterprise . . . under either test, the existence of a corporation fulfills the requirements of an ascertainable structure apart from the predicate racketeering activity.”) (citation omitted); Bennett v. Berg, 685 F.2d 1053, 1061 n.9 (8th Cir. 1982) (“Where a legal entity is alleged as the RICO enterprise, this entity is likely to be clearly distinct from the acts of racketeering.”), aff’d in part, rev’d in part in reh’g en banc, 710 F.2d 1361 (8th Cir. 1983).

used to prove the existence of an enterprise.<sup>2542</sup> Note, however, that evidence satisfying the requirement of “continuity” of the organization may also satisfy the continuity required to show a pattern of racketeering activity. The circuits have varied in whether a plaintiff may prove the existence of an enterprise through proof of a pattern of racketeering activity.<sup>2543</sup> Some circuits have interpreted the “separateness” criteria more strictly and have required varying degrees of proof that an organization has a structure independent from that inherent in the pattern of racketeering activity.<sup>2544</sup> These courts have expressed the concern that to permit proof of the enterprise to be inferred from the pattern of racketeering activity would essentially make “every pattern of racketeering activity [become] an enterprise whose affairs are conducted through the pattern of racketeering.”<sup>2545</sup>

In addition, to the extent that the claim is brought under section 1962(c), a plaintiff must also plead and prove that the “enterprise” is distinct from the defendant “person” against whom damages are sought.<sup>2546</sup> It is unclear whether this requirement exists for claims brought under section 1962(a) or (b). Several cases have held that it is not necessary to show that the “enterprise” is separate and distinct from the “person” where the case arises under other provisions of section 1962.<sup>2547</sup> Similarly, the courts have disagreed on whether an intra-corporate conspiracy can be alleged under section 1962(d).<sup>2548</sup> Most courts have ruled that section 1962(c) was designed to punish only the persons who run an enterprise illegally and not the enterprise itself, which often will be an innocent victim of the racketeering activity.<sup>2549</sup> Plaintiffs have nonetheless attempted to circumvent this requirement by alleging, for example, that the defendant is an affiliate or parent corporation.<sup>2550</sup> Thus, in the situation where corporate employees are alleged to have conducted the affairs of the corporate enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity, the courts generally have rejected plaintiffs' efforts to hold the corporation liable as a defendant, either directly or vicariously.<sup>2551</sup> Note, however, that some courts permit vicarious liability where an employer is benefited by its employee's section 1962(c) violations if the employer is distinct from the enterprise.<sup>2552</sup> Claims brought under other subsections have not been subject to similar limitations, and courts have applied general principles of vicarious liability depending on the circumstances and whether the corporation was a victim.<sup>2553</sup> Claims alleging association-in-fact enterprises have been dismissed on pretrial motions for failure to identify an enterprise that is more than a corporate entity and its agents conducting their regular business.<sup>2554</sup>

2556. Id. at 239. As with other provisions of the statute, the Court noted that in defining a pattern of racketeering activity, Congress had intended "to take a flexible approach." Id. at 238; see also Sedima, S.P.R.L. v. Imrex Co., 473 U.S. 479, 497 n.14 (1985) (referring to the "continuity plus relationship" language of the Senate Report in attempting to describe a pattern). The circuit decisions following Sedima reflected differing views among the circuits as to when a pattern did fied by sporadic and isolated activity.<sup>2557</sup> Rather, to satisfy the relatedness requirement, there must be some showing of acts with similar “purposes, results, participants, victims or methods of commission or [that] are otherwise interrelated . . . .”<sup>2558</sup> Continuity can be established where the predicate acts have extended over a substantial period of time (typically at least a year) or, alternatively, where the activity threatens to continue into the future.<sup>2559</sup> The Court offered examples of several ways in which the continuity prong of the pattern requirement could be satisfied, such as where the racketeering activity is a regular way of conducting an ongoing legitimate business, but emphasized that these were only illustrative of the innumerable possibilities and each case should be considered in light of its particular facts and circumstances.<sup>2560</sup> Circuit decisions following Northwestern Bell have developed varying tests for determining whether the relationship or continuity prongs have been established. For example, several circuits have adopted multifactor tests that consider such things as the nature, number, and temporal relationship of the predicate acts; whether the activity constituted a single scheme as opposed to several schemes; the number of putative victims; and the presence of distinct injuries to establish continuity.<sup>2561</sup> Other courts have broadly construed Northwestern Bell to mean that isolated acts of criminal activity would not give rise to a RICO violation, rather than as establishing a “determinative two-pronged test.”<sup>2562</sup>

Conversely, several courts have dismissed RICO claims for failure to satisfy the pattern requirement where (1) the allegations involve completed or “close-ended” conduct lasting twelve months or less, where there is no threat of future criminal conduct;<sup>2563</sup> or (2) the claims involve only a single (or a few) victims, even though the conduct may have lasted for many months or even years.<sup>2564</sup> In the latter case, most courts have held that criminal activity directed at only a single victim does not pose a threat of long-term criminal conduct sufficient to satisfy the “continuity” requirement.<sup>2565</sup> Several courts have noted that particularly where the predicate acts of mail and wire fraud are alleged, the pattern requirement “helps to prevent ordinary commercial fraud from being transformed into a federal RICO claim.”<sup>2566</sup>

- Conducting or participating in the affairs of an enterprise. Section 1962(c) prohibits participating in or conducting the affairs of an enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity. The liability for participating in the conduct of the enterprise through a pattern of racketeering extends only to those who “play some part in directing the enterprise’s affairs.”<sup>2567</sup> The Supreme Court has made it clear that the defendant need not be in upper management, nor is liability limited only to those with primary responsibility for the affairs of the enterprise.<sup>2568</sup> The “operation or management” test is not easily satisfied. The courts have held that there is a “difference between actual control over an enterprise and association with an enterprise in ways that do not involve control.”<sup>2569</sup> For example, the provision of goods or services, including those by outside professionals such as accountants or lawyers, will not, in itself, satisfy the test even though the enterprise may benefit in some way.<sup>2570</sup> Liability may also extend to lower-level employees who play some material role under the direction of upper management,<sup>2571</sup> although it is unclear whether liability will attach to lower-level employees where they do not also play some management or “directing” role.<sup>2572</sup> The courts have differed in their approach to this issue.<sup>2573</sup> Finally, liability can extend to outsiders who are associated with the enterprise and exert control over it (for example, by bribery), or who participate in the operation or management of the enterprise; however, it generally will not extend to outside accountants and counsel who render assistance but no control.

35.31 Pleadings

Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2), the complaint is to contain “a short and plain statement of the claim showing the pleader is entitled to relief.” The allegations are to be “simple, concise, and direct”<sup>2574</sup> in order to assist the defendant in understanding the claims alleged against it and the court in conducting the litigation in an orderly fashion.<sup>2575</sup> Compliance with Rule 8 conserves judicial and party resources that otherwise would be expended in 2571. Reves, 507 U.S. at 179; see, e.g., United States v. Viola, 35 F.3d 37, 43 (2d Cir. 1994) (noting that Reves attached liability to those down “ladder of operation” and defendant “was not on the ladder at all, but rather . . . was sweeping up the floor underneath it”).

2572. See, e.g., Goren v. New Vision Int’l, Inc., 156 F.3d 721, 728 (7th Cir. 1998) (“[S]imply performing services for an enterprise, even with knowledge of the enterprise’s illicit nature, is not enough to subject an individual to RICO liability under § 1962(c) . . . .” (referring to non-employees hired to perform specific tasks)).

2573. See, e.g., MCM Partners, Inc. v. Andrews-Bartlett & Assocs., Inc. 62 F.3d 967, 978–79 (7th Cir. 1995) (“‘[D]irection’ requirement includes both those who direct, as well as those who take direction.”) (citation omitted); Viola, 35 F.3d at 41 (“[I]t is plain that the simple taking of directions and performance of tasks that are ‘necessary or helpful’ to the enterprise, without more, is insufficient . . . .”); Peat, 996 F.2d at 1538–39 (“[N]ot even action involving some degree of decision making constitutes participation in the affairs of an enterprise.”).

2575. See, e.g., Michaelis v. Neb. State Bar Ass’n, 717 F.2d 437, 439 (8th Cir. 1983) (amended complaint with 98 pages and 144 numbered paragraphs justified dismissal with prejudice, where plaintiff repeatedly violated Rule 8 and “style and prolixity of pleadings would have made an orderly trial impossible”).

deciphering prolix or confusing allegations.<sup>2576</sup> The length and complexity of RICO complaints are sometimes related to the requirement to plead fraud with particularity in claims alleging mail and wire fraud as predicate acts, while in other circumstances they derive from an attempt to obscure non-compliance with Rule 8 and the inclusion of irrelevant or conclusory allegations.<sup>2577</sup> The court should consider reviewing a RICO complaint shortly after filing to determine whether it satisfies Rule 8. Some courts faced with a RICO complaint that is unintelligible, confusing, or otherwise violative of Rule 8 have dismissed the complaint sua sponte and required the plaintiff to file a “RICO case statement”<sup>2578</sup> along with an amended complaint.<sup>2579</sup> Such an approach conserves both judicial and party resources, and precludes the court, upon undertaking review of the sufficiency of a complaint, from having to “forever sift through its pages.”<sup>2580</sup> Consider also dismissal with prejudice where the plaintiff has been given the opportunity to file an amended complaint and persists in filing a lengthy and confusing document. Although dismissal of a complaint for failure to comply with Rule 8 ordinarily should be with leave to amend,<sup>2581</sup> where the party either fails or is unable to rectify the problem, dismissal with prejudice might be appropriate.<sup>2582</sup>

2576. See, e.g., Nevigel v. N. Coast Life Ins. Co., 651 F.2d 671, 675 (9th Cir. 1981) (affirming dismissal with prejudice, noting that appellees “had to spend a large amount of time and money” defending against poorly drafted proceedings and that proper consideration was the right of appellees to be free from “costly and harassing litigation and the rights of litigants awaiting their turns to have other matters resolved”); Gordon v. Green, 602 F.2d 743, 745 (5th Cir. 1979) (compliance with Rule 8 conserves judicial resources).

Rule 9(b) also plays a prominent role in RICO cases that allege predicate acts of fraud. In such cases, Rule 9(b) governs the specificity required to plead both the overall RICO elements and the elements of the predicate offenses, as well as the elements of the RICO claim.<sup>2583</sup> The impact of RICO allegations on a defendant's reputation makes it important to ensure that the claim is solidly based.<sup>2584</sup> Courts have varied in the level of specificity the plaintiff must plead to survive a Rule 9(b) motion. Some judges have required the plaintiff to detail the specific fraudulent acts committed by each defendant, where multiple defendants are involved.<sup>2585</sup> Others insist that the plaintiff detail not only the specific fraudulent statements, but where, when, and how they were communicated.<sup>2586</sup> The goal is to ensure that complaints sounding in fraud entail more than general and vague statements of alleged misrepresentation, and plaintiffs who fail to plead the underlying predicate acts with the specificity demanded by Rule 9(b) risk dismissal of their RICO claims.<sup>2587</sup>

2583. Brooks v. Bank of Boulder, 891 F. Supp. 1469, 1476 (D. Colo. 1995). A number of courts have held that non-fraud RICO claims are governed by Rule 8. *See MCM v. The RICO case statement has proven useful in RICO litigation.<sup>2588</sup> This statement details both the factual and legal basis for the plaintiff's claim.<sup>2589</sup> One judge's order required, among other things, that the plaintiff do the following:<sup>2590</sup>

- list each defendant, and state the alleged misconduct as to each;
- list each victim and state the manner in which they were allegedly injured;
- describe in detail the pattern of racketeering activity (or collection of wrongful debt) alleged for each RICO claim, including the alleged predicate acts, the dates, the participants, and the surrounding facts;
- describe the time, place, and content of each alleged misrepresentation where the RICO claim is based on predicate offenses of mail or wire fraud, as well as the identity of the persons to whom and by whom it was made;
- state whether there had been a criminal conviction for violation of the predicate acts, or if civil litigation had resulted in a judgment with respect to the predicate acts;
- describe the manner in which the predicate acts formed a pattern of racketeering activity, whether they related to each other as part of a common plan, and if so, to describe the plan in detail;
- describe in detail the alleged enterprise, including the names of the persons or entities allegedly constituting the enterprise, its structure and purpose, and the relationship and association of the defendants to the enterprise;
- describe the relationship between the activities of the enterprise and the pattern of racketeering activity, whether the pattern of racketeering activity and the enterprise are separate or merged into one, and what benefits the enterprise receives from the pattern of racketeering;

- describe the direct causal relationship between the alleged injury and the violation of the RICO statute; and
- set forth the facts that support the elements with respect to claims under 18 U.S.C. §§ 1962(a), (b), (c), and (d).

Courts generally have considered the RICO case statement as part of the pleadings. Requiring the plaintiff to file a RICO case statement will assist the court when ruling on motions under Rule 12 and Rule 9(b), in addition to summary-judgment motions under Rule 56. In ruling on motions under Rule 12, courts have considered the facts stated in the RICO case statement in conjunction with the allegations of the complaint.<sup>2591</sup> The RICO case statement, together with a reading of the complaint, will help narrow the issues and identify claims that lack merit, which can then be dismissed (with or without prejudice) before significant time and effort is spent. Finally, these statements can also help to “focus discovery . . . and provide a blueprint for trial.”<sup>2592</sup>

Some districts have adopted standing orders requiring the filing of a RICO case statement within a certain period of time once the complaint is filed.<sup>2593</sup> Other districts, however, only require the plaintiff to file a case statement

35.32 Initial Conference

Efficient management of RICO litigation requires early identification and narrowing of the disputed legal and factual issues and identification of the precise statutory violations alleged. For example, some categories of damages, such as claims for personal injury, usually are not allowed under RICO, and one issue that can be addressed at the initial conference is the propriety of the damage claims asserted by the plaintiff.<sup>2599</sup> The pleadings often will reveal jurisdictional issues that will need to be addressed at the outset. After notice and hearing, the complaint can be dismissed sua sponte, either in whole or in part, where jurisdiction is clearly improper.<sup>2600</sup> State and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction over RICO claims,<sup>2601</sup> and the court may also find it appropriate in some circumstances (e.g. where the predicate acts involve issues of state law) to refrain from allowing the case to proceed in federal court. In addition, where RICO provides the only basis for subject-matter jurisdiction in federal court, the dismissal of the RICO claims may also warrant dismissal of supplemental state claims under 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a).<sup>2602</sup> Absent unusual circumstances warranting the exercise of jurisdiction over supplemental state law claims, they can be dismissed without prejudice.<sup>2603</sup>

Certain issues persistently appear in RICO litigation and can significantly affect the viability of the claim. Addressing these issues early in the case can reveal the presence of fatal flaws in the complaint before the court or the parties expend significant resources. Inquiry into the following areas either before or in conjunction with the initial Rule 16 conference will assist the court and the parties in identifying possible jurisdictional problems:

- Does the plaintiff have standing? In order to have standing to pursue a RICO claim, a plaintiff must have “been injured in his business or property by the conduct constituting the violation.”<sup>2604</sup> The injury to resulting from a defendant's investment of racketeering income.<sup>2609</sup> Claims under section 1962(a) alleging injury resulting from racketeering activity alone, rather than from the use or investment of racketeering income, may thus be subject to early dismissal.<sup>2610</sup> Similar interpretations have been accorded the injury component under section 1962(b). Most courts have required that the alleged injury to the plaintiff proximately result from the defendant's interest in, or control over, an enterprise.<sup>2611</sup> On the other hand, a plaintiff suing under section 1962(c) need not prove any kind of special "racketeering injury" but only that at least one of the predicate acts proximately caused the requisite injury to the plaintiff.<sup>2612</sup> Still unclear is whether the plaintiff, to have standing under RICO, must also satisfy any special standing requirement that may relate to the underlying predicate acts.<sup>2613</sup> In Beck v. Prupis, the Supreme Court resolved whether a suit can be maintained under section 1962(d) for conspiracy where the alleged injury results from wrongful acts that do not fall within the offenses set forth in section 1961(1).<sup>2614</sup> Although some courts had held that a RICO conspiracy claim may be stated where a plaintiff is injured by any actions that further a RICO conspiracy,<sup>2615</sup> those circuits following the majority rule precluded a plaintiff from maintaining a section 1962(d) conspiracy claim where the overt acts causing the injury do not constitute racketeering activity.<sup>2616</sup> The decision in *Beck v. - Is the case barred by the statute of limitations? Three Supreme Court decisions are relevant in this context. In Agency Holding Corp. v. Malley-Duff & Assocs., Inc.,<sup>2618</sup> the Court held that a private civil RICO action was subject to a four-year statute of limitations period, drawing largely on the limitations period governing the Clayton Act,<sup>2619</sup> upon which RICO’s civil enforcement provisions were modeled.<sup>2620</sup> The Court did not say, however, when a civil RICO claim would accrue. The circuits split on the issue, adopting three distinct rules: (1) the injury and pattern discovery rule;<sup>2621</sup> (2) the injury discovery rule;<sup>2622</sup> and (3) the “last predicate act” rule.<sup>2623</sup> In *Klehr v. rejected the last predicate act rule to determine when the statute was triggered, but did not resolve what accrual rule did apply to RICO claims.<sup>2625</sup> *Rotella v. proceedings in state courts or other districts. In some instances, consolidation of these cases may be appropriate.<sup>2631</sup> In others, abstention or a stay of proceedings pending resolution of the related litigation may be warranted.<sup>2632</sup> In *Colorado River Water Conservation District v. The Court set out several factors for determining whether abstention was appropriate, including (1) inconvenience of the federal forum; (2) avoiding piecemeal litigation; and (3) the order in which jurisdiction was obtained by the federal and state courts.<sup>2634</sup> Courts have considered additional criteria, such as whether the federal plaintiff's rights will be sufficiently protected by the state action and which court first assumed jurisdiction over relevant property.<sup>2635</sup> The Colorado River Water Court emphasized, however, that abstention "is an extraordinary and narrow exception to the duty of a District Court to adjudicate a controversy properly before it."<sup>2636</sup> Other abstention doctrines may also come into play.<sup>2637</sup> For example, efficiency and fairness considerations may warrant entry of a stay “pursuant to [the court’s] power to control its docket and to provide for a just determination of the cases pending before it.”<sup>2638</sup> In such cases the courts balance the benefits that might accrue from a stay, such as simplification and narrowing of the issues, against the possible burdens or hardships that would be suffered by the parties if the stay were granted.<sup>2639</sup>

- Was the case removed from state court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1441, and is remand appropriate? Section 1441(c) affords the court discretion to remand cases “in which state law predominates.” Recent cases have interpreted section 1441(c) as permitting remand only where the state law claims are separate and independent of the federal claim, and then the court may remand only the state law claims.<sup>2640</sup>
- Should the court exercise supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims? Section 1367(a) of Title 28 of the U.S. Code gives federal courts exercising original jurisdiction over federal claims supplemental jurisdiction over claims “that are so related to the claims in the [federal] action that they form part of the same case or controversy . . . .” The court can decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims under certain circumstances.<sup>2641</sup>
- Are there any pending criminal proceedings against one or more of the parties? Criminal racketeering activity is an element of civil RICO liability, and civil RICO defendants often will be, or have been, the subject of criminal investigation or prosecution. The court should determine the existence and status of any related criminal proceedings, as they may affect pretrial and trial planning. Where criminal and civil RICO cases are proceeding concurrently, the criminal charges ordinarily should be tried first. Although in some instances a stay of the civil litigation may be appropriate,<sup>2642</sup> in other cases major portions of discovery and other pretrial activity can proceed without prejudice to the criminal case.<sup>2643</sup> The judge should always consider the ongoing criminal proceedings in managing the civil litigation.<sup>2644</sup>

- Are there any existing agreements to arbitrate that would preclude the case from proceeding in federal court? Inquire into whether any arbitration agreement may govern the dispute, which would warrant referral of the case to arbitration. The Federal Arbitration Act<sup>2645</sup> provides that arbitration agreements “shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract.”<sup>2646</sup> The court can issue an order compelling arbitration where there has been a failure or refusal to comply with an arbitration agreement.<sup>2647</sup> The Act provides for a stay of proceedings in the district court where it determines that the case is subject to arbitration.<sup>2648</sup> In *Shearson/American Express, Inc. v. clude civil RICO claims from the dictates of the Arbitration Act,<sup>2650</sup> and the Court rejected any claim of irreconcilable conflict between arbitration and RICO's underlying purposes, which might have permitted overriding the provisions of the Arbitration Act.<sup>2651</sup> An "overlap" between the civil and criminal provisions does not preclude civil claims from being arbitrated.<sup>2652</sup>

- Has the plaintiff adequately alleged proximate cause? Frequently considered in tandem with the standing analysis, the plaintiff further must plead and prove that the injury suffered is direct, as opposed to derivative.<sup>2653</sup> Section 1964(c) requires that the injury to the plaintiff's business or property be "by reason of" the defendant's conduct, which requires that the plaintiff show the injuries were proximately caused by the misconduct of the defendant.<sup>2654</sup> In Holmes v. Securities Investor Protection Corp., the Court found that the primary focus in assessing proximate cause was the directness of the relationship between the plaintiff's injury and the conduct alleged.<sup>2655</sup> The circuits have imposed varying requirements on plaintiffs' efforts to meet the proximate cause element.<sup>2656</sup>

- Are the plaintiff's claims subject to issue or claim preclusion? If related cases have been concluded, the trial judge must consider potential claim and issue preclusion. RICO provides that a final judgment in favor of the United States in a criminal proceeding estops the defendant from denying the essential allegations of the criminal offense in any civil proceeding brought by the United States.<sup>2657</sup> Although the statute is silent on the use of such convictions in cases brought by private parties, courts have applied claim and issue preclusion in civil RICO litigation.<sup>2658</sup> Preclusion may arise from prior civil litigation in federal or state court,<sup>2659</sup> as well as prior administrative proceedings<sup>2660</sup> or arbitration awards.<sup>2661</sup> Considerations common to RICO cases, however, may bar application of these doctrines in some cases, including differing burdens of proof,<sup>2662</sup> an inability to litigate the issue in the prior proceeding,<sup>2663</sup> and lack of knowledge regarding the facts required to allege a RICO violation.<sup>2664</sup>

- Are there any other miscellaneous defenses that may warrant dismissal? In addition to theories of abstention, and although not frequently raised, dismissal may be appropriate under doctrines of primary jurisdiction,<sup>2665</sup> act of state,<sup>2666</sup> or exclusive jurisdiction in the bankruptcy court.<sup>2667</sup>
- Is the plaintiff seeking equitable relief? The failure to allege an injury compensable under RICO may subject the claim to early dismissal. It is unclear whether equitable relief is available to private litigants under civil RICO.<sup>2668</sup> Although many courts have held that a private civil plaintiff is not entitled to injunctive relief, the right to seek other equitable remedies is less clear.<sup>2669</sup>

The pleadings play an important role in other ways as well. Where the underlying predicate offenses sound in fraud, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b)'s strict pleading requirements may result in extensive motion practice directed at dismissing all or parts of the complaint. Motions pursuant to Rule 12 are all but certain. The outcome of these motions can affect the scope of the litigation by obviating discovery and other proceedings related to dismissed claims and possibly by removing the jurisdictional predicate for supplemental state law claims, allowing for their dismissal as well.<sup>2670</sup> Consider procedures to test the sufficiency of the pleadings early on, before significant litigation activity commences. As in most complex litigation, early institution of an initial case-management order will help to organize the case, provide a preliminary identification of legal and factual issues, and educate the court as to the issues likely to increase the complexity of the litigation. Helpful strategies may include the following:

- Review the complaint upon assignment of the litigation to determine the existence of any jurisdictional or other defects apparent on its face.
- Require the plaintiff to file a RICO case statement, amplifying and clarifying the allegations in the complaint prior to receipt of responsive motions or pleadings. This case statement can require the plaintiff to detail the factual basis for each allegation with specificity, as well as the legal basis supporting the plaintiff's theory on various elements of the RICO claim.<sup>2671</sup>
- Require each side to develop an agreed-on statement of the factual and legal issues in dispute, including damages claimed by the plaintiff and defenses to liability being asserted.
- Require the defendant to advise the court and the opposing party of its intention to file a motion under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 9(b) and 12, and whether the asserted defects can be cured through amendment of the complaint.
- Establish a firm schedule for the filing and hearing of responsive pleadings, including motions under Rules 9(b), 12, and 56.
- Stay formal discovery pending resolution of motions challenging jurisdiction and deficiencies in the complaint.

Where the complaint alleges additional claims not subject to a Rule 12 motion, consider whether discovery should proceed on those claims, pending resolution of any motions seeking dismissal of the RICO claims. The court may also assess whether such an approach would require duplicative discovery or impose additional costs on the parties should the RICO claims survive.

For an example of a RICO case statement used by the Northern District of Illinois, see Bryant v. Yellow Freight Sys., Inc., 989 F. Supp. 966, app. 5 (N.D. Ill. 1997).

35.33 Discovery

The RICO case statement can help weed out transactions and allegations that are tangential or unrelated to alleged racketeering activity and can thereby reduce the scope of discovery. The court should remind the parties of limits on discovery found in the Federal Rules and require them to fully support any requests for additional discovery beyond that permitted by the rules. Consider also whether there is a need for limitations on the scope of discovery. Discovery issues may arise where related criminal proceedings are ongoing, triggering the defendant's Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination and disputes regarding the discoverability of grand jury material. Unduly curtailing a plaintiff's discovery into alleged wrongdoing should be avoided. Ordinarily, discovery into unrelated alleged criminal acts is disallowed,<sup>2672</sup> but discovery that relates to other alleged victims of the same pattern of racketeering activity or to acts within the exclusive knowledge of the defendant may be warranted.<sup>2673</sup>

The specific elements necessary to prove a RICO violation can also pose special problems in discovery. For example, the "pattern" requirement often will involve discovery into a RICO defendant's conduct and practices over an extended period of time and with respect to numerous transactions. Similarly, a plaintiff seeking to show an association-in-fact enterprise will be seeking information on the relationships between the participants and also their communications, activities, and other contacts in an effort to show the structure and continuity of the enterprise. In some circuits, the plaintiff may be unable to use proof of the racketeering activity to prove also the structure and continuity of the enterprise, substantially increasing the plaintiff's discovery burden. In deciding whether to put any limits on discovery, consider the nature of the allegations and the complexity of the case. To the extent possible, it is best to address potential discovery issues early in the litigation, well before depositions begin, in order to avoid unnecessary conflict and discovery motions.

2672. See, e.g., Jolley v. Welch, 904 F.2d 988, 992–93 (5th Cir. 1990); Olive Can Co. v. Martin, 906 F.2d 1147, 1152–53 (7th Cir. 1990); Zerman v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 628 F. Supp. 1509, 1512 (S.D.N.Y. 1986).

2673. See, e.g., Michaels Bldg. Co. v. Ameritrust Co., N.A., 848 F.2d 674, 679–81 (6th Cir. 1988); Halperin v. Berlandi, 114 F.R.D. 8, 11–13 (D. Mass. 1986). However, the breadth of discovery permitted under Rule 26(b)(1) should be given careful consideration prior to any decision to limit areas of inquiry.

35.34 Motion Practice

The threat of treble damages and attorney fee awards, combined with the potential damage to reputation, usually spur a defendant aggressively to pursue early dismissal of RICO claims. Motions attacking the plaintiff's standing to bring the claim or other jurisdictional defects are common and often combined with motions challenging the sufficiency of the complaint on various grounds.<sup>2674</sup> In addition to Rule 12 and 9(b) motions, procedural motions often play a significant role. Typical procedural motions include motions (1) to stay discovery pending resolution of non-RICO claims, arbitration, or completion of criminal proceeding; (2) for a protective order; and (3) to sever.<sup>2675</sup> Also consider asking at the initial pretrial conference whether the defendant plans to file motions challenging jurisdiction and, if so, on what grounds. Depending on the length and complexity of the complaint, it may be more efficient to set a schedule that requires that these motions be filed and decided prior to the filing of motions challenging the sufficiency of the allegations.

It may be impossible to determine the sufficiency of some RICO claims until the parties have concluded discovery. Accordingly, consider scheduling a pretrial conference immediately following the close of discovery to determine what claims and defenses remain viable. One alternative is to require the parties to file statements setting out all claims and defenses together with their factual and legal bases. The judge may encourage the parties to reach stipulations. Moreover, in cases where disagreements remain, but where it appears that material facts may be undisputed or without adequate support, encourage the parties to file summary-judgment motions. Alternatively, the court can exercise its Rule 16 power to dispose summarily of a claim or claims as to which no facts remain in dispute.<sup>2676</sup> Prior to entry of summary judgment sua sponte, however, the parties should be given an opportunity to present arguments as to why judgment should not be entered.<sup>2677</sup> If the elimination of RICO removes the jurisdictional basis for supplemental state law claims, it is 2674. See, e.g., Combs v. Baker, 886 F.2d 673, 674 (4th Cir. 1989) (plaintiffs challenged personal jurisdiction as well as subject-matter jurisdiction, venue, sufficiency of the complaint and failure to join an indispensable party).

Co.*, 255 F.2d 577, 580 (10th Cir. 1958) (“[T]he court has the power [at the pretrial conference] to compel the parties to agree to all facts concerning which there can be no real issue.”).

wise for the court to reevaluate whether it will retain jurisdiction over those claims.<sup>2678</sup> Factors to be considered in determining whether to retain jurisdiction include comity, judicial economy, convenience, and fairness.<sup>2679</sup>

35.35 Trial

RICO trials typically are not conducive to bifurcation. Moreover, some of the technical issues in civil RICO trials may be particularly confusing to lay jurors. Consider whether any or all of the following would assist the jury in understanding some of these complexities:

- allowing joint presentation by the attorneys of a preliminary statement, either during voir dire or prior to the opening statements, to explain the general nature of the claims and some of the characteristics and elements of a civil RICO case (e.g., that the case is a civil, not criminal action; that the burden of proof is by a preponderance of the evidence, not beyond a reasonable doubt; and that the use of the term “racketeer” does not mean that the defendant is associated with “organized crime”);
- explaining to the jury that although the plaintiff must prove that the defendant committed the underlying predicate act, proof of the commission of that act does not in itself constitute proof that the defendant violated RICO;
- permitting the parties to make mini-opening statements or summaries of the relevant portions of witnesses’ testimony—for example, capsulizing for the jury that certain witnesses are being called to establish the elements of a particular predicate act; and
- permitting the jurors to take notes.

2678. Guidry v. Bank of La Place, 954 F.2d 278, 285 (5th Cir. 1992) (in cases where federal claims have been dismissed and no basis exists for federal jurisdiction, district courts are “to decide whether to retain jurisdiction [over state claims] based on considerations of judicial economy, convenience, fairness and comity”); Scottsdale Ins. Co. v. Dorman, 153 F. Supp. 2d 852, 858 (E.D. La. 2001) (declining to retain jurisdiction over state law fraud claim after dismissal of RICO cause of action, because plaintiff would not be unduly prejudiced, matter had not proceeded past pleading stage, plaintiff could refile claim in state court, and activity to date in the case had focused on RICO).

2679. Camelio v. Am. Fed’n, 137 F.3d 666, 672 (1st Cir. 1998) (“[T]he balance of competing factors ordinarily will weigh strongly in favor of declining jurisdiction over state law claims where the foundational federal claims have been dismissed at an early stage of the litigation.”).

Special verdicts or a general verdict with interrogatories may help avoid confusion. Consider directing the jurors' attention to the sufficiency of each separate statutory and common-law claim submitted for their decision. Issues may be submitted to the jury for decision sequentially, both to simplify deliberations and to obviate deliberation on issues rendered moot by an earlier verdict. Note that some courts have held that the jury should not be informed of the treble damages provision.<sup>2680</sup>

Complex litigation generally has its own unique demands, and it calls for counsel and the court to adapt any proposed order to those complexities. The orders and forms that follow represent only a starting point for the court to consider in structuring its approach to managing a particular set of complex cases. Judges generally expect that experienced counsel will propose forms that will deal with the unique features of the litigation at hand.

Although the orders presented below generally are composites of several orders or revisions of a single order, we have not attempted to document the origin of each provision of each order or the authority to issue such orders. While judges have used variations and portions of these orders to manage complex litigation, the authority to issue such orders may or may not have been tested.

Additional sample orders and forms may be found in the United States Judicial Conference's Civil Litigation Management Manual (2001) (available from the Federal Judicial Center), in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure Appendix of Forms, and on various Internet sites created for specific complex cases or MDL proceedings, some of which are listed below:

Order No. _____<sup>3</sup>

Preamble.<sup>4</sup> The court wishes to express clearly its expectation that professionalism, courtesy, and civility will endure throughout these proceedings. The Manual for Complex Litigation, Fourth at section 10.21 captures the spirit in these terms:

The added demands and burdens of complex litigation place a premium on attorney professionalism, and the judge should encourage counsel to act responsibly. The certification requirements of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 11 and 26(g) reflect some of the attorneys' obligations as officers of the court.

Because of the high level of competence and experience that attorneys ordinarily bring to this type of litigation, the court is confident that this objective will be achieved without judicial intervention.

It appearing that [the above styled case(s)] [the cases listed on Attachment _____] may merit special attention as complex litigation, the court ORDERS:

1. Initial Conference. All parties shall appear for a conference with the undersigned on the ____ day of ____ [date] _____, at ____ a.m./p.m. in [Court]room _____, United States Courthouse _____.
- (a) Attendance. To minimize costs and facilitate a manageable conference, parties are not required to attend the conference, and parties with similar interests are expected to agree to the extent practicable on a single attorney to act on their joint behalf at the conference. A party will not, by designating an attorney to represent its interests at the conference, be precluded from other representation during the litigation; and attendance at the conference will not waive objections to jurisdiction, venue, or service.<sup>5</sup>
- (b) Service List. This order is being mailed to the persons shown on Attachment _____, which has been prepared from the list of counsel making appearances with the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation. Counsel on this list are requested to forward a copy of the order to other attorneys who should be notified of the conference. A corrected service list will be prepared after the conference.

- (c) Other Participants. Persons who are not named as parties in this litigation but may later be joined as parties or are parties in related litigation pending in other federal and state courts are invited to attend in person or by counsel.
2. Purposes and Agenda. The conference will be held for the purposes specified in Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(a), 16(b), 16(c), and 26(f) and subject to the sanctions prescribed in Rule 16(f). A tentative agenda is appended as Attachment ____.<sup>6</sup> Counsel are encouraged to advise the court as soon as possible of any items that should be added to the agenda.
3. Preparations for Conference
- (a) Procedures for Complex Litigation. Counsel are expected to familiarize themselves with the Manual for Complex Litigation, Fourth and be prepared at the conference to suggest procedures that will facilitate the just, speedy, and inexpensive resolution of this litigation.
- (b) Initial Conference of Counsel. Before the conference, counsel shall confer and seek consensus to the extent possible with respect to the items on the agenda, including a proposed discovery plan under Rule 26(f) and a suggested schedule under Rule 16(b) for joinder of parties, amendment of pleadings, consideration of any class action allegations, motions, and trial. [The court designates _____ and _____ to arrange the initial meetings of plaintiffs' and defendants' counsel, respectively.]<sup>7</sup>
- (c) Preliminary Reports. Counsel will submit to the court by ____ [date] ____, a brief written statement indicating their preliminary understanding of the facts involved in the litigation and the critical factual and legal issues. These statements will not be filed with the clerk, will not be binding, will not waive claims or defenses, and may not be offered into evidence against a party in later proceedings.
- (d) List of Affiliated Companies and Counsel. To assist the court in identifying any problems of recusal or disqualification, counsel will submit to the court by ____ [date] ____, a list of all companies affiliated with the parties and all counsel associated in the litigation.
- (e) List of Pending Motions. Counsel's statement shall list all pending motions.
- (f) List of Related Cases. Counsel's statement shall list all related cases pending in state or federal court and their current status, to the extent known.
4. Interim Measures. Until otherwise ordered by the court:
- (a) Admission of Counsel. Attorneys admitted to practice and in good standing in any United States District Court are admitted pro hac vice in this litigation. Association of local cocounsel is not required.
- (b) Pleadings. Each defendant is granted an extension of time for responding by motion or answer to the complaint(s) until a date to be set at the conference.

Manual for Complex Litigation, Fourth

- (c) Pending and New Discovery. Pending the conference, all outstanding disclosure and discovery proceedings are stayed and no further discovery shall be initiated. This order does not (1) preclude voluntary informal discovery regarding the identification and location of relevant documents and witnesses; (2) preclude parties from stipulating to the conduct of a deposition that has already been scheduled; (3) prevent a party from voluntarily making disclosures, responding to an outstanding discovery request under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 33, 34, or 36; or (4) authorize a party to suspend its efforts in gathering information needed to respond to a request under Rule 33, 34, or 36. Relief from this stay may be granted for good cause shown, such as the ill health of a proposed deponent.
- (d) Preservation of Records. [See section 40.25.]
- (e) Motions. No motion shall be filed under Rule 11, 12, or 56 without leave of court and unless it includes a certificate that the movant has conferred with opposing counsel in a good-faith effort to resolve the matter without court action.
- [(f) Orders of Transferor Courts. All orders by transferor courts imposing dates for pleading or discovery are vacated.]
5. Later Filed Cases. This order shall also apply to related cases later filed in, removed to, or transferred to this court.
6. Applications for Lead and Liaison Counsel Appointments. The court intends to appoint plaintiffs' lead counsel and/or a plaintiffs' steering committee, as well as plaintiffs' liaison counsel. Applications for these positions must be filed with the clerk's office on or before [insert date in advance of initial pretrial conference]. The court will only consider attorneys who have filed a civil action in this litigation. The main criteria for these appointments are (1) willingness and ability to commit to a time-consuming process; (2) ability to work cooperatively with others; (3) professional experience in this type of litigation; and (4) access to sufficient resources to advance the litigation in a timely manner. [Applications should also set forth attorney fee proposals, rates, and percentages that applicants expect to seek if the litigation succeeds in creating a common fund.]
7. Other Provisions. [Include any special instructions, such as procedures for presenting emergency matters prior to conference.]

Dated: _____

_____
United States District JudgeAttachments<sup>8</sup>Notes:

1. In its order establishing a master case file—a decision that is frequently deferred until the initial conference—the court should include provisions such as those contained in infra section 40.21, ¶ 1, and specify a master file number. The multidistrict litigation (MDL) number is used

if the litigation includes cases transferred under 28 U.S.C. § 1407. Documents that apply generally to all constituent cases are so identified; those that apply only to particular cases should specify in their captions or by a separate list the style of case or case number that they apply to.

2. Courts frequently assign multiple litigation a descriptive name, both to serve as an abbreviated caption in orders, pleadings, and other documents, and to minimize confusion if parties are changed or cases are dismissed. In multidistrict proceedings under 28 U.S.C. § 1407, the name given by the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation is used.

3. If many orders may be entered during the litigation, the court should number its major orders sequentially for convenient reference. An explanatory description of the nature of the order is often added in parentheses. Transcripts of conferences at which rulings are made should be included in the numerical sequence if no separate order incorporating these rulings will be prepared.

4. The court may wish to use these or similar words to set a tone for the litigation. Supra section 10.21 may provide further ideas along these lines.

5. In some cases the court may decide that the parties themselves should attend the conference with their counsel. See supra section 11.23.

6. As an alternative, the clause might read, “The items listed in the MCL 4th, section 11.21, shall, to the extent applicable, constitute a tentative agenda.”

7. Designation of attorneys to organize these initial meetings may be useful both to fix responsibility and to reduce early factionalism among those interested in becoming lead or liaison counsel. The attorneys designated by the court need not be persons who would be considered for appointment as lead or liaison counsel.

8. For ease of drafting, as well as reference, append lists and lengthy directives (e.g., a protective order for confidential documents) as attachments rather than include them within the body of an order. Sample orders and other materials from the MCL 4th may be incorporated by reference.

40.21 General

[caption]

Order No. _____
(Initial Case-Management Order)

Having considered the comments and proposals of the parties presented at the initial conference held _____ [date] _____, the court ORDERS:

1. Pretrial Consolidation. The cases listed on Attachment _____ are, until further order, consolidated for pretrial purposes. This order does not constitute a determination that these actions should be consolidated for trial, nor does it have the effect of making any entity a party to an action in which it has not been joined and served in accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.
  - (a) Master Docket and File. The clerk will maintain a master docket and case file under the style "In re _____ LITIGATION," master file number _____. All orders, pleadings, motions, and other documents will, when filed and docketed in the master case file, be deemed filed and docketed in each individual case to the extent applicable.
  - (b) Captions; Separate Filing. Orders, pleadings, motions, and other documents will bear a caption similar to that of this order.<sup>1</sup> If generally applicable to all consolidated actions, they shall include in their caption the notation that they relate to "ALL CASES" and be filed and docketed only in the master file. Documents intended to apply only to particular cases will indicate in their caption the case number of the case(s) to which they apply, and extra copies shall be provided to the clerk to facilitate filing and docketing both in the master case file and the specified individual case files.
  - (c) Discovery Requests and Responses. Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(d), discovery requests and responses will not be filed with the court except when specifically ordered by the court or to the extent offered in connection with a motion.<sup>2</sup>

[(d) Coordinated Actions. The actions listed on Attachment _____ are not consolidated for pretrial purposes at the present time, but discovery in such cases shall be coordinated with that in the consolidated actions to prevent duplication and conflicts.<sup>3</sup>]

2. Organization of Counsel<sup>4</sup>

(a) Plaintiffs. To act on behalf of plaintiffs with the responsibilities prescribed in [Attachment _____] [see section 40.22], the court designates—

(1) as Liaison Counsel: _____ [name, address, telephone number]

(2) as Lead Counsel: _____ [name, address, telephone number]

(3) as additional members of Plaintiffs’ Steering Committee:
 _____ [names, addresses, telephone numbers]
 _____

(b) Defendants. To act as liaison counsel on behalf of all defendants [except defendant(s) _____] with the responsibilities prescribed in [Attachment _____] [see section 40.22, ¶4], the court designates _____ [name, address, telephone number].

(c) Reimbursement. If agreement cannot be reached on a method for periodically reimbursing attorneys for expenses incurred and paying them for services rendered as lead or liaison counsel, the matter will be presented to the court for resolution.

(d) Time Records. Counsel who anticipate seeking an award of attorney fees from the court shall comply with the directives contained in [Attachment _____] [see section 40.23] regarding the maintenance and filing of contemporaneous records reflecting the services performed and the expenses incurred.

3. Service of Documents

(a) Orders. A copy of each order will be provided to plaintiffs’ liaison counsel and defendants’ liaison counsel for distribution as appropriate to other counsel and parties. [A copy shall also be provided to counsel for defendant(s) _____.]

(b) Pleadings, Motions, and Other Documents. Plaintiffs’ liaison counsel will be provided with _____ copies of each pleading, motion, or other document filed by a party; defendants’ liaison counsel will be provided with _____ copies of each such document. [Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 5(b), service on liaison counsel constitutes service on other attorneys and parties for whom liaison counsel is acting.<sup>5</sup>]

[(c) Service of Original Complaints; Amendments Adding Parties. To eliminate disputes about service of process and to reduce the expense of such service, defendants _____ [name] and _____ [name] have agreed to waive service of process for claims filed in federal court that fall within the scope of the _____ [above-captioned] litigation, subject to the provisions of Rule 4(d). The notice required by Rule 4(d) should be sent to _____ [name and address of representative/counsel to receive service] and _____ [name and address of representative/counsel to receive service]. Plaintiffs have 30 days from the date of this order or the date of filing, whichever is later, to provide notice of the original complaint or an amendment adding one or more of the above defendants to the complaint.<sup>6]</sup>

Manual for Complex Litigation, Fourth

4. Status Conferences

- (a) Regularly Scheduled Conferences. The court will convene a status conference in this litigation every _____ [insert scheduled time], subject to the court's calendar. Except for emergencies, motions should not be brought for hearing at any time other than a regularly scheduled status conference. To be heard at a status conference, motions must be fully briefed at least _____ [insert time period]. Lead counsel for the parties shall (1) confer at least _____ [insert time period] before each scheduled conference and attempt to resolve outstanding disputes and (2) provide the court at least _____ [insert time period] prior to the hearing a joint letter listing all motions and other matters the parties anticipate addressing at the conference. Parties should make every effort not to notice depositions for days on which status conferences are scheduled, and no deposition shall go forward on such days without prior leave of court.
- (b) Telephone Conferences. Telephone conferences may be scheduled at the court's discretion by prior arrangement through the court's chambers, if all necessary parties are available and receive at least 24 hours notice.

5. Refinement of Issues

- (a) General Briefing Requirements. Briefs in support of, or in opposition to, any motions may not exceed _____ [number of] pages without leave of court. Reply briefs must be limited to _____ [number of] pages without leave of court.
- (b) Rule 12 Motions. [Include rulings on pending Rule 12 motions if appropriate, or establish dates for filing, briefs, and arguments. For example, "The motions of defendants A.B. and C.D. to dismiss the complaint of plaintiff E.F. for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted are, upon consideration, DENIED. A similar motion is hereby deemed filed by each other defendant, and the same order deemed made on each such motion."]
- (c) Pleadings. Each defendant shall have until _____ [date], to file its answer to the complaint, including any cross-claims or counterclaims. Answers to any cross-claims or counterclaims will be filed by _____ [date]. Except for good cause shown, no additional parties may be joined as plaintiff, defendant, or third-party defendant after _____ [date].
- (d) Summary Judgment. The following issues may be submitted for early resolution on motions under Fed. R. Civ. P. 56: _____
- _____
- _____

Subject to further order of the court, motions seeking summary judgment on these issues will be filed with supporting affidavits and briefs by _____ [date].

Opposing affidavits and briefs will be filed by ____ [date] ____, and any reply briefs by ____ [date] ____.

- (e) Class Action. Attorney ____ [name] ____ will serve as interim counsel to represent the proposed class until the court determines whether to certify the action as a class action. To pursue class action treatment, plaintiffs must file by ____ [date] ____, a single, consolidated, special master amended complaint.

[Note: In an MDL proceeding, the consolidated class action complaints should ordinarily be filed in the transferee district.] The parties shall meet and confer to determine what, if any, expedited discovery needs to be conducted to address the class issues and specify the date by which plaintiffs will file a motion seeking class certification.<sup>7</sup>

A motion for class certification must do the following: identify the class(es) and any subclass(es) for which they seek certification; detail the facts that show satisfaction of the requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a) and (b), including the identity of named plaintiff(s) to represent each class and subclass, the qualifications of counsel for each class and subclass, and the rate, percentage, or other formula for calculating the amount of attorney fees counsel expect to request for representing the proposed class; present a plan for managing the litigation for trial; describe the forms, methods, and financing to be used to give notice to class members; and identify and include reports and affidavits of any experts to be used to support class certification.

Defendants will file by ____ [date] ____, any objections to class certification, specifying with particularity the factual and legal basis of their objection and identifying any facts on which an evidentiary dispute exists. Defendants must identify and include reports and affidavits of any experts to be used in opposition to class certification.

[Optional] A hearing will be conducted by the court, under Rule 23(c), on ____ [date] ____, at which time the parties may present affidavits and declarations, extracts of depositions, responses to interrogatories, and documentary evidence relevant to any factual disputes. Only on a showing of good cause will a party be permitted to call a witness to testify in person at the hearing. In any event, only an expert whose report has been provided in the motion or opposition will be permitted to testify.

6. Discovery

- (a) Approval of Expedited Discovery. Permission to take expedited discovery of a plaintiff and a plaintiff's health care provider is granted if all of the following conditions are present:
- (1) plaintiff or a member of plaintiff's family is terminally ill;
  - (2) there is an urgent need to record and preserve the testimony because of the gravity of the illness; and
  - (3) [if applicable] plaintiff has completed the Plaintiff Fact Sheet and provided the medical authorizations required by the fact sheet and defendants have had an opportunity to conduct a reasonable amount of informal discovery prior to the taking of any deposition.

- (b) Initial Disclosures. Initial disclosures under Rule 26(a) shall be made unless a party objects prior to or during the Rule 26(f) conference that disclosures are inappropriate in the context of the litigation and the court reviews the objection and agrees not to require such disclosure. [Alternative, if agreed or the court orders: The parties have agreed:/The court orders: that in light of the discovery plan set forth below, the parties are relieved of the responsibility to provide initial disclosures under Rule 26(a)(1).]
- (c) Schedule. Discovery shall be conducted according to the schedule at Attachment _____ [see section 40.24]. All discovery [other than on the issue(s) of _____] shall be completed by ___ [date]__.
- (d) General Limitations. All discovery requests and responses are subject to the requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1), 26(b)(2), and 26(g). Discovery shall not, without prior approval of the court, be taken of members of the proposed class or of persons in countries outside the United States; and any request for such discovery shall indicate why the discovery is needed and the specific information or documents sought.
- (e) Confidentiality Order. See Attachment _____ [see section 40.27].
- (f) Documents
  - (1) Preservation. See Attachment _____ [see section 40.25].
  - (2) Numbering System. Counsel shall develop and use a system for identifying by a unique number or symbol each document produced or referred to during the course of this litigation. All copies of the same document should ordinarily be assigned the same identification number.
  - (3) Rolling Production. The parties must produce documents to which they have not raised an objection on a rolling basis rather than waiting until all documents responsive to a request have been gathered. The parties must meet and confer regarding a schedule for the orderly production of different categories of documents.
  - (4) Document Depositories. See Attachment _____ [see section 40.26].
  - (5) Avoidance of Multiple Requests and Coordination of Document Production with Other Courts. Counsel shall, to the extent possible, coordinate and consolidate their requests for production and examination of documents to eliminate duplicative requests from the same party in this proceeding or in similar proceedings in other courts. No party shall request documents available to it at a document depository or from its own liaison counsel.

[Alternative: Defendants have agreed [or “The court orders the parties”] to produce in these proceedings all documents and information that they produce in related litigation dealing with the same ___ [insert the product, event, or set of transactions that define the litigation] ___ in other state and federal courts, on the same schedule or as close to the same schedule as practicable. Plaintiffs have agreed [or “The court orders”] that the sequence in which defendants produce the documents need not conform to the requirements of Rule 34(b).]

- (6) Privilege. A party who, relying on any privilege or on the work product doctrine, does not produce all relevant or requested documents in response to a request for production of documents or a subpoena must state that it is invoking a privilege and must specify which privilege or doctrine it is invoking. The parties are to confer to determine the format and time for production of privilege logs.

Where courts in other jurisdictions have ordered the production of any document initially withheld by defendant as privileged or work product, the party shall either produce the document in these proceedings or timely move for a protective order.

- (g) Interrogatories. Counsel shall, to the extent possible, combine their interrogatories to any party into a single set of questions. No question shall be asked that has already been answered in response to interrogatories filed by another party [or in response to a “fact sheet” submitted by the same party (as provided in section 40.52)] unless there is reason to believe that a different answer will be given. [Without leave of court, interrogatories shall not include more than _____ separate questions, including subparts.] Pursuant to Rule 26(e)(2), the parties must promptly amend answers to interrogatories to provide complete additional or corrective information.
- (h) Depositions. See Attachment _____ [see section 40.29].
- (i) Special Agreements. All parties shall be under a continuing duty to make prompt disclosure to the court (and, unless excused by the court for good cause shown, to other parties) of the existence and terms of all agreements and understandings, formal or informal, absolute or conditional, settling or limiting their rights or liabilities in this litigation. This obligation includes not only settlements, but also such matters as “loan receipt” and “Mary Carter” agreements, and insurance, indemnification, contribution, and damage-sharing agreements.
7. Trial. Subject to further order of the court, the parties are directed to be ready for trial on all issues [except _____] by _____ [date].
[Counsel are advised that the court will require a listing in advance of trial of the factual contentions each party expects to prove at the trial, identifying the witnesses and documents to be presented in support of each such contention, and the court may preclude the presentation of any contention, witness, or document not so identified.]
8. [Optional: Next Conference. The next pretrial conference is [tentatively] scheduled for _____ [date]. See ¶ 4(a) above.]
9. Later Filed Cases. The terms of this order, including pretrial consolidation, shall apply automatically to actions later instituted in, removed to, or transferred to this court (including cases transferred for pretrial purposes under 28 U.S.C. § 1407) that involve claims of _____.

§ 40.21

Manual for Complex Litigation, Fourth

Objections to such consolidation or other terms of this order shall promptly be filed, with a copy served on liaison counsel for plaintiffs and defendants.

Dated: _____
United States District Judge

Attachments: [Attachments to this order can be found from sections 40.22 to 40.3.]

Notes:

1. See supra section 40.1.
2. As a means of keeping advised of the progress of discovery without unnecessarily burdening the clerks' offices, the court may wish to add this provision: "At the time of requesting or responding to discovery, the parties shall file with the clerk a one-page notice indicating the nature of the discovery request or response."
3. Coordination of discovery, including use of joint notices for common depositions, is often appropriate even if consolidation is not warranted.
4. This order provides for appointment of only liaison counsel for defendants while providing for appointment of liaison counsel, lead counsel, and a steering committee for plaintiffs. In many cases, of course, the same organizational structure for both plaintiffs and defendants will be appropriate.
5. To ensure that each liaison counsel has a complete file, copies of all documents should be served on both liaison counsel even if individual service is also to be made on other attorneys and parties. If the court directs under Fed. R. Civ. P. 5 that service on all opposing counsel may be made by serving liaison counsel, some additional time should be provided for liaison counsel to make distribution among those counsel and parties interested in a particular document.
6. The court should encourage the parties to discuss waiver of service of process as contemplated by Rule 4(d). If the parties agree, the court should include a version of the bracketed clause in an order.
7. Note that Rule 23(c)(1) provides that the class certification decision need only be made at "an early practicable time." The revised rule contemplates that the decision may come after rulings on Rule 12 motions and early motions for summary judgment.

40.22 Responsibilities of Designated Counsel

It is ORDERED:

1. Plaintiffs' Lead Counsel. Plaintiffs' lead counsel<sup>1</sup> shall be generally responsible for coordinating the activities of plaintiffs during pretrial proceedings and shall
  - (a) determine (after such consultation with other members of Plaintiffs' Steering Committee and other cocounsel as may be appropriate) and present (in briefs, oral argument, or such other fashion as may be appropriate, personally or by a designee) to the court and opposing parties the position of the plaintiffs on all matters arising during pretrial proceedings;
  - (b) coordinate the initiation and conduct of discovery on behalf of plaintiffs consistent with the requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1), 26(2), and 26(g), including the preparation of joint interrogatories and requests for production of documents and the examination of witnesses in depositions;
  - (c) conduct settlement negotiations on behalf of plaintiffs, but not enter binding agreements except to the extent expressly authorized;
  - (d) delegate specific tasks to other counsel or committees of counsel,<sup>2</sup> as authorized by the court, in a manner to ensure that pretrial preparation for the plaintiffs is conducted efficiently and effectively;
  - (e) enter into stipulations with opposing counsel as necessary for the conduct of the litigation;
  - (f) prepare and distribute periodic status reports to the parties;
  - (g) maintain adequate time and disbursement records covering services as lead counsel;
  - (h) monitor the activities of cocounsel to ensure that schedules are met and unnecessary expenditures of time and funds are avoided; and
  - (i) perform such other duties as may be incidental to proper coordination of plaintiffs' pretrial activities or authorized by further order of the court.

Counsel for plaintiffs who disagree with lead counsel (or those acting on behalf of lead counsel) or who have individual or divergent positions may present written and oral arguments, conduct examinations of deponents, and otherwise act separately on behalf of their clients as appropriate, provided that in doing so they do not repeat arguments, questions, or actions of lead counsel.

2. Plaintiffs' Liaison Counsel. Plaintiffs' liaison counsel shall
  - (a) maintain and distribute to cocounsel and to defendants' liaison counsel an up-to-date service list;
  - (b) receive and, as appropriate, distribute to cocounsel orders from the court [and documents from opposing parties and counsel];

§ 40.22

Manual for Complex Litigation, Fourth

- (c) maintain and make available to cocounsel at reasonable hours a complete file of all documents served by or upon each party [except such documents as may be available at a document depository]; and
  - (d) establish and maintain a document depository [see section 40.261].
3. Plaintiffs' Steering Committee. The other members of plaintiffs' steering committee shall from time to time consult with plaintiffs' lead and liaison counsel in coordinating the plaintiffs' pretrial activities and in planning for trial.
  4. Defendants' Liaison Counsel. Defendants' liaison counsel shall
    - (a) maintain and distribute to cocounsel and to plaintiffs' liaison counsel an up-to-date service list;
    - (b) receive and, as appropriate, distribute to cocounsel orders from the court [and documents from opposing parties and counsel];
    - (c) maintain and make available to cocounsel at reasonable hours a complete file of all documents served by or upon each party [except such documents as may be available at a document depository];
    - (d) establish and maintain a document depository [see section 40.261]; and
    - (e) call meetings of cocounsel for the purpose of coordinating discovery, presentations at pretrial conferences, and other pretrial activities.
  5. Privileges Preserved. No communication among plaintiffs' counsel or among defendants' counsel shall be taken as a waiver of any privilege or protection to which they would otherwise be entitled.

Dated: _____
United States District Judge

Notes:

1. In litigation involving different types of claims, such as economic injury and personal injury claims, the court and counsel may wish to create parallel structures for the cases.
2. In litigation involving cases in state and federal courts, the court and counsel should consider appointing a state–federal liaison committee to coordinate pretrial and trial activity, particularly discovery.

§ 40.23

40.23 Attorneys' Time and Expense Records

It is ORDERED:

1. Maintenance of Contemporaneous Records. All counsel shall keep a daily record of their time spent and expenses incurred in connection with this litigation, indicating with specificity the hours, location, and particular activity (such as “conduct of deposition of A.B.”). The failure to maintain such records will be grounds for denying court-awarded attorney fees, as will an insufficient description of the activity (such as “research” or “review of correspondence”).<sup>1</sup>
2. Filing.<sup>2</sup> By the fifteenth day of each month, each firm that may seek an award (or approval) of a fee by the court shall file [under seal with the clerk] [with lead counsel or a budget/record/compensation committee established by lead counsel and the court] a report summarizing, according to each separate activity, the time and expenses spent by its members or associates during the preceding month (and the ordinary billing rates of such attorneys in effect during the month) and the accumulated total of the firm’s time, hourly rates, and expenses to date. [Lead Counsel shall file under seal with the clerk by the last day of the month a report summarizing, for all participating counsel, such time and expenses reports, arranged according to the particular activities.]

Dated: _____
United States District Judge

Notes:

1. The court may wish to include more specific guidelines concerning staffing, hourly rates, reimbursable expenses, and required documentation. See supra sections 14.21–14.22.
2. In cases in which the court may award fees, time and expense records should ordinarily be submitted through lead counsel, if one has been appointed, in order to assist lead counsel in monitoring the activities of cocounsel and in preparing a single, consolidated report for filing with the court. See supra section 14.212.

40.24 Scheduling Order

It is ORDERED:

1. Discovery<sup>1</sup> shall be conducted according to the following schedule:

Discovery	Time <sup>2</sup>
Interrogatories by all parties to ascertain identity and location of witnesses and documents, including computerized records	_____
Document production by all parties	_____
Lay-witness depositions
• noticed by plaintiffs	_____
• noticed by defendants	_____
Expert(s):
• plaintiffs:
– submission of reports	_____
– depositions	_____
• defendants:

2. Except for good cause shown—
  - (a) relief from the above schedule shall not be granted and all discovery shall be completed by _____ [date] _____;<sup>3</sup>
  - (b) discovery shall be limited to matters occurring after _____ [date] _____ [and before _____ [date] _____];
  - (c) no more than _____ interrogatories (including subparts) may be propounded to any party (exclusive of interrogatories seeking the identity and location of witnesses and documents);
  - [(d) no more than _____ depositions may be taken by either plaintiffs or defendants, and no single deposition (other than of _____) may take more than _____ hours/days;<sup>4</sup>] and § 40.24

- (e) no amendment of pleadings may be made after _____ [date]_____, and no additional parties may be joined as plaintiff, defendant, or third-party defendant after _____ [date]_____.
3. The parties are expected to be prepared for trial on all issues [except _____] by _____ [date]_____.

Dated: _____

Notes:

1. Where initial disclosure is appropriate, provision should be made in the order. See also supra section 40.21, ¶ 6(b). Note that the 2000 amendments to Rule 26(a)(1) contemplate that a party in a complex case may object during the Rule 26(f) conference that initial disclosures are “not appropriate in the circumstances of the action” and by such objection call for a judicial ruling on the question.

2. The time for undertaking or completing some aspect of discovery may be stated either by using specific dates or by reference to completion of discovery that should precede it. The listing in this sample order of certain forms of discovery is not intended to suggest that they should be undertaken in this sequence or that each item should be completed before other discovery is undertaken. For example, in many cases, depositions should be conducted by both sides during the same period of time, during which the parties may also be involved in preparing answers to interrogatories and responses to requests for admission.

3. The extent to which a schedule for all discovery can be established at the initial conference will depend on the circumstances of the litigation. In some complex cases it may be feasible to establish a timetable only for certain portions of discovery, leaving for subsequent conferences the setting of a schedule for other discovery and a final cutoff date for all discovery. In other cases, a comprehensive discovery schedule—which may even include dates for preparation and submission of a joint statement of contested and uncontested facts, and for identification of trial witnesses and documents—can be established at the initial conference.

4. Other restrictions on discovery may be added.

40.25 Preservation of Documents, Data, and Tangible Things

[Caption]

Interim Order Regarding Preservation

[The primary purpose of this order is to have the parties meet and confer to develop their own preservation plan. If the court determines that such a conference is unnecessary or undesirable, paragraph 3, Duty to Preserve, may be modified to serve as a stand-alone preservation order.]

1. Order to Meet and Confer

To further the just, speedy, and economical management of discovery, the parties are ORDERED to meet and confer as soon as practicable, no later than 30 days after the date of this order, to develop a plan for the preservation of documents, data, and tangible things reasonably anticipated to be subject to discovery in this action. The parties may conduct this conference as part of the Rule 26(f) conference if it is scheduled to take place within 30 days of the date of this order. The resulting preservation plan may be submitted to this Court as a proposed order under Rule 16(e).

2. Subjects for Consideration

The parties should attempt to reach agreement on all issues regarding the preservation of documents, data, and tangible things. These issues include, but are not necessarily limited to:

- (a) the extent of the preservation obligation, identifying the types of material to be preserved, the subject matter, time frame, the authors and addressees, and key words to be used in identifying responsive materials;
- (b) the identification of persons responsible for carrying out preservation obligations on behalf of each party;
- (c) the form and method of providing notice of the duty to preserve to persons identified as custodians of documents, data, and tangible things;
- (d) mechanisms for monitoring, certifying, or auditing custodian compliance with preservation obligations;
- (e) whether preservation will require suspending or modifying any routine business processes or procedures, with special attention to document-management programs and the recycling of computer data storage media;
- (f) the methods to preserve any volatile but potentially discoverable material, such as voicemail, active data in databases, or electronic messages;
- (g) the anticipated costs of preservation and ways to reduce or share these costs; and

- (h) a mechanism to review and modify the preservation obligation as discovery proceeds, eliminating or adding particular categories of documents, data, and tangible things.

3. Duty to Preserve

- (a) Until the parties reach agreement on a preservation plan, all parties and their counsel are reminded of their duty to preserve evidence that may be relevant to this action. The duty extends to documents, data, and tangible things in the possession, custody and control of the parties to this action, and any employees, agents, contractors, carriers, bailees, or other nonparties who possess materials reasonably anticipated to be subject to discovery in this action. Counsel is under an obligation to exercise reasonable efforts to identify and notify such nonparties, including employees of corporate or institutional parties.
- (b) “Documents, data, and tangible things” is to be interpreted broadly to include writings; records; files; correspondence; reports; memoranda; calendars; diaries; minutes; electronic messages; voicemail; E-mail; telephone message records or logs; computer and network activity logs; hard drives; backup data; removable computer storage media such as tapes, disks, and cards; printouts; document image files; Web pages; databases; spreadsheets; software; books; ledgers; journals; orders; invoices; bills; vouchers; checks; statements; worksheets; summaries; compilations; computations; charts; diagrams; graphic presentations; drawings; films; charts; digital or chemical process photographs; video, phonographic, tape, or digital recordings or transcripts thereof; drafts; jottings; and notes. Information that serves to identify, locate, or link such material, such as file inventories, file folders, indices, and metadata, is also included in this definition.
- (c) “Preservation” is to be interpreted broadly to accomplish the goal of maintaining the integrity of all documents, data, and tangible things reasonably anticipated to be subject to discovery under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26, 45, and 56(e) in this action. Preservation includes taking reasonable steps to prevent the partial or full destruction, alteration, testing, deletion, shredding, incineration, wiping, relocation, migration, theft, or mutation of such material, as well as negligent or intentional handling that would make material incomplete or inaccessible.
- (d) If the business practices of any party involve the routine destruction, recycling, relocation, or mutation of such materials, the party must, to the extent practicable for the pendency of this order, either
  - (1) halt such business processes;
  - (2) sequester or remove such material from the business process; or
  - (3) arrange for the preservation of complete and accurate duplicates or copies of such material, suitable for later discovery if requested.

§ 40.25

Manual for Complex Litigation, Fourth

- (e) Before the conference to develop a preservation plan, a party may apply to the court for further instructions regarding the duty to preserve specific categories of documents, data, or tangible things. A party may seek permission to resume routine business processes relating to the storage or destruction of specific categories of documents, data, or tangible things, upon a showing of undue cost, burden, or overbreadth.

4. Procedure in the Event No Agreement Is Reached

If, after conferring to develop a preservation plan, counsel do not reach agreement on the subjects listed under paragraph 2 of this order or on other material aspects of preservation, the parties are to submit to the court within three days of the conference a statement of the unresolved issues together with each party's proposal for their resolution of the issues. In framing an order regarding the preservation of documents, data, and tangible things, the court will consider those statements as well as any statements made in any applications under paragraph 3(e) of this order.

40.26 Document Depositories

.261 Order to Meet and Confer to Establish Joint Document Depository 749

.262 Order to Establish Separate Document Depositories 751

40.261 Order to Meet and Confer to Establish Joint Document Depository

[Caption]

It is ORDERED:<sup>1</sup>

1. Defendants, in consultation with plaintiffs, shall establish and maintain a document depository program (a “depository”) in a manner to be agreed on by the parties and/or ordered by the Court. The parties will propose to the court a formula for sharing the cost of maintaining the facility. The depository shall store all materials produced by parties and third-parties in this proceeding that may be needed for more than a single case, including documents, interrogatories, requests for admission, requests for production of documents, deposition transcripts, and similar materials. These materials shall be made available to any litigants in any case in the above-captioned litigation [and to any litigants in any related state court litigation].
2. Counsel must agree on computer hardware and software systems for scanning, viewing, downloading, and printing documents from remote locations. The parties must agree about allocating fees to operate the depository. The document depository must not be operated as a profit center. Each attorney/party seeking access to the depository must sign the agreement regarding rules of usage, protection of confidential documents, and payment of fees.
3. A party fully satisfies its obligation to produce documents to the parties in all cases in this litigation by placing those documents in the depository and serving notice of this placement on counsel in all affected cases. Such notice shall identify the documents produced, using a unique alphanumeric identifier, and notice shall be produced as documents are kept in the usual course of business or documents shall be organized and labeled to correspond with the categories in the request set forth in Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). This provision may be revised based on the parties’ submissions pursuant to paragraph 4 below.
4. Within _____ days of this order, plaintiffs’ lead counsel (or a designated representative) shall meet with defendants’ lead counsel (or a designated representative) to confer about the creation, financing, design, and operation of the depository and shall endeavor to present to the court a stipulation outlining a protocol for the depository, as well as the organization, categorization, and/or indexing of the defendants’ responses to plaintiffs’ document requests. The parties shall present to the court by _____ [date] _____ a proposed stipulation regarding the depository protocol and, if necessary, a statement of any matters on which they disagree. In developing this protocol, the parties shall consider potential protocols that would efficiently use technologies (such as CD-ROM or Internet-based production) and that would facilitate the parties' prompt and effective access to the contents of the depository and reduce parties' need to travel to examine documents. Any technology used must permit a hard copy of the document to be produced by the recipient.

5. Each party shall be responsible for delivering to the depository any documents produced in this proceeding pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 45. The party noticing a deposition shall be responsible for delivering to the depository any transcription (including videotape) of any deposition taken in any of the consolidated cases. The party serving any objection, answer, or response to an interrogatory, Rule 34 request, or request for admission in any of the consolidated cases shall be responsible for delivering a copy to the depository.
6. Plaintiffs' liaison counsel (or a designated representative) shall be responsible for monitoring the content of the depository and shall provide periodic notification to all plaintiffs' counsel of the addition of materials to the depository, with a basic description of the newly added materials.
7. Parties to the litigation may establish at their own expense private document depositories at other locations and make arrangements for obtaining documents for inclusion in those depositories as they see fit. The depository established pursuant to this order, however, shall be the official document depository for all consolidated cases.

Notes:

1. This order is derived primarily from an order issued in In re Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc. ATX, ATX II, & Wilderness Tires Products Liability Litigation, MDL No. 1373 (S.D. Ind. Jan. 2001). ## 40.262 Order to Establish Separate Document Depositories

It is ORDERED:

1. Establishment of Depositories.<sup>1</sup> Document depositories shall be established in _____ [specify city] _____ at such locations as the parties may agree on. In the absence of agreement, the court upon motion shall designate such locations. Documents produced by plaintiffs pursuant to formal or informal request shall be placed in a plaintiff's depository maintained at the expense of plaintiffs; those produced by defendants pursuant to formal or informal request shall be placed in a defendant's depository maintained at the expense of defendants. Each depository will contain equipment for producing copies and separately counting the copies that are made for each party.
2. Filing System. The filing party shall place the documents in the depository in sequential order according to the document numbers, and the documents shall be organized in groups in accordance with the document identification prefixes. Documents without identification numbers shall be organized in an orderly and logical fashion. Existing English translations of all foreign-language documents shall be filed with the documents.<sup>2</sup>
3. Access, Copying, Log. Counsel appearing for any party in this litigation and the staffs of their respective law firms working on these cases shall have reasonable access during business hours to each document in any such depository and may copy or obtain copies at the inspecting party's expense. Such inspection shall not be subject to monitoring by any party. A log will be kept of all persons who enter and leave the depository, and only duplicate copies of documents may be removed from the depository except by leave of court. [Access to, and copying of, confidential documents is subject to the limitations and requirements of the order protecting against unauthorized disclosure of such documents.]
4. Subsequent Filings. After the initial deposit of documents in the depository, notice of all subsequent deposits shall be given to both liaison counsel.

Dated: _____

_____
United States District Judge*Notes:*

1. This order contemplates creation of separate depositories for each side of the litigation. Consider whether the needs of the parties for separate facilities can also be accomplished through electronic means within a single facility. See order at supra section 40.261.

2. Provision may be made for use of the most appropriate technology for storage, retrieval, and distribution of the documents, including electronic materials. See supra section 11.444.

40.27 Confidentiality Order

It is hereby ordered that the following provisions shall govern claims of confidentiality in these proceedings:

- (a) Review of the confidential documents and information by counsel, experts, or consultants for the litigants in the litigation shall not waive the confidentiality of the documents or objections to production.
- (b) The inadvertent, unintentional, or in camera disclosure of a confidential document and information shall not generally be deemed a waiver, in whole or in part, of any party's claims of confidentiality.
- (c) Only documents containing trade secrets, special formulas, company security matters, customer lists, financial data, projected sales data, production data, matters relating to mergers and acquisitions, and data which touch upon the topic of price may be designated confidential, provided such documents have not previously been disclosed by the producing party to anyone except those in its employment or those retained by it. Such documents or parts thereof will be designated after review by an attorney for the producing party by stamping the word confidential on each page. [Alternative for an MDL relating to product liability litigation: Discovery material containing trade secrets, or other confidential or proprietary research, development, manufacturing, or commercial or business information, may be designated as confidential. Without prejudice to a party's right to seek production of the following information or of a party to object to its production, the information subject to a confidentiality designation may include the following: customer names; proprietary licensing, distribution, marketing, design, development, research, and manufacturing information—not publicly filed with any federal or state regulatory authority—regarding products and medicines, whether currently marketed or under development; clinical studies not publicly filed with any federal or state regulatory authority; information concerning competitors; production information; personnel records and information; and financial information not publicly filed with any federal or state regulatory authority.]
- (d) If any party believes a document not described in the above paragraph should nevertheless be considered confidential, it may make application to the court or special master. Such application shall only be granted for reasons shown and for extraordinary grounds.
- (e) Documents designated confidential shall be shown only to the attorneys, the parties, parties' experts, actual or proposed witnesses, and other persons whom the attorneys deem necessary to review the documents for the prosecution or defense of this lawsuit. Each person who is permitted to see confidential documents shall first be shown a copy of this order and shall further be advised of the obligation to honor the confidentiality designation. The parties agree that any discovery material produced in this litigation may be used in all actions encompassed by this insert product or other litigation name] [MDL/class action] litigation and in any other action brought by or on behalf of any other [insert product name] user who agrees to be bound by the terms of this order.

- (f) If a party believes that a document designated or sought to be designated confidential by the producing party does not warrant such designation, the party shall first make a good-faith effort to resolve such a dispute with opposing counsel. In the event that such a dispute cannot be resolved by the parties, either party may apply to the court or special master for a determination as to whether the designation is appropriate. The burden rests on the party seeking confidentiality to demonstrate that such designation is proper.
- (g) At the time of deposition or within 10 days after receipt of the deposition transcript, a party may designate as confidential specific portions of the transcript which contain confidential matters under the standards set forth in paragraph (a) above. This designation shall be in writing and served upon all counsel. No objection shall be interposed at deposition that an answer would elicit confidential information. Transcripts will be treated as confidential for this 10-day period. Any portions of a transcript designated confidential shall thereafter be treated as confidential in accordance with this order. In filing materials with the court in pretrial proceedings, counsel shall file under seal only those specific documents and that deposition testimony designated confidential, and only those specific portions of briefs, applications, and other filings that contain verbatim confidential data, or that set forth the substance of such confidential information.
- (h) In any application to the court or special master referred to or permitted by this order, the court or special master may exercise discretion in determining whether the prevailing party in such a dispute may recover the costs incurred by it and, if so, the amount to be awarded.

40.28 Referral of Privilege Claims to Special Master

It appearing that submission of claims of privilege to a special master<sup>1</sup> appointed under Fed. R. Civ. P. 53 is warranted by the expected volume of such claims and by the likelihood that in camera inspection may be needed to rule on these claims and should be accomplished, to the extent possible, by someone other than the judge to whom this litigation has been assigned, the court hereby [“with the consent of the parties” or “having notified the parties and provided an opportunity to be heard”] ORDERS:

1. Appointment. _____ is appointed under Rule 53 as special master for the purpose of considering all claims of privilege (including claims of protection against disclosure for trial preparation materials) that may be asserted during the course of discovery in this litigation and for such other matters as may be referred to such special master by the court, such as resolution of disputes under the Confidentiality Order.
2. Procedures. The special master shall have the rights, powers, and duties provided in Rule 53 and may adopt such procedures as are not inconsistent with that rule or with this or other orders of the court. Until directed otherwise by the special master or the court, any person asserting a privilege shall create a privilege log that will specifically identify the document or other communication sought to be protected from disclosure, including the date, the person making the statement, the persons to whom or in whose presence the statement was made, other persons to whom the contents were or have been revealed, the general subject matter of the communication (unless itself claimed to be privileged), the particular privilege(s) or doctrine(s) upon which protection against disclosure is based, and any other circumstances affecting the existence, extent, or waiver of the privilege. When appropriate, the special master may require that this documentation of claims of privilege be verified.
3. Reports. The special master shall make findings of fact and conclusions of law with respect to the matters presented by the parties and shall report expeditiously to the court pursuant to Rule 53(f) as applicable in nonjury actions. Unless directed by the court or believed advisable by the special master, the report shall not be accompanied by a transcript of the proceedings, the evidence, or the exhibits. Such parts of the report, if any, that may be confidential shall be filed under seal pending further order of the court.
4. Fees and Expenses. Compensation, at rates mutually agreeable to the special master and the parties, shall be paid to the special master on a periodic basis by the parties, together with reimbursement for reasonable expenses incurred by the special master. The special master may employ other persons to provide clerical and secretarial assistance; such persons shall be under the supervision and control of the special master, who shall take appropriate action to ensure that such persons preserve the confidentiality of matters submitted to the special master for review. Fi-

Notes:

1. See supra section 11.52.
2. The order may provide the specific compensation payable to the special master and specify the reimbursable expenses.

40.29 Deposition Guidelines

It is ORDERED<sup>1</sup> that depositions be conducted in accordance with the following rules:

1. Cooperation. Counsel are expected to cooperate with, and be courteous to, each other and deponents.
2. Stipulations. Unless contrary to an order of the court, the parties (and when appropriate, a nonparty witness) may stipulate in any suitable writing to alter, amend, or modify any practice relating to noticing, conducting, or filing a deposition. Stipulations for the extension of discovery cutoffs set by the court are not valid, however, until approved by the court.
3. Scheduling. All depositions in this litigation may be cross-noticed in any related action pending in state court. Liaison counsel representing the side initiating a deposition shall provide to all known state liaison counsel at least ___ days notice of all depositions filed by plaintiffs and defendants, respectively. Absent extraordinary circumstances, counsel shall consult in advance with opposing counsel and unrepresented-proposed deponents in an effort to schedule depositions at mutually convenient times and places. [That some counsel may be unavailable shall not, however, in view of the number of attorneys involved in this litigation, be grounds for deferring or postponing a deposition if another attorney from the same firm or who represents a party with similar interests is able to attend.]

Scheduling should take into account (a) the availability of documents from among those produced by the parties and third parties, (b) the objective of avoiding the need to subject any person to repeated depositions, and (c) the need to preserve relevant testimony. As a general rule, no witness should be deposed on the same subject more than once in this litigation. A party seeking to take a second deposition of a witness shall provide the opposing party its basis for an exception and a listing of the subjects for which it seeks to depose the witness. Second depositions on new subject matter shall be permitted only upon consent of the parties or an order of this Court issued for good cause shown.

4. Location. The location of depositions should be as consistent as possible within each city so that any videotape, videoconferencing, or other equipment can be left in place.
5. Attendance
  - (a) Who May Be Present. Unless otherwise ordered under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c), depositions may be attended by counsel of record, members and employees of their firms, attorneys specially engaged by a party for purposes of the deposition, the parties or the representative of a party, counsel for the deponent, and potential witnesses. While a deponent is being examined about any stamped confidential document or the confidential information contained therein, persons to whom disclosure is not authorized under the Confidentiality Order shall be excluded.

- (b) Unnecessary Attendance. Unnecessary attendance by counsel is discouraged and may not be compensated in any fee application to the court. Counsel who have only marginal interest in a proposed deposition or who expect their interests to be adequately represented by other counsel may elect not to attend and to conduct, pursuant to paragraph 13 of this order, supplemental interrogation of the deponent should a review of the deposition reveal the need for such examination.
- (c) Notice of Intent to Attend a Deposition. To allow counsel to make arrangements for adequate deposition space, counsel who intend to attend a deposition noticed in the above-captioned litigation should advise counsel for the noticing party at least three days prior to the deposition, if feasible.

6. Conduct

- (a) Examination. Each side should ordinarily designate one attorney to conduct the principal examination of the deponent, and examination by other attorneys should be limited to matters not previously covered. Counsel should cooperate so examinations by multiple attorneys do not exceed the allotted time.
- (b) Transmittal of Copies. The attorney who conducts the principal examination for the noticing party is responsible for assuring that a copy of the deposition transcript, diskettes, and any videotapes are provided to the document depository and to liaison counsel.
- (c) Objections and Directions Not to Answer. Counsel shall comply with Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(1). When a privilege is claimed, the witness should nevertheless answer questions relevant to the existence, extent, or waiver of the privilege, such as the date of a communication, who made the statement, to whom and in whose presence the statement was made, other persons to whom the contents of the statement have been disclosed, and the general subject matter of the statement, unless such information is itself privileged.

Any objection made at a deposition shall be deemed to have been made on behalf of all other parties. All objections, except those relating to form and foundation, are preserved.

- (d) Private Consultation. Private conferences between deponents and their attorneys in the course of interrogation are improper except for the purpose of determining whether a privilege should be asserted. Unless prohibited by the court for good cause shown, such conferences may be held during normal recesses and adjournments.
- (e) Continuation of Deposition. If a deposition is not finished on Friday of a deposition week, it will continue on the following Monday, subject to the availability of the witness. If the witness is unavailable, it will resume on a newly noticed date.

7. Documents

- (a) Production of Documents. Witnesses subpoenaed to produce documents should ordinarily be served at least 30 days before the scheduled deposition.

Arrangements should be made to permit inspection of the documents before the interrogation commences.

- (b) Confidentiality Order. A copy of the confidentiality order shall be provided to the deponent before the deposition commences if the deponent is to produce or may be asked about documents that may contain confidential information. [Counsel shall comply with the provisions of the confidentiality order when examining a deponent about confidential information.]
  - (c) Copies. Extra copies of documents about which counsel expect to examine the deponent should ordinarily be provided to opposing counsel and the deponent. Deponents should be shown a document before being examined about it except when counsel seek to impeach or test the deponent's recollection.
  - (d) Marking of Deposition Exhibits. Documents shall be referred to by the unique alpha-numeric identifier assigned by the document depository.
8. Depositions of Witnesses Who Have No Knowledge of the Facts. An officer, director, or managing agent of a corporation or a government official served with a notice of a deposition or subpoena regarding a matter about which such person has no knowledge may submit to the noticing party, a reasonable time before the date noticed, an affidavit so stating and identifying a person within the corporation or government entity believed to have such knowledge. Notwithstanding such affidavit, the noticing party may proceed with the deposition, subject to the right of the witness to seek a protective order.
9. Recording Depositions by Nonstenographic Means
- (a) Tape-Recorded Depositions. By so indicating in its notice of a deposition, a party may record the deposition by tape recording in lieu of stenographic recording pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(2) and (3). Other parties may at their own expense arrange for stenographic recording of the deposition, may obtain a copy of the tape and transcript upon payment of a pro rata share of the noticing party's actual costs, and may prepare and file their own version of the transcript of the tape recording.
  - (b) Videotaped Depositions. By so indicating in its notice of a deposition, a party may record the deposition by videotape pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(2) and (3).
    - (1) Rules for Videotaped Reporting
      - (i) Video Operator. The operator(s) of the videotape recording equipment shall be subject to the provisions of Fed. R. Civ. P. 28(c). At the commencement of the deposition the operator(s) shall swear or affirm to record the proceedings fairly and accurately.
      - (ii) Attendance. Each witness, attorney, and other person attending the deposition shall be identified on camera at the commencement of the deposition. Thereafter, only the deponent (and demonstrative materials used during the deposition) will be videotaped.

- (iii) Standards. The deposition will be conducted in a manner to replicate, to the extent feasible, the presentation of evidence at a trial. Unless physically incapacitated, the deponent shall be seated at a table or in a witness box except when reviewing or presenting demonstrative materials for which a change in position is needed. To the extent practicable, the deposition will be conducted in a neutral setting, against a solid background, with only such lighting as is required for accurate video recording. Lighting, camera angle, lens setting, and field of view will be changed only as necessary to record accurately the natural body movements of the deponent or to portray exhibits and materials used during the deposition. Sound levels will be altered only as necessary to record satisfactorily the voices of counsel and the deponent. Eating and smoking by deponents or counsel during the deposition will not be permitted.
- (iv) Interruptions. [The videotape shall run continuously throughout the active conduct of the deposition.] [Videotape recording will be suspended during all “off the record” discussions.]<sup>2</sup>
- (v) Index. The videotape operator shall use a counter on the recording equipment and after completion of the deposition shall prepare a log, cross-referenced to counter numbers, that identifies the positions on the tape at which examination by different counsel begins and ends, objections are made and examination resumes at which exhibits are identified, and any interruption of continuous tape recording occurs, whether for recesses, “off the record” discussions, mechanical failure, or otherwise.
- (vi) Filing. [The operator shall preserve custody of the original videotape in its original condition until further order of the court.] [Subject to the provisions of paragraph 10 of this order, the original of the tape recording, together with the operator’s log index and a certificate of the operator attesting to the accuracy of the tape, shall be filed with the clerk.] No part of a videotaped deposition shall be released or made available to any member of the public unless authorized by the court.
- (vii) Objections. Requests for pretrial rulings on the admissibility of evidence obtained during a videotaped deposition shall be accompanied by appropriate pages of the written transcript. If needed for an informed ruling, a copy of the videotape and equipment for viewing the tape shall also be provided to the court.
- (viii) Use at Trial; Purged Tapes. A party desiring to offer a videotape deposition at trial shall be responsible for having available appropriate playback equipment and a trained operator. After the designation by all parties of the portions of a videotape to be used at trial, an edited copy of the tape, purged of unnecessary portions (and any portions to which objections have been sustained), [may] [shall] be prepared by the offering party to facilitate continuous playback; but a copy of the edited tape shall be made available to other parties at least ____ days before it is used, and the unedited original of the tape shall also be available at the trial.

10. Telephonic Depositions. By indicating in its notice of a deposition that it wishes to conduct the deposition by telephone, a party shall be deemed to have moved for such an order under Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(7). Unless an objection is filed and served within ____ days after such notice is received, the court shall be deemed to have granted the motion. Other parties may examine the deponent telephonically or in person. However, all persons present with the deponent shall be identified in the deposition and shall not, by word, sign, or otherwise, coach or suggest answers to the deponent.
11. Waiver of Transcription and Filing. The parties and deponents are authorized and encouraged to waive transcription and filing of depositions that prove to be of little or no usefulness in the litigation or to agree to defer transcription and filing until the need for using the deposition arises.
12. Use. Depositions conducted in this litigation may be used in related cases in any state court to the extent permitted by that state's laws and rules. Depositions may, under the conditions prescribed in Fed. R. Civ. P. 32(a)(1)–(4) or as otherwise permitted by the Federal Rules of Evidence, be used against any party (including parties later added and parties in cases subsequently filed in, removed to, or transferred to this court as part of this litigation):
  - (a) who was present or represented at the deposition;
  - (b) who had reasonable notice thereof; or
  - (c) who, within 30 days after the filing of the deposition (or, if later, within 60 days after becoming a party in this court in any action that is a part of this litigation), fails to show just cause why such deposition should not be usable against such party.
13. Supplemental Depositions. Each party not present or represented at a deposition (including parties later added and parties in cases subsequently filed in, removed to, or transferred to this court) may, within 30 days after the filing of the deposition (or, if later, within 60 days after becoming a party in this court in any action that is a part of this litigation), request permission to conduct a supplemental deposition of the deponent, including the right to take such deposition telephonically and by nonstenographic means. If permitted, the deposition shall be treated as the resumption of the deposition originally noticed; and each deponent shall, at the conclusion of the initial deposition, be advised of the opportunity of nonattending parties to request a resumption of such deposition, subject to the right of the deponent to seek a protective order. Such examination shall not be repetitive of the prior interrogation.
14. Disputes During Depositions
  - (a) Disputes between the parties that arise during a deposition should be addressed to this [MDL] court rather than the district court in which the deposition is being conducted. The undersigned will exercise by telephone the authority granted under 28 U.S.C. § 1407(b) to act as district judge in the district in which the deposition is taken.<sup>2</sup>

- (b) Immediate Presentation. Disputes arising during depositions that cannot be resolved by agreement and that, if not immediately resolved, will significantly disrupt the discovery schedule or require a rescheduling of the deposition, should be presented by telephone to the court. If the judge is not available during the period while the deposition is being conducted, the dispute may be submitted to Magistrate Judge _____ by telephone or as the judge may direct.<sup>3</sup> The presentation of the issue and the court's ruling will be recorded as part of the deposition.<sup>4</sup>

Notes:

1. See supra section 11.45.
2. The power to exercise authority over nonparty deponents outside the district is available only in multidistrict litigation, unless the judge has been given an intracircuit or intercircuit assignment.
3. See supra section 11.456.
4. If a simultaneous stenographic transcript is being made, the court may prefer that "off the record" discussions be eliminated from the videotape.

40.3 Order Creating a Web Site

Order No. _____

[Lead and Liaison Counsel for Plaintiffs and Defendants are directed to meet and confer for the purpose of establishing] [The Court will create and maintain] a Web site devoted solely to the [insert MDL name or caption] litigation. The site will contain sections through which the parties, counsel, and the public may access court orders, court opinions, court minutes, court calendars, frequently asked questions, court transcripts, court docket, current developments, information about plaintiffs' and defendants' lead and liaison counsel, and other information to be identified by the parties or the court and its staff.

Plaintiffs' and defendants' lead and liaison counsel should meet and confer to identify other information that might be included on the Web site, including

- documents stored in a document depository, or electronic links to such documents;
- notices and schedules of depositions and other discovery requests;
- announcements relating to proceedings and events in this litigation;
- listings of related cases in the state courts and information about how to contact judges and attorneys involved in such cases;
- documents, orders, or opinions in related cases that are of significant importance in this litigation; and
- any other materials the parties find to be important to facilitating the fair and efficient conduct of this litigation.

Counsel need to ensure that the Web site is compatible with the Case Management/Electronic Case Filing (CM/ECF) system in place [or to be developed] in this court. The Web site should contain appropriate linkages to information available through the CM/ECF system.

Counsel may recommend, by motion, that a portion of the Web site be accessible only to counsel for plaintiffs, counsel for defendants, or both. Any limitations, however, should be restricted to (1) matters that represent the work product of attorneys for plaintiffs or defendants and are not otherwise available to other persons, and (2) matters that are confidential under a protective order issued by this court. The Web site should be established so that it is compatible with most communications software, with a view toward making it publicly available.

Counsel are expected to use computers to prepare documents sent to the clerk or to the judge's chambers and to provide electronic versions of all documents.

40.42 Order Setting Hearing on Proposed Class Settlement

[caption]

Order No. _____

The court having preliminarily reviewed the proposed settlement of this action, it is ORDERED:

1. Proposed Settlement. The proposed settlement between the plaintiff class and the defendants appears to be within the range of reasonableness and accordingly shall be submitted to the class members for their consideration and for a hearing under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e).
2. Hearing. A hearing shall be held in Courtroom _____, United States Courthouse, _____ [address] _____, at ____ a.m./p.m., on ____ [date] ____, to consider whether the settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate and should receive the court’s final approval.
  - (a) Objections by class members to the proposed settlement will be considered if filed in writing with the clerk on or before ____ [date] ____.
  - (b) At the hearing, class members may be heard orally in support of or in opposition to the settlement, provided such persons file with the clerk by ____ [date] ____, a written notification of their desire to appear personally, indicating (if in opposition to the settlement) briefly the nature of the objection.
  - (c) Counsel for the class and for the defendants should be prepared at the hearing to respond to objections filed by class members and to provide other information, as appropriate, bearing on whether or not the settlement should be approved.
3. Notice. The parties to the proposed settlement shall by ____ [date] ____, cause to be mailed in the name of the clerk, by first class mail, postage prepaid, to members of the class [who did not timely elect to be excluded from litigation] a notice in plain language and in substantially the form of the Federal Judicial Center’s Illustrative Notices, which can be found on the Class Action Notices page of the Center’s Web site (www.fjc.gov). [Notice of the proposed settlement (and of the rights of class members to object to or opt out of the proposed settlement) shall also be given by publication in a summary form as illustrated on the Class Action Notices page of the Center’s Web site.

The notice should include information about attorney fees sought by attorneys for the class.<sup>1</sup>

Order No. _____

In accordance with the findings and conclusions contained in the Opinion [omitted] filed concurrently, it is ORDERED:

1. Class Certification.<sup>1</sup> Civil Action No. _____, styled _____, shall be maintained as a class action on behalf of the following class of plaintiffs:

[Describe class in objective terms to the extent possible. For example, “All persons and entities throughout the United States and its territories (other than [widget] manufacturers and entities owned or controlled by them) that, between _____ [date] _____, and _____ [date] _____, have purchased [widgets] directly from any of the defendants or any other [widget] manufacturer.”] with respect to the following cause(s) of action:

[Describe class claims as precisely as possible. For example, “Any claims for damages or injunctive relief under federal antitrust laws premised upon an alleged conspiracy among [widget] manufacturers to restrict competition in the manufacture, distribution, and sale of [widgets] by setting the minimum prices charged for [widgets] between _____ [date] _____, and _____ [date] _____.”]

2. Class Representative; Class Counsel. [A.B. Co.] is designated as class representative and [X.Y.] is designated as counsel for the class.
3. Exclusion. The notice to class members must inform them as to how they may exclude themselves from the class.
4. Proposed Settlement. The proposed settlement between the plaintiff class and the defendants appears, upon preliminary review, to be within the range of reasonableness and accordingly shall be submitted to the class members for their consideration and for a hearing under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(e). The terms of the settlement are as follows:

40.44 Order Approving Settlement/Claims Procedure

[caption]

Order No. _____

In accordance with the findings and conclusions contained in the Opinion [omitted] filed concurrently, it is ORDERED:

1. Approval of Settlement. The settlement is, after hearing, determined to be fair, reasonable, and adequate. It is, therefore, approved.
2. Award of Fees and Expenses. In accordance with the findings and conclusions contained in the Opinion [omitted], [X.Y.] is awarded $_____ as compensation and $_____ as reimbursement for expenses, to be paid [from the settlement fund] [by the defendants].<sup>1</sup> [Application for an award from the settlement fund of additional fees and expenses in connection with further proceedings, including administration and distribution of the settlement fund, may be made to the court.]
3. Administration and Distribution of Settlement Fund
  - (a) Investment. [After payment of counsel fees and expenses as awarded by the court,] the settlement fund shall, pending distribution to class members, be held in interest-bearing investments to be approved by the court from time to time.
  - (b) Allocation. The [net] settlement fund shall be allocated among the class members in proportion to their “qualified purchase,” which means the net price (after discounts and allowances) paid by them to [widget] manufacturers for [widgets] from ____ [date] ____, to ____ [date] ____.
  - (c) Claims; proof of purchases. Unless extended by the court (or the special master) class members shall have until ____ [date] ____, to submit claims detailing, with appropriate supporting proof, their “qualified purchases.”
  - (d) Special master.<sup>2</sup> _____ is appointed as special master under Fed. R. Civ. P. 53 to review, tabulate, and (as appropriate) audit claims made by class members. The special master shall establish procedures to resolve disputes regarding eligibility of persons to be members of the class and regarding the amount of “qualified purchases” by such persons. The findings and conclusions of the special master identifying the class members, their respective “qualified purchases,” and their allocable shares of the settlement fund shall be reported to the court under Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(f) as soon as is practicable. Compensation and expenses of the special master will be paid from the settlement fund in such amount as the court may determine to be fair and reasonable.
  - (e) Distribution. The net settlement fund, with interest, shall be distributed to class members as soon as practicable after the amount to which each member is entitled has been determined. Any funds remaining after distribution has been completed may be distributed as the court directs.

Sample Orders

- 4. Notice. Class counsel shall by _____ [date] _____, cause to be mailed in the name of the clerk by first class mail, postage prepaid, to members of the class [who did not timely elect to be excluded from litigation] a notice in plain language and in substantially the form of the Federal Judicial Center’s Illustrative Notices, which can be found on the Class Action Notices page of the Center’s Web site (www.fjc.gov). [Notice of the proposed settlement (and of the rights of class members to object to or opt out of the proposed settlement) shall also be given by publication in a summary form as illustrated on the Class Action Notices page of the Center’s Web site.

The notice should include information about attorney fees sought by attorneys for the class.

- 5. Reserved Jurisdiction of Court. The court retains jurisdiction over the settlement of this case and may enter additional orders to effectuate the fair and orderly administration of the settlement as may from time to time be appropriate, including the determination of persons to whom payment should be made in the event of death or dissolution and the right to set aside a portion of the net settlement fund not exceeding [$ _____] [ _____% of the net fund] as a reserve for late claims and other contingencies and to determine the appropriate disposition of any portion of the reserve not distributed to the class members.

Dated: _____
United States District Judge

Notes:

- 1. This assumes that an application for attorneys’ fees was heard concurrently with the hearing on approval of the settlement. A joint hearing is recommended as an efficient and economical way to satisfy the notice requirement of Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1).
- 2. These sample forms contain provisions generally suitable if a special master is appointed to administer the settlement. In other cases, use of a claims committee or magistrate judge may be appropriate.

Order No. _____

It appearing that [the above-styled cases] [the cases listed on Attachment _____] share common issues with, and will involve common discovery with, certain cases pending in _____ [list other court(s)] (the “related actions”), and that pretrial proceedings in all these cases should be coordinated to avoid unnecessary conflicts and expense, conserve judicial resources, and expedite the disposition of all the cases, this court, after having consulted with counsel [and being advised that similar orders will be entered in such other court(s)<sup>1</sup>], ORDERS:

1. Designated Counsel<sup>2</sup>

- (a) Plaintiffs’ Lead and Liaison Counsel. _____ and _____ are designated as plaintiffs’ lead counsel and plaintiffs’ liaison counsel, respectively, in this court, with the responsibilities prescribed in [Attachment _____] [see section 40.21, paragraphs 1 and 2]. They may serve in similar capacities in the related cases if so authorized or permitted by the courts in which such cases are pending and, in any event, shall endeavor to coordinate activities in these cases with those in the related cases.
- (b) Defendants’ Liaison Counsel. _____ is designated to serve as defendants’ liaison counsel with the responsibilities prescribed in [Attachment _____] [see section 40.21, paragraph 4]. Defendants’ liaison counsel may serve in a similar capacity in the related cases if so authorized or permitted by such courts and, in any event, shall endeavor to coordinate activities in these cases with those in the related cases.
- (c) Compensation. Attorneys designated as lead or liaison counsel by this court and the other courts shall be entitled to reasonable compensation and reimbursement of expenses for services performed in such capacities, equitably apportioned among the parties in these and the related cases benefiting from such services. This court will cooperate with the other courts in making appropriate orders for such compensation and reimbursement if agreement cannot be reached between such counsel and the parties for whom they are acting.

§ 40.51

2. Discovery<sup>3</sup>

- (a) Joint Document Depositories. The document depositories prescribed in [Exhibit _____] [see section 40.261] shall be established for the joint use of parties in these related cases. [Subject to agreement regarding the sharing of expenses,] counsel in the related cases shall have access to the documents in such depositories to the same extent as counsel in the cases in this court. Parties will not make new requests for production of documents in these proceedings if such documents have already been produced and are available to them in the related cases.
- (b) Confidential Documents. Counsel in the related cases shall have access to confidential documents produced under the confidentiality order entered in this court [see, e.g., section 40.27] on the same terms and conditions as counsel in the cases in this court. Counsel in the cases in this court obtaining access to documents marked confidential under similar orders entered in other courts shall be subject to the terms and conditions of such orders.
- (c) Depositions. Depositions of persons whose testimony will likely be relevant both in these cases and in the related cases should ordinarily be cross-noticed for use in all such cases. [The parties in the cases before this court are directed to show cause within 60 days why the depositions previously taken in the related cases should not be usable in this court, subject to the right to conduct supplemental examination on a showing of need.]

3. Consistency of Rulings. To avoid unnecessary conflicts and inconsistencies in the rulings of this and the other courts on matters such as discovery disputes and scheduling conflicts,

[Alternate 1—Deferral to Prior Rulings]

This court will adopt a ruling already made on such matters by another court in a related case unless a different ruling is shown to be mandated by the laws and rules governing this court or justified by particular circumstances of the cases before this court.

[Alternate 2—Lead Case]

Such disputes will initially be presented in case no. _____, pending in _____ [name of court] _____, and the ruling made in that case will be given effect in all [other] cases in this court unless a different ruling is shown to be [mandated by the laws and rules governing this court or] justified by particular circumstances of such cases.

[Alternate 3—Joint Special Master]

_____ is appointed under Fed. R. Civ. P. 53(a)(1)(C) to serve as Special Master in these cases (and, under similar appointments by the other courts, in the related cases) (1) to assist the respective courts in preparing and monitoring schedules and plans for coordinated conduct of discovery and other pretrial proceedings; (2) to recommend to the respective courts appropriate resolution of discovery disputes, including controversies regarding limitations on the scope or form of discovery and questions regarding claims of privilege and confidentiality; and (3) to facilitate proper cooperation and coordination among counsel.

[Alternate 4—Joint Hearings]

This court will be prepared to conduct consolidated hearings and pretrial conferences with judges of the courts where related cases are pending and to enter joint rulings (except to the extent differences may be mandated by different laws or rules governing the courts or justified by special circumstances in the various cases).

4. Other Litigation. Upon application, these provisions may be ordered applicable to cases involving the same common issues subsequently filed in other courts.

Notes:

1. The terms of coordination between the affected courts should ordinarily be arranged—either by direct consultation between the judges of the courts or indirectly through counsel—before this type of order is entered, and, if feasible, parallel orders should be entered by the various courts. See supra sections 20.14, 20.31. References to coordinated proceedings have also been incorporated in several forms. See, e.g., supra sections 40.29 and 40.3.

2. This form provides for appointment of lead counsel and liaison counsel for plaintiffs, but only liaison counsel for defendants. In some cases, the same organizational structure will be appropriate both for plaintiffs and for defendants.

3. Depending on the circumstances, it may be appropriate to condition access to discovery materials either on a reciprocal obligation or on payment of fair compensation for a share of the services involved in gathering the information. See section 20.312 for a discussion of mechanisms for allocating compensation among federal and state litigants. ## 40.52 Mass Tort Case-Management Order

[caption]

It appearing that [the above-styled cases] [cases listed in Attachment _____] involve claims of death, personal injury, economic damages, punitive damages, and other claims of damage arising as a result of [exposure to] [use of] [_____ products] [the incident occurring at _____ on ____ [date] ____] and that other similar actions may be filed in or transferred to this court in the future, the court ORDERS:

1. Filing of Order. A copy of this order shall be filed in each such case. In cases subsequently filed, a copy will be provided by the clerk to each plaintiff at the time of the filing of the complaint and will be served with the complaint on any defendant not previously a party in these cases. [In cases subsequently removed or transferred to this court, a copy will be provided by the clerk to each new party upon removal or transfer.]
2. Pretrial Consolidation. All cases in this litigation are consolidated for pretrial purposes. This is not a determination that any of these actions should be consolidated for trial.
3. Types of Cases. By order of the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation (MDL Panel), numerous proposed class actions to remedy economic injuries alleged to have been caused by __ [insert product name] __ have been transferred to this court for coordinated pretrial proceedings. These cases and any proposed class actions that are subsequently filed or transferred to or filed in this proceeding are referenced as Class Action Cases.
 Numerous individual personal injury and wrongful death cases have also been transferred to this court for coordinated pretrial proceedings. These cases and any additional personal injury/wrongful death cases, brought on behalf of individual claimants, filed in or transferred to this court are referenced as “Personal Injury Cases.” [Insert and define any additional types of cases that are distinct and may call for separate management.]
4. Presentation of Test Case Remand Motions. Plaintiffs’ liaison counsel in personal injury cases shall consult with plaintiffs’ counsel and identify for the court no more than _____ [e.g., five] cases in which motions for remand to state court based on an arguable absence of federal subject-matter jurisdiction have been filed or are expected to be filed. These remand motions should, as nearly as possible, be representative of the various remand issues raised in the personal injury cases in this MDL litigation. In addition, plaintiffs’ counsel may identify one case in which a motion to remand the case to the transferor court for trial has been made. Plaintiffs’ Liaison Counsel shall submit to the court by ____ [date] ____ the names and individual case docket numbers of the cases identified as representative of the remand issues in this MDL proceeding. The court will set a schedule for briefing or supplemental briefing of the remand motions in those cases and place these motions on an expedited schedule for decision.

5. Filing Papers with the Court. The purpose of the following instructions is to reduce the time and expense of duplicate filings of documents through use of a master case file, while at the same time not congesting the master case with miscellaneous pleadings and orders that are of interest only to the parties directly affected by them. It is not intended that a party lose any rights based on a failure to follow these instructions.
  - (a) Master Docket and File. The clerk will maintain a master docket and case file under the style “In re _____ Product Liability Litigation (MDL-XXXX)” as master file number [CV NN-1000-X]. Orders, pleadings, motions, and other documents bearing a caption similar to that of this order will, when docketed and filed in the master case, be deemed to have been docketed and filed in each individual case to the extent applicable and will not ordinarily be separately docketed or physically filed in such individual cases. However, the caption may also contain a notation indicating whether the document relates to all cases or only to specified cases.
  - (b) Separate Filing. A document that relates only to a specific case and would not be of interest except to the parties directly affected by it—such as an amended complaint adding a party or a motion to dismiss a party—should bear the caption and case number of that case rather than of the master case file. Such a document will be docketed and filed in that case and not in the master case file. Please note that cases removed or transferred to this court are assigned a new case number in this court.
  - (c) Leave to Add Parties. Until otherwise directed, plaintiffs are granted leave, without need for any special motion or order, to add other plaintiffs to any pending (or subsequently filed, removed, or transferred) case if all plaintiffs in the case (1) will be represented by the same counsel (or if counsel for existing plaintiffs consent to the intervention), (2) are suing the same defendants, and (3) [were exposed to defendants’ products] in the same state. The purpose of this authorization is to avoid unnecessary filing fees and the delays inherent in 28 U.S.C. § 1407 transfers. The joinder of such parties will not be viewed as affecting subsequent motions by either plaintiffs or defendants for separate trials under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 42(b).
6. Master Pleadings, Motions, and Orders
  - (a) Master/Sample Complaints. Plaintiffs’ steering committee has filed in this district [CV NN-10000-X]:
    - (1) a master complaint containing allegations that would be suitable for adoption by reference in individual cases,
    - (2) a sample complaint illustrating how allegations from the master complaint can be incorporated into an individual case, and

- (3) a master class action complaint containing allegations that encompass the entire range of allegations and types of proposed class actions contained in individual cases filed in this court or transferred to this court by the MDL panel.

The allegations of the master complaint and the master class action complaint are not deemed automatically included in any particular case. However, in order to avoid possible problems with statutes of limitations or doctrines of repose, it shall be deemed (except to the extent a plaintiff thereafter files an amended complaint disavowing such claims and theories or limits its claims and theories to those contained in an amended complaint) that, as of this date, for cases now pending in this court (or as of the date other cases are filed in, removed to, or transferred to this court) a motion is filed in each such case to amend the complaint to add any potentially applicable claims and theories from the master complaint not contained in the complaint actually filed in that case.

- (b) Master Answers. By _____, each entity listed below will file in [CV NN-1000-X] a master answer that incorporates its defenses in law or fact to claims made against it in the various actions that are presently pending in this litigation, including any cross-claims it makes against other defendants. The answer will not attempt to provide a cross-reference to particular paragraphs or counts of the various complaints. The answer will, however, in a “generic” manner admit or deny (including denials based on lack of information and belief) the allegations typically included in claims or cross-claims made against it as well as make such additional allegations as are appropriate to its defenses or cross-claims. This may be done through allegations such as “It alleges that it is incorporated in State A; that it has its principal place of business in State B; that during the period from (date) to (date) it manufactured, sold, and distributed products intended to be used in _____; that these products were intended to be used only by trained, knowledgeable _____ and were accompanied by warnings and instructions that adequately explained such risks as were inherent and unavoidable in the products; that these products were not unreasonably dangerous, were suitable for the purposes for which they were intended, and were distributed with adequate and sufficient warnings; that it is without knowledge or information at this time sufficient to form a belief as to any averment that one of its products was used in the procedure on which the plaintiff’s complaint is based; that to the extent the plaintiff makes a claim for X (or under statute Y) it is not liable because _____; etc.”
- (1) When so filed in [CV NN-1000-X], these answers constitute an answer in each constituent case now pending or when hereafter filed in, removed to, or transferred to this court except to the extent the defendant later files a separate answer in an individual case.

- (2) A defendant not listed below may also file a master answer in [CV NN-1000-X] by ___[date]___, or within 45 days after the first case in which it is named as a defendant is filed in, removed to, or transferred to this court.
- (c) Refinement of Pleadings. It is anticipated that an amended, more specific complaint and answer may be required before a case is scheduled for trial or remanded to a transferor court, but amendments of pleadings prior to that time should generally be avoided.
- (d) Motions; Orders. A motion, brief, or response that has a potential effect on multiple parties (e.g., documents submitted in connection with a motion for partial summary judgment asserting that punitive damages are not recoverable with respect to [the product’s use] in State A) will be deemed made in all similar cases on behalf of, and against, all parties similarly situated except to the extent such other parties timely disavow such a position. Additional motions, briefs, or responses addressed to such issues should not be filed or submitted by other parties except to the extent needed because of inadequacy of the original papers, to present unique facts, or because of a difference in positions. Orders resolving such motions will likewise be deemed as made with respect to all parties similarly situated unless the order indicates otherwise.
7. Service of Original Complaints; Amendments Adding Parties
- (a) Acceptable Service. Exhibit _____ is a list of the “National Defendants”—that is, those entities that have frequently been named as defendants in these cases filed throughout the United States—with the name and address of their national counsel and information provided by national counsel indicating the state(s) in which they are incorporated, in which they have their principal place of doing business, and in which they will or may contest personal jurisdiction. To eliminate disputes over service of process and reduce the expense of such service, these defendants [have agreed] [shall inform the court within ___ days as to whether or not they agree] to accept service of process in these cases (without, however, waiving any objections to personal jurisdiction or venue) if a copy of the summons and complaint is sent, by certified mail, return receipt requested, to the person or address shown in Exhibit _____. Defendants’ agreement [report to the court] should indicate whether it applies to any case involving ___[insert product]___ claims filed in any federal district court or in any state court of general jurisdiction.
- (b) Extension of Time to Serve. Notwithstanding Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m), plaintiffs shall have thirty days after the date of this order (or, if later, thirty days after the date a case is subsequently filed in, removed to, or transferred to this court) in which to effect service on defendants.
8. Motions
- (a) Meet and Confer. To avoid unnecessary litigation concerning motions, including motions relating to discovery disputes, counsel are directed to meet and confer before filing a motion. In any motion filed, counsel for the moving party must certify that a good-faith effort was made to resolve the dispute.

(b) Motions Under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 11, 12, and 56. No motion shall be filed under Rule 11, 12, or 56 without leave of court.

9. Inactive [Product] [Incident] Docket. The purpose of this paragraph is to establish a procedure for separating cases in which the plaintiff has little or no physical impairment from cases with more serious impairments to assist the court in establishing priorities for managing its docket. The intent is to toll the operation of any applicable statutes of limitation or repose while a case is listed as inactive. The clerk shall establish a separate file called the “Inactive [product] [incident] Docket,” which shall consist of (1) cases voluntarily dismissed pursuant to a general stipulation prepared by plaintiffs and defendants that sets forth their agreement that such cases can be revived if specific conditions are met, and (2) claims initiated by a “Notice of Claim” procedure. To invoke the notice procedure, a claimant must file an “Affidavit of Notice of Claim” that includes (1) the name(s), address(es), and marital status of the claimant(s); (2) a brief statement of circumstances of claimant’s exposure(s) to the [product] [incident] giving rise to the common claims; (3) a statement of the nature of the injury, disease, or condition alleged to have been caused by the [product] [incident]; and (4) the names of the entities to be given notice and whom the claimant proposes to serve.

Upon certification of the claimant(s) that notices have been sent to all listed defendants in the manner set forth in the stipulation of agreement signed by plaintiffs’ and defendants’ representatives, the claims shall be recorded on the inactive docket.

The filing of the Notice of Claim or the voluntary dismissal pursuant to the stipulation shall toll all applicable statutes of limitation or repose regarding any claims of the plaintiff or plaintiff’s spouse, children, dependents, heirs, or estates arising relating to the exposure to [product] [incident]. Claims may be removed from the inactive docket at any time by the filing and serving of a complaint. Signing the stipulation referred to above signifies the consent of each signing party to this procedure and to the tolling of the statutes of limitations or repose as described above.

10. Settlement

[Insert any special provisions to facilitate settlement, such as appointment of a settlement judge or special master to assist the parties, a timetable for scheduling settlement conferences, or procedures for using arbitration, minitrials, or summary jury trials. Also include any provision for contributions by later-settling parties to compensate designated counsel for services previously rendered.]

11. Discovery

[In addition to the orders presented below, see separate discovery orders in section 40.25 through 40.29.]

- (a) Plaintiff Fact Sheets.<sup>2</sup> Each plaintiff whose case has been transferred to this court shall have ____ days from the entry of this order to complete and serve on defendants a plaintiff fact sheet and an authorization for release of medical records. Counsel shall meet and confer to agree on an electronic format for completion of the Fact Sheet. Transferred plaintiffs shall have ____ days from the date of this order to produce all documents requested in the fact sheet. When defendants notify the MDL panel of additional cases for transfer to this court, defendants shall serve plaintiffs in those cases with a copy of this order. The information contained in the plaintiff fact sheet must be verified under oath. Plaintiffs' responses will be treated as answers to interrogatories under Fed. R. Civ. P. 33 and requests for production of documents under Fed. R. Civ. P. 34 and must be supplemented in accordance with Fed. R. Civ. P. 26.

- (b) Document Requests. Within ____ days of entry of this order, plaintiffs must serve on defendants a master set of requests for production of documents. Any objections [that have not been dealt with in other cases in this litigation] to those document requests must be served within ____ days after receipt of the requests. Defendants will begin producing documents not subject to objection on a rolling basis upon entry of this order. The parties will meet and confer regarding a schedule for the orderly production of different categories of documents. The parties will seek to coordinate this schedule with document productions in pending state court proceedings.
- (c) Expedited Discovery. Expedited discovery of plaintiffs and plaintiffs' health care providers will be allowed when all of the following condition exist:
1. the plaintiff or a member of plaintiff's immediate family is terminally ill;
  2. there is an urgent need to record and preserve the testimony because of the gravity of the illness; and
  3. plaintiff has fully completed the plaintiff fact sheet and provided the execution of medical authorizations required in the fact sheet and defendants have had a reasonable opportunity to conduct informal discovery prior to the taking of a deposition.

40.53 CERCLA Case-Management Order

[caption]

Order No. _____

It is ORDERED:

1. Limited Consolidation. Until further order of the court, the above-captioned actions, Civil Action No. _____ and Civil Action No. _____ (collectively, the “Actions”), are consolidated before the undersigned for the limited purposes of coordinated case management and discovery.
2. Lodging of the Administrative Record; Stay of Administrative Record Discovery. On or before ____ [date] ____, plaintiff, the United States of America, will lodge with the court the administrative record developed by the Environmental Protection Agency (“EPA”) in connection with the initial Remedial Investigations and Feasibility Studies (RI/FS) for the _____ Landfill (the “Landfill”); on or before ____ [date] ____, _____ plaintiff, the United States of America, will lodge with the court the administrative record developed by the EPA in connection with the record of decision (including the Supplemental Feasibility Study). No discovery shall be permitted at this time as to what documents constitute or will constitute these administrative records until further Order of the court.
3. Temporary Stay of Counterclaims, Cross-Claims, and Third-Party Claims. Until ____ [date] ____, the date established herein for the second case-management conference, no counterclaims, cross-claims, or third-party claims in either of the Actions, and no claims related to the Landfill by defendants in one of the Actions against defendants in the other of the Actions, shall be filed. The stay as to counterclaims and third-party claims shall be addressed at the second case-management conference. All counterclaims, cross-claims, or third-party claims filed prior to the entry of this order are stayed until the second case-management conference.
4. Filing of Claims. At the second case-management conference, scheduled herein, the court will establish a schedule for filing of the claims referred to in paragraph 3. Nothing in this order shall prejudice the right of any defendant in either of the Actions to assert any such claims, nor shall any such claims be barred by laches or by any statute of limitations by virtue of the delay in filing such claims required by this order.
5. Realignment of Pleadings. The United States of America, in Civil No. _____, and the State Department of Environmental Protection, in Civil No. _____, are hereby granted leave to file amended complaints, not later than ____ [date] ____, without the necessity of a motion. The purposes of these amended complaints are to cure misnomer problems; to add defendants; to dismiss defendants already named, without prejudice; to conform the defendants named in the two amended complaints to the degree that the plaintiffs deem appropriate; and to clarify the causes of action, demands, and relief sought in the amended complaints to the degree that the plaintiffs deem appropriate. Existing defendants who have already answered or otherwise responded to the complaint need not answer or otherwise respond to the amended complaint unless they choose to do so. All other defendants shall answer or otherwise respond within the time provided in the Rules.

6. Joinder of New Parties. Except as provided herein or by subsequent order, no party may join an additional party in this case. The joinder of new parties may occur through the amendment of the complaints (see ____ above), or by the coordinated efforts of the defense litigation committee to be formalized by the defendants. The defense litigation committee will serve as a clearinghouse for information pertinent to identifying new parties through coordinated discovery efforts. Discovery with respect to joining new parties is discussed in paragraphs _____ below. No later than ____ [date] ____, the defense litigation committee shall have assembled a list of new parties whose joinder will be considered at the second case-management conference on ____ [date] ____.

To the extent feasible, this listing shall be selective, seeking joinder of parties with a relatively higher degree of alleged responsibility and continuing viability, and avoiding joinder of parties with a relatively lower degree of alleged responsibility or which are of doubtful viability. It is anticipated that leave to file a consolidated third-party complaint joining the new parties in an orderly fashion, and leave for individual defendants to file contractual indemnification claims, will be granted at the second case-management conference. [There will be an additional opportunity to join further new parties in the future as the cases unfold.]

7. Amendments. The goal of the amended complaints and the consolidated third-party complaint is to have a more unified and orderly set of pleadings and joinders so that these Actions may go forward expeditiously.
8. Scope of Discovery. Discovery shall be limited at present to the following issues:
- (a) Identification of new parties.
  - (b) Quantity, quality, and nexus of parties' wastes to the _____ _____ Landfill.

[It is anticipated that parties providing full discovery on these issues and believing themselves to have no nexus of hazardous wastes to the Landfill will be permitted to seek summary judgment in the near future.]

No discovery is permitted at this time regarding issues of “release or threatened release” at the Landfill, or of “the incurring of response costs consistent with the NCP at the Landfill.” Enlarging discovery to these issues, and the precise extent, timing, and appropriateness of summary judgment motion practice relating to some or all liability issues, will be considered at the second case-management conference, following lodging of the administrative records under _____, above.

Forms of Discovery

9. Document Production. Production of documents shall be coordinated and go forward promptly and responses shall be served within _____ days of service. The deposition of representatives of the EPA, the DEP [State Department of Environmental Protection], or a defendant shall not go forward until that party has responded to the document production request upon it.
10. Depositions. Depositions are permitted at this time only with respect to the issues of identification of new parties and quantity, quality, and nexus. Such depositions may be taken, on these issues, of existing parties and nonparties, except that no depositions of representatives of the EPA or the DEP or of a defendant are permitted until that party has timely responded to the document production request upon it. Scheduling of depositions on behalf of defendants will be coordinated between the plaintiffs and the defense litigation committee, endeavoring to conduct not more than one deposition at a time.
11. Procedure for Scheduling Depositions
12. Interrogatories to Plaintiffs. The plaintiffs shall serve certified responses to a common set of interrogatories, derived from the set of interrogatories served by _____ on behalf of fourteen defendants, pertaining to quantity, quality, nexus, and identification of additional parties, within _____ days after service, to the same extent as if served on behalf of all _____ defendants in the United States case and all _____ defendants in the state case. All other interrogatories are stricken, without prejudice, and need not be answered.
13. Interrogatories to Defendants. The plaintiffs may propound a set of common interrogatories on the above issues upon each of the defendants, each of whom shall serve certified responses to same within _____ days after service.
14. Requests for Admission. Requests for admission shall not be served until further order of the court, to be discussed at the second case-management conference.
15. Liaison Counsel for Defendants. The court recognizes the defendants' selection of _____, _____, as liaison counsel for defendants with respect to communications from the court to the defendants.
16. Service List. Liaison counsel for the defendants shall prepare and promptly file with the clerk the service list containing the names, addresses, and telephone and facsimile numbers of attorneys appearing in this case and of unrepresented parties.
17. Cooperation Among Defendants; Defense Litigation Committee. Cooperation efforts among defendants in the Actions for the purpose of coordinating discovery, trial, counsel, or otherwise minimizing expenses in the Actions are being conducted at the direction of the court for its convenience in the resolution of the Actions and they shall not constitute evidence of conspiracy, concerted action, or any other wrongful conduct in this or any other proceeding. The defendants are hereby directed to take reasonable steps to eliminate duplication of effort and redundant discovery. The defendants have also informed the court that they have selected and will continue to organize a defense litigation committee, the duties of which shall be better defined before the interim status conference on _____ [date] _____ at _____.

18. Privileges Preserved. All information and/or documents exchanged among the defendants in the Actions shall be communicated for the limited purpose of assisting in a common defense in this litigation only, and such exchange shall not constitute a waiver of any attorney–client work product, trade secret, or other privilege. All discussions will be treated as not admissible into evidence in accordance with the terms of Fed. R. Evid. 408.
19. Cooperation Between Plaintiffs and Exchange of Information. Exchange of information and/or documents between the plaintiffs relating to the prosecution of these actions is communication for the limited purpose of assisting in a common cause and shall not constitute a waiver of whatever attorney–client, work product, enforcement-sensitive, or any other privilege, if any, may apply.
20. Preservation of Documents. All parties and their counsel are hereby directed to preserve any information in their possession, custody, or control that constitutes or contains material or information that may be relevant in these Actions. All parties and their counsel are directed to take all reasonable steps to communicate the requirements of this provision to the individuals employed by that party who must know of this provision in order for it to be effective. Plaintiffs shall instruct their RI/FS contractors and subcontractors (and any other of plaintiffs’ contractors and subcontractors) to preserve all such information.

40.54 Civil RICO Case-Statement Order<sup>1</sup>

[caption]

Order No. _____

It is ORDERED:

The proponent of the civil RICO claim shall file and serve [within _____ days of _____] a case statement that shall include the facts relied on to initiate the RICO claim. In particular, the statement shall use the numbers and letters set forth below, unless filed as part of an amended and restated pleading (in which latter case, the allegations of the amended and restated pleading shall reasonably follow the organization set out below), and shall state in detail and with specificity the following information:

1. State whether the alleged unlawful conduct is in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1962(a), (b), (c), and/or (d). If you allege violations of more than one section 1962 subsection, treat each as a separate RICO claim.
2. List each defendant, and state the alleged misconduct and basis of alleged liability of each defendant.
3. List the alleged wrongdoers, other than the defendants listed above, and state the alleged misconduct of each wrongdoer.
4. List the alleged victims, and state how each victim allegedly was injured.
5. Describe in detail the pattern of racketeering activity or collection of an unlawful debt alleged for each RICO claim. A description of the pattern of racketeering activity shall:
  - (a) list the alleged predicate acts and the specific statutes allegedly violated by each predicate act;
  - (b) state the dates of the predicate acts, the participants in the predicate acts, and a description of the facts surrounding each predicate act;
  - (c) if the RICO claim is based on the predicate offenses of wire fraud, mail fraud, fraud in the sale of securities, or fraud in connection with a case under Title 11 of the U.S. Code, the “circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity,” Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) (identify the time, place, and contents of the alleged misrepresentation or omissions, and the identity of persons to whom and by whom the alleged misrepresentations or omissions were made);
  - (d) describe in detail the perceived relationship that the predicate acts bear to each other or to some external organizing principle that renders them “ordered” or “arranged” or “part of a common plan”; and

§ 40.54

Manual for Complex Litigation, Fourth

- (e) explain how the predicate acts amount to or pose a threat of continued criminal activity.
6. Describe in detail the alleged enterprise for each RICO claim. A description of the enterprise shall
    - (a) state the names of the individuals, partnerships, corporations, associations, or other entities allegedly constituting the enterprise;
    - (b) describe the structure, purpose, roles, function, and course of conduct of the enterprise;
    - (c) state whether any defendants are employees, officers, or directors of the alleged enterprise;
    - (d) state whether any defendants are associated with the alleged enterprise, and, if so, how;
    - (e) explain how each defendant participated in the direction of the affairs of the enterprise;
    - (f) state whether you allege [(i) that the defendants are individuals or entities separate from the alleged enterprise, or (ii) that the defendants are the enterprise itself, or (iii) that the defendants are members of the enterprise]; and
    - (g) explain, if you allege any defendants to be the enterprise itself or members of the enterprise, whether such defendants are perpetrators, passive instruments, or victims of the alleged racketeering activity.
  7. State whether you allege, and describe in detail, how the pattern of racketeering activity and the enterprise are separate or have merged into one entity.
  8. Describe the alleged relationship between the activities and the pattern of racketeering activity. Discuss how the racketeering activity differs from the usual and daily activities of the enterprise, if at all.
  9. Describe what benefits, if any, the alleged enterprise and each defendant received from the alleged pattern of racketeering activity.
  10. Describe the effect of the activities of the enterprise on interstate or foreign commerce.
  11. If the complaint alleges a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(a), provide the following information:
    - (a) state who received the income derived from the pattern of racketeering activity or through the collection of an unlawful debt; and
    - (b) describe the use or investment of such income.
  12. If the complaint alleges a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(b), provide the following information:
    - (a) describe in detail the acquisition or maintenance of any interest in or control of the alleged enterprise; and
    - (b) state whether the same entity is both the liable “person” and the “enterprise” under section 1962(b).

Sample Orders

§ 40.54

13. If the complaint alleges a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c), provide the following information:
  - (a) state who is employed by or associated with the enterprise; and
  - (b) state whether the same entity is both the liable “person” and the “enterprise” under section 1962(c).
14. If the complaint alleges a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1962(d), describe in detail the alleged conspiracy.
15. Describe the alleged injury to business or property.
16. Describe the relationship between the alleged injury and violation of the RICO statute.
17. List the damages sustained by reason of the violation of section 1962, indicating the amount for which each defendant allegedly is liable.
18. Provide any additional information you feel would be helpful to the court in processing your RICO claim.

About the Federal Judicial Center

The Federal Judicial Center is the research and education agency of the federal judicial system. It was established by Congress in 1967 (28 U.S.C. §§ 620–629), on the recommendation of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

By statute, the Chief Justice of the United States chairs the Center's Board, which also includes the director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts and seven judges elected by the Judicial Conference.

The Director's Office is responsible for the Center's overall management and its relations with other organizations. Its Systems Innovation & Development Office provides technical support for Center education and research. Communications Policy & Design edits, produces, and distributes all Center print and electronic publications, operates the Federal Judicial Television Network, and through the Information Services Office maintains a specialized library collection of materials on judicial administration.

The Judicial Education Division develops and administers education programs and services for judges, career court attorneys, and federal defender office personnel. These include orientation seminars, continuing education programs, and special-focus workshops.

The Court Education Division develops and administers education and training programs and services for nonjudicial court personnel, such as those in clerks' offices and probation and pretrial services offices, and management training programs for court teams of judges and managers.

The Research Division undertakes empirical and exploratory research on federal judicial processes, court management, and sentencing and its consequences, often at the request of the Judicial Conference and its committees, the courts themselves, or other groups in the federal system.

The Federal Judicial History Office develops programs relating to the history of the judicial branch and assists courts with their own judicial history programs.

The Interjudicial Affairs Office provides information about judicial improvement to judges and others from foreign countries and identifies international legal developments of importance to personnel of the federal courts.

LABATON SUCHAROW LLP'S RESPONSE TO SPECIAL MASTER
HONORABLE GERALD E. ROSEN'S (RET.) FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES TO LABATON SUCHAROW LLP – JUNE 1 RESPONSE

CONFIDENTIAL – SUBJECT TO PROTECTIVE ORDER

Labaton Sucharow LLP (“Labaton Sucharow” or the “Firm”) responds as follows to the Special Master Honorable Gerald E. Rosen’s (Ret.) First Set of Interrogatories to Labaton Sucharow LLP (“First Interrogatories”). This response addresses those interrogatories that, following conferral with counsel to the Special Master, are to be provided on June 1, 2017. The remaining interrogatories that have not been stricken will be answered on later, applicable due dates (June 9 and July 10).

Labaton Sucharow’s answers are based solely on the facts and contentions presently known. To the extent Labaton Sucharow answers any Interrogatory, it does so without waiving any rights or objections and expressly reserves all rights and objections. Labaton Sucharow’s answers to the Interrogatories are made without waiving the right to: (i) amend, modify or supplement the answers and objections stated herein, if necessary; (ii) rely on any facts, documents or other evidence which may develop or come to Labaton Sucharow’s attention at a later date; and (iii) rely upon, reference or put into evidence additional expert information, testimony or reports.

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

The following General Objections are incorporated by reference into each response to the First Interrogatories, whether or not they are referenced in a specific response below.

1. Labaton Sucharow objects to Definition No. 1 as overbroad, irrelevant, and lacking in proportionality. Per agreement of counsel to the Special Master, Labaton Sucharow will construe the term “you”, “your”, “the Firm”, and “the Law Firm” to refer to Labaton Sucharow, LLP, and its employees.

2. Labaton Sucharow objects to the First Interrogatories to the extent they seek information protected by the attorney-client privilege, the work product doctrine, or information that otherwise is privileged, protected or exempt from discovery. To the extent that Labaton Sucharow has provided any answers below that may include information that is privileged or protected as work product, the Firm provides such answers pursuant to the Limited Protective Order of the Special Master Relating to Attorney/Client Privileged and Work Product Documents and Information Being Provided to the Special Master (ECF No. 191). Pursuant to this protective order, the provision of information to the Special Master does not constitute a waiver of the attorney-client privilege or work product protection.

3. Labaton Sucharow objects to the First Interrogatories to the extent they purport to impose obligations that differ from or exceed those imposed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, particularly Rule 33, and by any court decisions interpreting those Rules.

4. Labaton Sucharow objects to the First Interrogatories to the extent they seek information beyond the scope of, or not relevant to, the Courts' February 6, 2017 Memorandum and Order in the above-referenced cases.

5. In responding to the First Interrogatories, Labaton Sucharow has made reasonable efforts to respond based on its understanding and interpretation of each Interrogatory. If the Special Master subsequently asserts a reasonable interpretation of an Interrogatory which differs from that of Labaton Sucharow, Labaton Sucharow reserves the right to supplement its responses.

6. Labaton Sucharow reserves the right to supplement its answers should additional responsive information be discovered following the designated dates for responses.

7. Capitalized terms shall have the meanings set forth in the First Interrogatories, subject to any objections asserted herein. All other capitalized but undefined terms used in this response have the same meanings as set forth in the Stipulation and Agreement of Settlement (ECF No. 89).

LABATON SUCHAROW'S OBJECTIONS AND ANSWERS

INTERROGATORY 1:

Describe each of the Law Firm's practice area(s), including areas of specialty, special services offered, the total number of attorneys and staff, and a brief description of any representative matters.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 1:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states that its primary area of practice is securities class action litigation. Since a year after the passage of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, the Firm has specialized in assisting institutional investors with every phase of securities litigation, from monitoring and investigating fraud-related losses in client portfolios to prosecuting claims through trial and on appeal. The Firm also prosecutes securities opt-out and direct actions as well as sophisticated financial, transactional, derivative, and antitrust litigation. In addition, the Firm represents whistleblowers who report securities fraud.

The Firm currently has 66 attorneys, 44 staff attorneys, and 75 other staff, which includes a number of professional investigators and other professional staff to assist in complex litigation matters. The following is a representative list of cases the Firm has litigated:

In re Foreign Exchange Benchmark Rates Antitrust Litigation, No. 13-cv-07789 (S.D.N.Y.)

Labaton Sucharow represents a plaintiff, Boston Retirement System, in this action against major foreign exchange (FX) dealer banks for anticompetitive conduct in setting key FX benchmark rates. By engaging in these improprieties, the dealer banks enhanced their profits and reduced the value of their customers' FX transactions. The FX dealers, including Barclays Bank plc, Citigroup, Inc., Deutsche Bank AG, HSBC Holdings plc, JPMorgan Chase & Co., Royal Bank of Scotland Group plc, and UBS AG, are alleged to have coordinated their trading strategies through the use of online, electronic chat-rooms where they discussed client orders and aligned their trading strategies in order to effectuate the manipulation of the FX benchmarks. To date, this action has recovered more than $2 billion as a result of partial settlements, all of which have included cooperation agreements.

CONFIDENTIAL – SUBJECT TO PROTECTIVE ORDER

In re Air Cargo Shipping Services Antitrust Litigation, No. 06-md-01775 (E.D.N.Y.)

Labaton Sucharow served as co-lead counsel in this antitrust litigation for a nationwide class of direct purchasers of air freight shipping services. The action alleged violations of the Sherman Antitrust Act through a global price-fixing conspiracy for shipping goods by air among major U.S. and international airlines that persisted for more than five years. The Firm prosecuted more than 40 defendants across six continents, prosecuting this action for a decade, and recovered more than $1.2 billion for class members.

In re American International Group, Inc. Securities Litigation, No. 04-cv-8141 (S.D.N.Y.)

Labaton Sucharow served as co-lead counsel and prosecuted this action with assistance from the Attorney General of the State of Ohio on behalf of lead plaintiff the Ohio Public Employees Retirement System, the State Teachers Retirement System of Ohio, and the Ohio Police and Fire Pension Fund. The case alleged numerous securities violations against AIG and 21 other defendants, including PricewaterhouseCoopers, the Company's outside auditor, and General Reinsurance Corp. ("Gen Re"), a Berkshire Hathaway subsidiary. The case focused on AIG's involvement in a market division scheme that included payment of allegedly improper contingent commissions, illegal insurance bid-rigging, and accounting fraud, and alleged numerous securities violations against the defendants. The Firm recovered more than $1 billion for investors through this litigation, which included a $725 million settlement resolving claims against AIG and certain individual AIG directors and officers, a $97.5 million settlement with AIG's outside auditor, PricewaterhouseCoopers, a $115 million settlement with former AIG officers and related defendants, and a $72 million settlement with Gen Re.

In re Countrywide Financial Corp. Securities Litigation, No. 07-cv-5295 (C.D. Cal.)

Labaton Sucharow served as sole lead counsel representing lead plaintiffs the New York State Common Retirement Fund and the five New York City public pension funds and the class in this action. Lead plaintiffs alleged that the defendants made false and misleading statements concerning Countrywide's business as an issuer of residential mortgages, the creditworthiness of borrowers, underwriting and loan origination practices, and loan loss and other accounting provisions, and misrepresented high-risk low documentation loans as being "prime." During the period that the price of Countrywide stock was artificially inflated by the defendants' false representations, insiders received millions of dollars from Countrywide stock sales. The Firm recovered $624 million for the class.

In re Schering-Plough Corp./ENHANCE Securities Litigation, No. 08-cv-397 (D.N.J.)

Labaton Sucharow served as co-lead counsel representing the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Pension Reserves Investment Management Board and the class. The action alleged that the defendants published a series of materially false and misleading statements concerning the commercial viability of two prescription drug products, ZETIA and VYTORIN, during the period July 24, 2006 to March 28, 2008. The case survived motions to dismiss and motions for summary judgment. The Firm secured a $473 million recovery for investors.

In re Bear Stearns Cos., Inc. Securities, Derivative & ERISA Litigation, No. 08-cv-2793 (S.D.N.Y.)

Labaton Sucharow served as co-lead counsel, representing lead plaintiff, the State of Michigan Retirement System, and the class. The action alleged that Bear Stearns and certain officers and directors made misstatements and omissions in connection with Bear Stearns' financial condition, including losses in the value of its mortgage-backed assets and Bear Stearns' risk profile and liquidity. The action further claimed that Bear Stearns' outside auditor, Deloitte & Touche LLP, made misstatements and omissions in connection with its audits of Bear Stearns' financial statements for fiscal years 2006 and 2007. After surviving motions to dismiss, Labaton Sucharow secured a recovery of $294.9 million from the company and related defendants and Deloitte.

In re Massey Energy Co. Securities Litigation, No. 10-cv-0689 (S.D.W. Va.)

Labaton Sucharow served as co-lead counsel representing lead plaintiff the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Pension Reserves Investment Management Board and the class in this action against the fourth largest producer of coal in the United States at the time. The case arose from one of the most egregious mining disasters in U.S. history, the April 2010 explosion at West Virginia's Upper Big Branch Mine, which killed 29 miners. The action alleged that Massey had misrepresented to investors its commitment to safety and compliance with safety regulations, and falsely claimed that it had embarked on safety improvement initiatives in the months leading up to the explosion. Following four years of litigation, Labaton Sucharow achieved a $265 million recovery for investors.

In re Fannie Mae 2008 Securities Litigation, No. 08-cv-7831 (S.D.N.Y.)

Labaton Sucharow served as co-lead counsel on behalf of co-lead plaintiff Boston Retirement System and the class in this securities class action against Fannie Mae and certain of its current and former senior officers. The action alleged that the defendants made false and misleading statements concerning the company's internal controls and risk management with respect to Alt-A and subprime mortgages, as well as misstatements with respect to its core capital, deferred tax assets, other-than-temporary losses, and loss reserves. Although the Second Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed dismissal of a very similar securities class action against Fannie Mae's sibling company, Freddie Mac, on loss causation grounds, the Firm was able to demonstrate that that the materialization of the undisclosed risks concealed by the alleged fraud—rather than the 2008 housing and credit crisis—caused shareholders' alleged damages. Labaton Sucharow secured a $170 million recovery following seven years of litigation.

INTERROGATORY 4:

Explain how and when the Law Firm became involved in the SST Litigation, including any conversations between and among the Firm and ARTRS, the Plaintiffs' Law Firms, and/or the ERISA firms.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 4:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states the following: The SST Litigation has its origin in a qui tam complaint filed under seal on April 14, 2008 by Associates Against FX Insider Trading, a Relator represented by Thornton and Lieff Cabraser, on behalf of California public pension funds. That lawsuit was unsealed on October 20, 2009, when the Attorney General of California filed a Complaint-in-Intervention charging State Street with misappropriating more than $56 million from California's two largest public pension funds, the California Public Employees' Retirement System (CalPERS) and the California State Teachers' Retirement System (CalSTRS). The Complaint-in-Intervention was the first public indication of State Street's allegedly unfair and deceptive acts and practices concerning Indirect FX.

Because ARTRS has been a custodial client of State Street since 1998, and commencing litigation against one's custodian is not a routine matter, ARTRS undertook a great deal of due diligence before commencing any litigation.

On September 9, 2010, ARTRS met with Ennis Knupp & Associates ("Ennis Knupp"), a consultant engaged by ARTRS to oversee its investment managers and the performance of its investment portfolios, to discuss FX issues and potential claims against State Street.

ARTRS also sought to meet with State Street before filing an action. On December 20, 2010, the Firm, Thornton, and George Hopkins, the Executive Director of ARTRS, met in Boston with State Street's outside counsel and in-house legal and business personnel. The meeting was ultimately unproductive, and ARTRS, after considering several potential firms, authorized the Firm to commence this action. ARTRS selected Labaton Sucharow to pursue the case specifically because it believed that it had the resources and experience to produce a good result for the Class.

ARTRS retained the Firm to investigate potential class and individual claims against State Street shortly thereafter. With ARTRS's approval, the Firm chose to associate with Thornton and Lieff Cabraser, two firms with whom it has had long relationships, and began an investigation. The decision to associate these additional firms was based on, among other considerations, their unique knowledge arising from their representation of the relator in the California public pension fund case described above. Thornton and Lieff Cabraser also represented the relator in an unrelated qui tam action filed under seal in or about October 2009 against The Bank of New York Mellon ("BNYM"), a major U.S. custody bank and State Street's primary competitor, concerning similar Indirect FX issues. The first government intervention and unsealing in connection with BNYM occurred in January 2011.

The Class Action Complaint (ECF No. 1), commencing the SST Litigation, was filed by the Firm, Thornton, and Lieff Cabraser on behalf of ARTRS and a proposed Class on February 10, 2011. The operative Amended Class Action Complaint (ECF No. 10) was filed on April 15, 2011. On January 12, 2012, the Court issued an order appointing the Firm as Interim Lead Counsel and designating Thornton and Lieff Cabraser as liaison and additional counsel. ECF No. 28.

The Henriquez and Andover Companies actions (together, the "ERISA Actions"), which asserted claims under ERISA on behalf of a class of State Street custody clients that were ERISA plans, were filed in the U.S. District Court for the District of Massachusetts on November 18, 2011 and September 12, 2012, respectively, and ultimately assigned to Judge Wolf. On November 2, 2012, ARTRS and State Street filed a Joint Status Report advising that they had attended a mediation with a private mediator on October 22-23, 2012, and were unable to settle the case. ARTRS and State Street further advised that they agreed, subject to the Court's approval, on a framework for conducting discovery and managing the case, and requested a status conference to discuss their proposed plan. ECF No. 50. The Firm arranged for ERISA Counsel to attend this October 2012 mediation session and to be included in the mediation process generally. State Street's transmittal letter filed with the Joint Status Report accordingly requested that a status conference include the ERISA Plaintiffs as well as ARTRS (ECF No. 50). The Court granted this request, and following a status conference held jointly in the ARTRS and ERISA Actions on November 13, 2012, the Court issued several orders consolidating the three Actions for pretrial purposes and approving the Parties' framework for discovery and mediation going forward. ECF Nos. 61-63.

INTERROGATORY 5:

Describe the role played by the Law Firm in filing the substantive claims alleged in the SST Litigation, including the filing of the Complaint (Docket #1) and/or the Amended Complaint (Docket #10), a description of any legal or factual research performed, consultations with State Street, legal drafting and/or review of pleadings.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 5:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states the following: The Firm had a leading role in investigating ARTRS's potential individual and class claims and researching and drafting the original and amended Complaints (ECF Nos. 1 and 10), as explained in detail in the Fee Petition, and other filings in connection with the Settlement.

These activities, which broadly took place between October 2009 and April 2011, comprised numerous tasks. The Firm had to educate itself about the essentials of currency trading, and the nature of negotiated (or direct) and non-negotiated (or standing-instruction or indirect) FX trades, and how they work in the context of custody banking.

FX Transparency LLC (“FX Transparency”), a Massachusetts-based currency trading expert, was engaged to consult regarding the FX markets and to assist in extracting and analyzing ARTRS’s global trading data. FX Transparency conducted several preliminary and final analyses as counsel’s investigation proceeded. Ultimately, FX Transparency identified more than 4,200 indirect FX trades executed by State Street for ARTRS’s account during 2000-2010, with an aggregate trading volume of more than $1.2 billion. FX Transparency compared these trades to other FX trades logged and tracked in a comprehensive database of more than 2 million buy-side currency trades. By comparing ARTRS’s trades in certain currencies with the same currency pair trades in the database, FX Transparency estimated the trading cost of ARTRS’s indirect FX trades in relation to trades made worldwide.

Further, the Firm, together with Thornton and Lieff Cabraser, reviewed an array of pertinent documents, including ARTRS’s Custodian Contracts and Fee Schedules, monthly custodial reports and invoices received from State Street, other communications from State Street, and State Street’s periodically updated Investment Manager Guides.

Additionally, the Firm, together with Thornton and Lieff Cabraser, researched the applicable law on Chapter 93A of the Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act, fiduciary duty, and negligent misrepresentation, and also reviewed various qui tam lawsuits that had been unsealed against BNYM concerning BNYM’s indirect FX practices.

INTERROGATORY 7:

Describe the Firm’s theory of damages, including an estimate of total damages to the customer and/or ERISA classes, whether this theory changed throughout the course of the SST Litigation, and if so, what factors affected the Firm’s theory and total calculation of estimated damages.

CONFIDENTIAL – SUBJECT TO PROTECTIVE ORDER

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 7:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states the following: The essential theory of damages was that Class Members were damaged when they were overcharged on Indirect FX Trades that State Street executed on their behalf, such that Class Members were entitled to pricing at exchange rates that were no less advantageous than those State Street itself received (i.e., interbank rates) or, at a minimum, those they would have received on comparable Direct FX Trades. This essential damages theory did not change during the course of the SST Litigation.

Plaintiffs' Counsel used the following basic methodology to estimate aggregate classwide damages. There were two types of Indirect FX Trades during the Class Period: Securities Settlement and Handling ("SSH") and Automated Income Repatriation ("AIR"). SSH trades converted U.S. Dollars (USD) to foreign currency to facilitate purchases of foreign-denominated securities, or repatriated foreign currency to USD when foreign-denominated securities were sold. AIR trades repatriated periodic dividend and income payments to USD.

State Street applied fixed markups or markdowns, measured by basis points, to its SSH and AIR Indirect FX Trades during the Class Period. The application of the fixed spreads was limited in two circumstances. First, State Street would "net" all of a given Investment Manager's SSH trades in a given currency prior to execution, reducing the amount of currency traded, and, therefore, the total markup or markdown applied to that Investment Manager's clients' trades. Second, for SSH trades, the fixed spread markups and markdowns were limited by the high or low of the range of the day. (The "range of the day" is the difference between the high and low trades in a given currency pair during the course of the FX trading day by FX market participants worldwide.) Thus, if the difference between the starting point of the indirect pricing process and the high or low of the day was less than the fixed spread, State Street only applied a markup or markdown to the extent of the high or low rate and not beyond. State Street referred to the spread achieved on Indirect FX Trades after the application of such “netting” and “capping” as the “effective” spread.

In assessing damages, Plaintiffs’ Counsel began with the dollar volume of SSH Indirect FX Trades for each year for 1998 through 2009. The average effective markup across all currency pairs for SSH trades for 2009 was a narrow basis point range. Plaintiffs’ Counsel multiplied the sum total of SSH volume for 1998-2009 by the high end of State Street’s stated range of effective markups, to estimate damages on SSH trades at approximately $1.177 billion.

Plaintiffs’ Counsel then took the dollar volume of AIR Indirect FX Trades for each year for 1998 through 2009. The volume is a small fraction of the SSH volume. Plaintiffs’ Counsel multiplied the annual AIR volume for 1998-2009 by the known markups for each year to estimate damages on AIR trades at approximately $314.49 million.

Plaintiffs’ Counsel thus estimated the maximum total damages, assuming all of Plaintiffs’ contentions with respect to not allowing State Street any effective markup on SSH trades and no markup on AIR Indirect FX Trades were to be accepted by a jury, at approximately $1.49 billion. Throughout the litigation, State Street contended that the total damages was zero and that they were entitled to a reasonable markup on FX Trades.

INTERROGATORY 8:

Identify and describe all risk factors you considered prior to getting involved in the SST Litigation, including any “bad facts,” meritorious defenses and/or unsettled legal issues, or other circumstances that affected the potential outcome and total damages recoverable in the case.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 8:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm identifies and describes the following principal “risk factors” considered by the Firm when deciding to commence the SST Litigation on behalf of ARTRS and a proposed Class and, later, in deciding to enter into the Settlement on behalf of Plaintiffs and the Class:

The Firm undertook the SST Litigation with no assurance of compensation or recovery of costs, and faced substantial risk from the outset. This case was atypical with respect to the nature of the defendant, the subject matter, and the application of the statutory claims, and was in many respects a hybrid between a consumer, securities, and ERISA action.

The case was also complex. State Street’s alleged unfair and deceptive acts and practices, breaches of fiduciary duty, negligent misrepresentations, and violations of ERISA occurred over a 12-year Class Period in multiple locations, and concerned an opaque market and a little-understood area of the financial services industry.

ARTRS’s initial Complaint was the first complaint publicly filed against a custody bank concerning Indirect FX. Besides State Street, there are only four major U.S. custody banks: BNYM, JPMorgan Chase, Citibank, and Northern Trust. These banks were rarely, if ever, sued in relation to their custody businesses before these Indirect FX pricing issues first began to surface. Accordingly, when the Firm, Thornton, and Lieff Cabraser investigated ARTRS’s claims and commenced the action, they were working essentially from a clean slate in terms of analyzing ARTRS’s FX trades for prima facie evidence of excessive markups, researching the applicability of Chapter 93A to State Street’s Indirect FX Methods, analyzing whether a custody bank owes a fiduciary duty to its clients in connection with Indirect FX services, and analyzing whether a nationwide class of custody clients can be certified and on what claims.

Further, neither the litigation nor the Settlement received any benefit from preexisting government enforcement actions or investigations. Private plaintiffs led the charge against State Street. The SEC, DOL, and DOJ have not issued any public allegations, factual findings, or consent orders.

The Firm and other Plaintiffs' Counsel brought about this Settlement in the face of an array of litigation risks. For example, the Court could have found at summary judgment or at trial that Chapter 93A does not reach the Indirect FX conduct at issue. State Street would have argued that the facts do not show that Plaintiffs or other Class Members were deceived by the alleged misconduct, and would have pointed to, among other things, the fact that ARTRS and other Class Members continued to engage in Indirect FX Transactions with State Street after its allegedly improper Indirect FX Methods were publicly revealed. Indeed, while this litigation was pending, a district court dismissed a similar action challenging JPMorgan's automated FX practices. See Louisiana Mun. Police Emps. Ret. Sys. v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., No. 12 Civ. 6659 (DLC), 2013 WL 3357173, at *17 (S.D.N.Y. July 3, 2013) ("It distorts the [New York consumer-protection] law beyond recognition . . . to suggest that an ancillary service that is provided in connection with a contract for custodial banking services offered to institutional investors and that explicitly gives clients the option to negotiate specific rates or to issue 'Standing Instructions' for automated FX transactions is a 'consumer-oriented' service.").

State Street also would have pointed to the fact that ARTRS, and presumably many other Class Members, continued to use State Street as their sole custody bank after its allegedly improper Indirect FX Methods were publicly revealed and throughout the pendency of the SST Litigation.

In ruling on State Street's motion to dismiss, the Court reserved judgment as to whether ARTRS's Chapter 93A claims could proceed under Section 9 or Section 11, pending development of a factual record as to whether ARTRS was a "consumer" or a "business" for purposes of the statute. Section 11, which would apply in a "business-to-business" context, likely requires a greater showing to establish a violation. Had the Court ruled that Section 11 applied, ARTRS and the Class would have faced greater risk on the Chapter 93A claims.

Plaintiffs' common law fiduciary-duty claim, arising from an agent's duty of trust or obligation to provide full disclosure to its beneficiaries, raised challenging questions of law. Plaintiffs would have had to prove both that State Street served as a fiduciary to its custody clients, and that in its fiduciary capacity, State Street had a duty to fully disclose its Indirect FX practices to them. Those prerequisites to liability carried risk for Plaintiffs and other Class Members.

With respect to negligent misrepresentation, State Street no doubt would have asserted that Plaintiffs could not prove that (1) State Street made any actionable misrepresentations, (2) they relied on any alleged misrepresentations, or (3) the alleged misrepresentations were material. State Street likely would have further contended that Plaintiffs could not prove they suffered any injury, because (in State Street's view) they could have used information readily available to them to determine at any time during the Class Period how much they were allegedly being overcharged for Indirect FX Transactions. State Street also would have likely challenged Plaintiffs' negligent misrepresentation and other claims on statute of limitations grounds.

Likewise, litigation of Plaintiffs' ERISA claims presented certain risks. State Street does business using numerous wholly owned subsidiaries and operating entities, allowing it to argue that even if one State Street entity is an ERISA fiduciary, other State Street entities are not. Even within a single entity, State Street sometimes offers different products and services, allowing it to argue that even if it acts as a fiduciary for certain purposes, it is not a fiduciary for other purposes. These different corporate relationships can lead to confusion and litigation risk. In addition, State Street's liability depends on a number of highly technical theories, including prohibited transactions under ERISA § 406(b), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(b), prohibited party-in-interest transactions under ERISA § 406(a), 29 U.S.C. § 1106(a), exceptions to the prohibited transaction rules under ERISA § 408(18), 29 U.S.C. § 1108(18), Prohibited Transaction Exemptions 94-20 and 98-54, and basic fiduciary obligations of loyalty, care, prudence, diligence, and monitoring under ERISA § 404(a)(1), 29 U.S.C. § 1104(a)(1).

Class certification also presented complexities, which would have entailed a more extensive Rule 23 inquiry—and thus greater uncertainty and risk—than cases brought, for example, under the federal securities laws. In fact, in mediation, State Street contended that Plaintiffs would face insuperable hurdles to class certification because, in State Street's view, among other things, (1) Massachusetts law, in particular Chapter 93A, could not be applied to a nationwide class; and (2) State Street would be able to demonstrate that Class Members possessed varying levels of knowledge with respect to the Indirect FX Methods, precluding a showing of predominance under Rule 23(b)(3). Regarding the first point, Plaintiffs would have to show either that (i) Massachusetts law should generally apply to Class Members' claims, or (ii) if the laws of various states were to apply, a trial would be manageable. Presenting sufficient evidence to demonstrate the manageability of a trial under the laws of several states would have required Plaintiffs to detail the relevant states' laws, including any material differences among them, and prepare a trial plan. While Plaintiffs believed a multistate class or subclasses could have been certified, obtaining certification would have been challenging and time-consuming.

Additionally, Plaintiffs would have devoted significant time and resources to refuting State Street's argument that individual issues predominated because (in State Street's view) Class Members had disparate levels of knowledge regarding the Indirect FX Methods. State Street likely would have sought to depose numerous Class Members and their agents, as BNYM did in the BNYM FX customer class cases. The parties also likely would present conflicting expert analysis on customer expectations within the FX market, heightening the costs and risks of litigation. Class certification is often granted in ERISA litigation, but State Street certainly would have waged a vigorous opposition. Success could never be assumed, and certification of the ERISA claims alone would have provided no relief to a majority of Class Members. Even were Plaintiffs to obtain class certification in whole or in part, the class might have been decertified before or during trial, or on appeal. The risk of decertification was real where, as here, the Court might have needed to assess the manageability of a trial involving the laws of at least several states.

Further contributing to the risks Plaintiffs faced, the appropriate measure of damages was contested during the Parties' lengthy mediation process and would have been a focus of the litigation. Plaintiffs thus faced the risk that the damages now forming the basis of Class Members' recovery through this Settlement could never be proven at trial or would be greatly offset. State Street no doubt would have disputed Plaintiffs' Counsel's $1.49 billion damages estimate (the basis for which is described in the Answer to Interrogatory No. 7 above), contending, among other things, that it (a) materially overstates the effective spread for each year during a long Class Period, (b) assumes that every fraction of penny of markup is an improper overcharge where custody clients willingly pay a spread on direct FX trades, and (c) ignores the actual costs to State Street of providing Indirect FX services.

These risks did not evaporate once Plaintiffs entered into mediation. To the contrary, State Street brought these arguments to bear throughout the extended mediation process, pressing its contentions on, for example, the individualized nature of Class Members' written agreements and oral communications with State Street; the implicit (and sometimes explicit) awareness and acceptance of indirect FX pricing practices by Class Members and their IMs; cost accounting issues that supported the markups applied to Indirect FX Transactions; and the changing "real" interbank FX rates on a given currency pair at a given point in time.

In sum, the complexities relating to liability, class certification, and damages, as well as the sheer volume of evidence, virtually ensured that continuing to litigate would have entailed millions more dollars in lodestar and expenses for the Firm and other Plaintiffs' Counsel, with an uncertain outcome for Plaintiffs and the Class.

INTERROGATORY 17:

Describe in detail the nature and the scope of the SST Document Review, including the total number of pages and/or size of the productions, the nature and date of each document production(s) received from State Street, all other document production(s) received in connection with the Litigation, and a general description of the information contained in each production.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 17:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states that the document review in this case related both to productions by ARTRS and productions by State Street.

On December 26, 2012, ARTRS made an initial production to defendants totaling 15,591 pages of documents. On March 1, 2013, Lead Plaintiff followed with four additional productions totaling 46,571 pages of documents. Two additional productions were made by ARTRS on March 15, 2013, amounting to 7,469 pages of documents. On March 26, 2013, ARTRS produced an additional 2,301 pages of documents to defendants. Finally, on November 17, 2013, ARTRS produced 1,631 pages of documents to defendants. Lead Plaintiff's entire production to defendants totaled 73,563 pages of documents. Documents within this production included investment management agreements and professional services contracts entered into between ARTRS and its investment managers and outside consultants as well as amendments thereto; responses to ARTRS's Requests for Proposals; internal and external emails in which ARTRS discussed its investment philosophies and results; spreadsheets containing data compilations reflecting Lead Plaintiff's investments; monthly portfolio reviews; and trade notifications.

In connection with all five of these productions, the Firm's Staff Attorneys reviewed ARTRS documents for responsiveness and privilege. Todd Kussin conducted a second level review of those materials that the Staff Attorneys had culled (via applying search terms and selected names). Finally, both Mr. Rogers and Mr. Goldsmith personally reviewed a sample of the documents Mr. Kussin had proposed be produced (i.e., reviewed small sets of representative documents, such as RFPs, spreadsheets, or emails).

As to those documents produced by State Street, the Firm's Staff Attorneys (including those for which the cost was invoiced to Thornton) reviewed approximately 210,809 documents, amounting to 3,340,701 pages. These totals reflect documents from both the California and Hill<sup>1</sup>

The "California" action is California ex rel. Brown v. State Street Corp., No. 34-2008-00008457-CU-MC-GDS (Cal. Super. Ct. Sacramento Cnty.). This is the Complaint-in-Intervention filed by matters, produced to Plaintiff in January 2013 and approximately September 2013, respectively. Among the documents contained in these productions were: RFP Responses; fee schedules; foreign exchange pricing reports; client profiles; internal and external emails discussing matters such as foreign exchange rate calculations, custody services, pricing arrangements, customer complaints, and automated income repatriation; excel documents reflecting pending payments for sale proceeds; trading data; client pitch presentations; State Street investment manager guidelines; and periodic consultant reports.

In October of 2013, Lead Plaintiff received a CD containing 4,053 pages of documents originally produced to the SEC by State Street on May 6, 2011. This production consisted of custodial contracts entered into between ARTRS and State Street, ARTRS pro forma fee analyses, ARTRS and State Street fee schedules and fee agreements, State Street investment management guides, and email exchanges discussing State street's foreign exchange services.

INTERROGATORY 18:

Describe in detail how the Law Firm conducted the SST Document Review, including how it selected and/or staffed Staff Attorneys, a description of all training binders/protocols or search terms used for Document Review, and a brief description of the tasks assigned to Staff Attorneys and any other individuals who participated, and how those tasks furthered the Firm's overall litigation strategy.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 18:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states that in February, 2013, five initial Staff Attorneys were transferred to State Street from another class action case upon completion of the California Attorney General on October 20, 2009, unsealing the Thornton/Lieff qui tam complaint against State Street, which is discussed in the Answer to Interrogatory No. 4. supra. This action was the first public "news" of State Street's improper FX practices, and has now settled for an undisclosed amount.

[REDACTED]

On April 18, 2013, a conference call was held among attorneys from the Plaintiffs' Law Firms to discuss some of the most relevant documents identified as of that date. Partners, associates, and the Initial Labaton Staff Attorney Team participated in this call.

On January 15, 2015, when the Initial Labaton Staff Attorney Team was expanded by approximately ten Staff Attorneys (this group of Staff Attorneys now included five Staff Attorneys for which the cost was invoiced to Thornton; this group of fifteen, and the group after subsequent additions, is referred to as the "140 Broadway Labaton-Supervised Staff Attorney Team"), Mr. Goldsmith, Mr. Rogers, and Mr. Kussin held a meeting with the new members similar in nature and substance to that held with the initial review team in February, 2013. As additional Staff Attorneys joined the 140 Broadway Labaton-Supervised Staff Attorney Team in smaller groups, Mr. Kussin took the lead in holding such meetings, providing an overview of the issues in the case. In Spring of 2015, [REDACTED]

INTERROGATORY 19:

Describe how the Law Firm utilized the Catalyst database, including all persons who had access to the database, any electronic and/or technical training provided to those individuals, and a description of the information maintained in the Catalyst database during the course of the SST Document Review.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 19:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states that in the initial stages of the SST Document Review in February of 2013, Catalyst login credentials were supplied to Partner David Goldsmith, then Associate (now Partner) Michael Rogers, Case Manager Stacy Auer, Staff Attorney Team Leader Todd Kussin, and the five initial Staff Attorneys assigned to the litigation. As the case expanded in size and scope, additional Staff Attorneys joining the review were provided such credentials.

On February 13, 2013, Catalyst Technical Trainer Raquel Guzman hosted a web conference to provide initial training on the technical uses of the Catalyst review platform to Mr. Kussin and the Staff Attorneys. Catalyst Project Manager and Senior Consultant Chris Lisciandro helped organize this training and made himself available for any follow-up questions from the Labaton Sucharow review team as it began its review of documents. On March 13, 2013, after an initial set of documents had been batched out to each of the five Staff Attorneys by Mr. Lisciandro, another training session was held to review the technical aspects of the platform.

The following day, Mr. Lisciandro provided answers via email to a number of questions posed by the reviewers during this second training session but not initially answered, generally pertaining to the system of electronic folders to be used by each reviewer as well as the recognition of documents produced as native files. The following day, the reviewers compiled via email another list of specific questions for Mr. Lisciandro regarding the organization of the platform and its documents, pertaining to topics such as beginning and ending control numbers, related documents, and the organization of document families. These questions were promptly answered by Mr. Lisciandro the same day.

As the review progressed, Mr. Lisciandro also provided the reviewers guidance, when requested, on such issues as printing tiff images, tracking the totals of documents and pages coded during a given period, and saving searches. As additional Staff Attorneys joined the review team, existing members, including Mr. Kussin, given their familiarity with Catalyst, were able to quickly advise them on the platform's use.

INTERROGATORY 20:

Describe in detail all documents destroyed and/or deleted from the Catalyst database, including the date, and explain why each document was deleted/destroyed.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 20:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states that approximately at the end of July, 2015, all materials that had been hosted on Catalyst were exported to an external drive for archiving (i.e., rendered not-readily-accessible, but available for retrieval, if needed). Included in the material exported was metadata and all Staff Attorney coding (from all three Plaintiffs' Law Firms) with a load file, comprising about 500 gigabytes of data. These documents were archived so as to save monthly expenses incurred by full-time hosting of documents.

INTERROGATORY 21:

Identify and describe any training the Firm provided to Staff Attorneys relating to the substantive allegations in the SST Litigation/SST Document Review, including addressing all legal issues, key witnesses, theories of liability, damages, and critical topics raised in the case.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 21:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm incorporates by reference the Objections and Answers to Interrogatory No. 18.

INTERROGATORY 25:

Identify any other individuals who worked on the SST Document review who were not Staff Attorneys and explain their affiliation with the Law Firm, their employment status, and how they were compensated for their time.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 25:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states the following: David Goldsmith and Michael Rogers, partners of the Firm, supervised the SST Document Review and reviewed relevant or “hot” documents provided to them from time to time by the Staff Attorneys. They also communicated regularly with Todd Kussin regarding hot documents, substantive factual memoranda drafting, preparing presentations for mediation sessions, and the review and production of ARTRS documents. In the beginning of the litigation, Mr. Rogers was compensated according to his full-time employment status at the Firm; Mr. Goldsmith and Mr. Rogers (once elevated to partner) were compensated pursuant to the Firm’s partnership agreement.

At various times, Case Manager, Stacy Auer, and paralegals Reka Vizcian and Shella Mundo engaged in short-term administrative tasks associated with printing and binding of hot docs selected by the Staff Attorneys. Ms. Auer, Ms. Vizcian, and Ms. Mundo were also compensated according to their full-time employment status at the Firm.

INTERROGATORY 27:

Explain how the Firm supervised and/or performed quality control of the work performed by the Staff Attorneys and others who participated in the SST Document Review, including the name, title, and tasks performed by any supervising individual.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 27:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states the following: Throughout the SST Document Review, Staff Attorney Team Leader Todd Kussin periodically logged onto the Catalyst review platform and performed a secondary review/quality check of the documents reviewed by the Staff Attorneys, assessing not only their productivity in terms of quantity of documents reviewed over a certain period of time, but also their accuracy with respect to identifying both document types and facts supportive of the allegations in the operative complaint. In addition, Mr. Kussin performed a review to ensure that the Staff Attorneys followed the guidelines in the SST coding protocol as they pertained to such issues as the requirement that attorneys' comments accompany any document designated "hot," as well as the requirement that all members of a document family be coded consistently regarding designations of relevancy.

Mr. Kussin regularly conferred with Staff Attorneys when he observed any patterns of questionable coding, whether it be for logistical reasons such as providing inconsistent priority designations for documents contained in the same family, or for substantive reasons such as designating a document not relevant when it appeared, in Mr. Kussin's view, to rise to the level of "relevant" or even "hot." Explanations were given to the Staff Attorneys as to why their decisions needed to be addressed, and Mr. Kussin followed up by paying specific attention to the designations provided by specific Staff Attorneys in the reporting periods following such conferences. It was Mr. Kussin's goal to make sure that the Staff Attorneys provided an accurate picture as to whether or not, and how each document they reviewed lent support to the allegations in the operative complaint, and therefore whether such documents added value to lead plaintiff's information base.

Each week, Mr. Kussin then prepared a productivity report outlining the number of documents and pages reviewed by each Staff Attorney over the previous reporting period, also detailing any issues with the accuracy of their designations. Mr. Kussin additionally identified both the "high" and "low" productivity reviewers for the week in terms of both documents and pages, and particular attention was paid to the quality of the coding of these individuals for the given period. In each report, Mr. Kussin further provided a running total of the number of documents and pages reviewed by the team to date, as well as a total of the remaining number of documents and pages yet to be reviewed. The productivity reports were provided to Danette McKenzie-Moreau, HR Administrator for Staff Attorneys, and copied to Chief Operating Officer Ray Politano, Partner David Goldsmith, and then Associate, now Partner, Michael Rogers.

INTERROGATORY 28:

Explain in detail the job responsibilities and tasks performed by the Staff Attorneys assigned to the SST Document Review, including those Staff Attorneys allocated to Thornton, including but not limited to, coding, deposition preparation, creation of witness kits and similar work.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 28:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm incorporates its Answers and Objections to Interrogatory No. 18.

INTERROGATORY 29:

Describe the process for assigning and reviewing factual, legal, and/or discursive memoranda prepared by Staff Attorneys, including how such memoranda were relevant to, used as part of the SST Litigation, and/or shared among counsel.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 29:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states that the partners and associates from each of the three Plaintiffs' Law Firms developed a composite list of factual research and analysis topics narrowly-designed to address the issues involved in the SST litigation. Such topics were reflective of the allegations contained in the operative complaint. Throughout the litigation and mediation process, State Street's attorneys raised a number of defenses, each asserted to undercut, if not undermine, Plaintiff's claims. Counsel from all three of the Plaintiffs' Law Firms felt it was important in assessing any proposed settlement number that they knew the true strengths (and weaknesses) of defendants' arguments. The factual research and analysis memoranda were intended to supply a greater level of factual granularity and support (or lack of support) in making these assessments.

and Lief host staff attorneys sponsored by Thornton began with an oral discussion between Eric Belfi and Garrett Bradley in late 2014 or early 2015. That discussion is referenced in an email that has been produced. See LBS001367.

While Belfi does not recall the conversation specifically, he believes it may have been on a business trip he and Bradley were on together. The existence of this hosting arrangement (but not the precise nature of any underlying agreement) was also known to Mike Rogers and David Goldsmith. See LBS001367.

The concept was that there would be 15 staff attorneys at Labaton Sucharow’s office in New York and another 15 at Lief Cabreser’s office in New York. At both locations, the cost of ten attorneys would be paid by the host firm and the cost of five attorneys would be paid by Thornton, such that each firm would have a total of ten staff attorneys working on the review. Mike Rogers recalls that the arrangement “made sense” to him because it was a fair way to share costs associated with the review.

The Firm has identified the following other matters in which costs for Staff Attorneys employed by Labaton Sucharow were paid for by another Plaintiffs’ firm).

INTERROGATORY 33:

Describe the Firm’s understanding, in or about early 2015, as to how Thornton would account for the allocation/sharing of costs for certain of the Firm’s Staff Attorneys in its Fee Petition, including the Firm’s understanding as to which firm was responsible for reporting the total number of hours worked by those Staff Attorneys on its Fee Petition and/or Lodestar calculation.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 33:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states that there was notable ambiguity among Labaton Sucharow lawyers as to how the hours attributed to Thornton staff attorneys would ultimately be accounted for and reported. David Goldsmith does not know if it was even decided early on whether, in the event of a successful result in the litigation, Thornton would claim the time spent for Staff Attorneys on its own lodestar. Mr. Goldsmith explained that it would surprise him if such an issue were decided three years in advance. Michael Rodgers does not recall a specific discussion, at the time it was agreed that the cost of some Staff Attorneys would be paid by Thornton, regarding how their hours would be reported. He assumed, however, that Thornton would take credit for the hours spent by the Staff Attorneys for which it paid on its own lodestar. Eric Belfi explained that at the time he and Garret Bradley had the initial conversation about allocating Staff Attorneys to Thornton, he did not consider how the time spent by the Staff Attorneys would be accounted for in any fee petition. If he had been asked at the time, however, he likely would have assumed that Thornton would report the time spent by Staff Attorneys for whom it was paying on a Thornton lodestar.

INTERROGATORY 37:

Describe in detail the process through which the Law Firm invoiced or otherwise sought reimbursement from Thornton for costs of those Staff Attorneys allocated to Thornton as part of the SST Litigation/Document Review.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY 37:

The Firm incorporates the General Objections set forth above. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, the Firm states that beginning in February of 2015 and continuing through July of 2015, Cindy Ng forwarded on approximately a monthly basis invoices to Garrett Bradley of Thornton & Naumes reflecting fees and expenses associated with the staff attorneys allocated to Thornton & Naumes. These invoices were promptly paid by the Thornton & Naumes Firm to Labaton Sucharow.

The amount invoiced to Thornton represented the cost associated with the wages for each of the Thornton document reviewers plus an amount representing a pro-rata share of other overhead costs associated with their employment.

Re: Arkansas Teachers v. State Street

Dear Mr. Sinnott:

I am writing in response to Judge Rosen's request for information about the fee rates for professional services provided to State Street in 2016, with respect to the above-referenced case.

Document Review Services

With respect to the Arkansas Teachers case, State Street obtained first-level document review services over a period of years from a vendor [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]
[REDACTED] In 2016, the vendor charged $36.40 per hour to State Street for first-level document review. In the Arkansas Teachers case, State Street also obtained first-level document review services from attorneys in WilmerHale's Discovery Services department. The fee rate for those services in 2016 was $75 per hour. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] In 2016, the rate for the staff attorney assigned to the Arkansas Teachers matter was [REDACTED] per hour.

In the Arkansas Teachers case, State Street received second-level document review services from WilmerHale. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Our 2016 rates for associates assigned to the Arkansas Teachers matter is set forth below. Attorneys from the Discovery Services department in 2016 provided [REDACTED] services to State Street at [REDACTED] per hour.

Massachusetts General Laws Annotated Currentness

Rules of the Supreme Judicial Court (Refs & Annos)

Chapter Three. Ethical Requirements and Rules Concerning the Practice of Law

Client-Lawyer Relationship

Rule 1.4. Communication

(a) A lawyer shall keep a client reasonably informed about the status of a matter and promptly comply with reasonable requests for information.

(b) A lawyer shall explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation.

CREDIT(S)

Adopted June 9, 1997, effective January 1, 1998.

COMMENT

2006 Main Volume

[1] The client should have sufficient information to participate intelligently in decisions concerning the objectives of the representation and the means by which they are to be pursued, to the extent the client is willing and able to do so. For example, a lawyer negotiating on behalf of a client should provide the client with facts relevant to the matter, inform the client of communications from another party and take other reasonable steps that permit the client to make a decision regarding a serious offer from another party. A lawyer who receives from opposing counsel an offer of settlement in a civil controversy or a proffered plea bargain in a criminal case should promptly inform the client of its substance unless prior discussions with the client have left it clear that the proposal will be unacceptable. See Rule 1.2(a). Even when a client delegates authority to the lawyer, the client should be kept advised of the status of the matter.

[2] Adequacy of communication depends in part on the kind of advice or assistance involved. For example, in negotiations where there is time to explain a proposal, the lawyer should review all important provisions with the client before proceeding to an agreement. In litigation a lawyer should explain the general strategy and prospects of success and ordinarily should consult the client on tactics that might injure or coerce others. On the other hand, a lawyer ordinarily cannot be expected to describe trial or negotiation strategy in detail. The guiding principle is set forth in the comment to Rule 1.2(a).

[3] Ordinarily, the information to be provided is that appropriate for a client who is a comprehending and responsible adult. However, fully informing the client according to this standard may be impracticable, for example, where the client is a child or suffers from mental disability. See Rule 1.14. When the client is an organization or group, it is often impossible or inappropriate to inform every one of its members about its legal affairs; ordinarily, the lawyer should address communications to the appropriate officials of the organization. See Rule 1.13. Where many routine matters are involved, a system of limited or occasional reporting may be arranged with the client. Practical exigency may also require a lawyer to act for a client without prior consideration.

Withholding Information

[4] In some circumstances, a lawyer may be justified in delaying transmission of information when the client would be likely to react imprudently to an immediate communication. Thus, a lawyer might withhold a psychiatric diagnosis of a client when the examining psychiatrist indicates that disclosure would harm the client. A lawyer may not withhold information to serve the lawyer's own interest or convenience. Rules or court orders governing litigation may provide that information supplied to a lawyer may not be disclosed to the client. Rule 3.4(c) directs compliance with such rules or orders.

Alternate Dispute Resolution

[5] There will be circumstances in which a lawyer should advise a client concerning the advantages and disadvantages of available dispute resolution options in order to permit the client to make informed decisions concerning the representation.

Corresponding ABA Model Rule. Identical to Model Rule 1.4.

Corresponding Former Massachusetts Rule. None.

NOTES OF DECISIONS

Duty to inform 1

1. Duty to inform

Attorney's refusal to respond to requests from client's successor lawyer for an accounting of the attorney's time and expenses in client's personal injury action in order to determine the appropriate fee to which the attorney would be entitled did not provide a basis for discipline, where another disciplinary case stating that better practice in such instances was to respond to such a request was decided after attorney's representation of client had ended and after successor counsel achieved a settlement. In re Discipline of an Attorney (2008) 884 N.E.2d 450, 451 Mass. 131. Attorney And Client ☞ 44(2)

Attorney's unilateral decision to pay client's medical providers with personal injury protection (PIP) funds that he had received on client's behalf violated professional conduct rule governing communications with clients; attorney's action prevented client from understanding the distribution of funds that were intended for his benefit, and precluded him from at least asserting a claim to receive a greater portion of the PIP funds for his undisputed lost wages. In re Discipline of an Attorney (2008) 884 N.E.2d 450, 451 Mass. 131. Attorney And Client ☞ 44(2)

Lawyers should be required to explain specifically the meaning of any terms in contingent fee agreement that differ from the model agreement contained in rule of professional conduct and to obtain the client's written consent to those provisions; terms added to model agreement presumably are intended to protect the lawyer's ability to collect his or her legitimate fee, rather than to advance an independent interest of the client, and an explanation of these terms would likely increase the client's understanding of the proposed contractual relationship with the lawyer and enable the client to make a more informed decision about whether to go forward. In re Discipline of an Attorney (2008) 884 N.E.2d 450, 451 Mass. 131. Attorney And Client ☞ 147

Attorney's failure to explain to clients the portions of contingent fee agreement addressing compensation after discharge of the attorney, a contractual lien as security for payment of fees and expenses, and mandatory arbitration of any fee disputes did not violate professional conduct rule requiring a lawyer to explain a matter to extent necessary to permit client to make reasonably informed decisions about the representation. 1 PROCEEDINGS
3 MR. SINNOTT: For the record, this is
4 the special master's investigation, and the case
5 number for this is number 11-CV-10230-MLW.
6 My name is William Sinnott,
7 S-I-N-N-O-T-T, from the firm of Donoghue, Barrett &
8 Singal. I'm counsel to the special master, Gerald 9 T. Rosen, who is present and to my left. He's 10 retired from the United States District Court in 11 Detroit.
12 To my right is Attorney Elizabeth McEvoy
13 also of Donoghue, Barrett & Singal, and also to my 14 left is Professor Stephen Gillers of New York
15 University Law School who testified for, I think,
16 nine-and-a-half hours yesterday, and we'll resume
17 his testimony today but not just yet.
18 Professor -- Attorney Camille Sarrouf is 19 present, and he will be testifying, and we're going 20 to start with him for reasons that have been 21 disclosed to all parties, and all parties are in 22 agreement that we will interrupt the testimony of 23 Professor Gillers in order to start with Attorney
24 Sarrouf, and that's the plan. And, hopefully, we

Page 7

1 can finish with him and get him on his way in a
2 reasonably prompt fashion.
3 If I could ask the other attorneys in
4 the room to identify themselves beginning with Josh.
5 MR. SHARP: Joshua Sharp of Nixon
6 Peabody for Thornton Law Firm.
7 MR. KELLY: Good morning. Brian Kelly
8 of Nixon Peabody for the Thornton Law Firm as well.
9 MS. LUKEY: Joan Lukey from Choate Hall
10 for Labaton Sucharow.
11 MR. FINNERTY: And Kevin Finnerty from 12 Choate Hall for Labaton.
13 MR. HEIMMAN: Richard Heimann for Lief
14 Cabraser.
15 MR. SINNOTT: Okay, thank you. And if
16 the witness could be sworn, Madam Court Reporter.
17 (Witness sworn.)
18 DIRECT EXAMINATION
19 BY MR. SINNOTT:
20
21 Q. Good morning, sir.
22 A. Good morning.
23 Q. Sir, as you heard, my name is Bill Sinnott
24 and I represent -- I'm counsel to the special

Page 8

1 master, and I will be conducting most of the
2 examination.
3 The special master, of course, will ask
4 questions as well, but thank you for being here.
5 And I understand you've got some things of an
6 emergency nature going on. So we appreciate your 7 patience and your willingness to stay here and be 8 examined.
9 Professor -- Attorney Sarrouf --
10 A. I was a professor once.
11 Q. You were?
12 A. Adjunct.
13 Q. So if I stumble again, I won't feel bad
14 about it. It'll be somewhat accurate.
15 Sir, we've received a CV that was 16 attached to your expert declaration, and it was 17 signed on October 31, 2017. I believe that's been 18 premarked as Exhibit 1 for our convenience.
19 MR. SINNOTT: Do you have that yet?
20 THE REPORTER: I don't.
21 Q. We'll get that to you in a moment.
22 Ms. McEvoy has it. Sir, you have your CV in front
23 of you?
24 A. I do.

Page 9

1 Q. All right, sir. If I could direct your
2 attention to that. Sir, looking at your CV, are 3 there any positions or roles that you've had not
4 appearing on this CV that qualify you to render
5 opinions in your -- the opinions in your expert
6 declaration?
7 A. I don't believe there is.
8 Q. All right.
9 A. I may have forgotten, as I do from time to 10 time, but I think it's complete as I could make it
11 at the time.
12 Q. All right, sir. Thank you.
13 And, sir, just to touch on a few things,
14 you served as president of the Massachusetts Bar
15 Association from 1998 to 1999; is that correct?
16 A. It is.
17 Q. And as president of the MBA, did you have 18 occasion to review or comment on the Rules of 19 Professional Conduct in Massachusetts in effect at 20 the time?
21 A. I did.
22 Q. All right. And specifically did you --
23 PHONE LINE CONFERENCE: The following
24 participant has entered the conference? Hylenski.

Page 10

1 MR. SINNOTT: Good morning, Linda.
2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Good morning,
3 Linda.
4 MS. HYLENSKI: Good morning. I was --
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay, we're
6 started.
7 MR. SINNOTT: We're examining Linda.
8 MS. HYLENSKI: Okay.
9 BY MR. SINNOTT:
10 Q. Specifically, sir, did you comment on Rule
11 1.5(e)?
12 A. I believe I did at the time.
13 Q. All right.
14 A. That is within the scope of the committee
15 from the MBA that was involved.
16 Q. All right. And what was the committee --
17 and I would imagine by extension -- what were you
18 asked to do with respect to Rule 1.5(e)?
19 A. I think we discussed the rule and expressed
20 our opinion with regard to it.
21 Q. All right. And do you recall specifically 22 what your comments or opinion were with respect to
23 1.5(e)?
24 A. I don't.

Page 11

1 Q. All right. And, sir, you were part of a
2 committee.
3 Was this an official role in your
4 capacity as president of the Mass. Bar Association,
5 or was this a committee that you had formed?
6 How did you end up being part of this
7 committee that was commenting on --
8 A. The president of the MBA at anytime is 9 really a part of every committee that the MBA has 10 and looks in on matters.
11 This was a particular interest to me
12 because I know that when it was previously a matter
13 of changes, I was also president back in the 14 eighties of the Massachusetts Academy of Trial
15 Attorneys, and at that time I had filed -- when 16 there was a proposal with regards to the particular
17 rule, I did file with the Supreme Judicial Court a 18 motion that if they were to consider the -- at that 19 time it was that referring attorneys would be paid
20 only upon the basis of the effort or hours they put 21 into the case and not on the basis of a percentage,
22 and I had filed a motion to be heard in the Supreme 23 Judicial Court on behalf of the Mass. Academy, and 24 it stated that with -- if any rule was to be in

Page 12

1 force, that it ought to include the origination
2 credits that a lawyer gets in the big firms for
3 simply bringing a case in, and then it's turned over
4 to someone else.
5 Q. All right, sir. And what year was that?
6 A. I believe -- I think in the mid eighties.
7 Q. All right. And, sir, did you have any role
8 in reviewing the Rules of Professional Conduct in 9 2005?
10 A. No.
11 Q. Do you recall the Saggese --
12 A. Well, other than Arnie Rosenfeld did, and we 13 may have talked about it. But I had no --
14 Q. All right. And you recall the Saggese case,
15 correct?
16 A. Yes.
17 Q. All right. And --
18 A. That's Judge Spina's opinion?
19 Q. The SJC opinion.
20 A. Yes.
21 Q. And that case didn't prompt any comment or 22 activity on your part, did it, with respect to the 23 professional rules?
24 A. No.

Page 13

1 Q. Do you have any knowledge outside of what's
2 written in Saggese as to what the intent of the SJC
3 was in rendering their opinion?
4 A. I believe that they set it out very
5 carefully, and I think -- and I was in full
6 agreement with it. I know Judge Spina very well. I
7 knew him before he was on the court out in 8 Pittsfield because I used to go out there often, and 9 he was involved in some of the cases I did try.
10 And I thought that the statements that 11 were made with regards to the rule and the 12 protection of the client were appropriate.
13 Q. All right. But outside of the opinion
14 itself, did you have any other resources from which 15 you discerned the intent of the Supreme Judicial 16 Court?
17 A. No.
18 Q. And, Attorney Sarrouf, did you have any role
19 in December 2010 when the Supreme Judicial Court
20 adopted changes to Rule 1.5(e)?
21 A. I had no role.
22 Q. And is it fair to say that you did not have 23 any firsthand involvement in the revision of the 24 Mass. Rules of Professional Conduct?

Page 14

1 MS. LUKEY: At that time?
2 MR. SINNOTT: At that time.
3 A. In 2010?
4 Q. Yes, sir.
5 A. No.
6 MS. LUKEY: Objection. It was actually
7 2011.
8 Q. All right. In 2011 did you?
9 A. No.
10 Q. And I'm referring with respect to Rule
11 1.5(e).
12 A. (Nods head.)
13 Q. But your answer is you did not?
14 A. I do not -- I did not at that time.
15 Q. You did not. All right, sir.
16 And, counsel, your CV lists several 17 positions relating to reviewing the conduct of 18 judges in Massachusetts, correct?
19 A. Are you talking about Judicial Conduct
20 Commission?
21 Q. Yes, sir.
22 A. Yes. I was on that by appointment of the 23 chief justices of the trial court for six years.
24 Q. All right. And that was from 1990 to 1996?

1 A. I believe so, yes.
2 Q. And that's the Massachusetts Commission on 3 Judicial Conduct, correct?
4 A. Yes, it is.
5 Q. And what was your role in that capacity?
6 A. Well, the commission is made up of three
7 appointments, usually civilians by the governor,
8 three judges by appointment of the Supreme Judicial 9 Court and three lawyers by appointment of the chief
10 justice of the trial court.
11 Q. All right, sir.
12 A. And for the most part everyone was given at 13 different times certain investigatory
14 responsibilities and then discussions, and then,
15 where necessary, the judge who might be the subject
16 of an investigation or a hearing is given a hearing;
17 and then it depended upon the vote of the nine
18 members together with advice from the then
19 administrator, and you were given different roles
20 very often to go speak to the judge, sometimes to go
21 with a judge to recommend a retirement or things
22 like that.
23 Q. All right, sir.
24 And in the course of those duties, were

Page 16

1 you ever asked to address issues relating to
2 disclosure of fee agreements?
3 A. Never.
4 Q. And were you ever asked to address the scope
5 of information that should be disclosed to a judge
6 in a proceeding in which the payment of a fee was 7 being awarded in a class action case?
8 A. I have no memory of that issue ever coming
9 before -- in the six years that I served coming
10 before the commission.
11 Q. During your service on that commission were 12 you ever asked to review Federal Rule of Civil
13 Procedure 23?
14 A. I have no memory of that.
15 Q. Okay. Were you ever asked to review the 16 obligations of attorneys under Federal Rule of Civil
17 Procedure 54?
18 A. Within the scope of the board?
19 Q. Yes, sir.
20 A. No.
21 Q. And is it fair to say that while on that 22 board -- that your experience while on that board
23 had no bearing on your opinions in your declaration
24 in this case?

Page 17

1 A. I can remember none.
2 Q. All right, sir. Do you consider yourself an
3 expert in legal ethics?
4 A. I consider myself a very ethical lawyer who 5 has really been I believe very attentive to the 6 rules that are applied to lawyers in this 7 Commonwealth, and when I felt necessary would 8 express my opinion.
9 Q. I'd like to think all of the counsel in this
10 room would consider themselves to be ethical lawyers
11 and attentive to the rules, but let me ask you again
12 do you consider yourself to be an expert in legal 13 ethics?
14 A. Yes.
15 Q. And what do you base that on?
16 A. Fifty-seven years of practicing law in this 17 Commonwealth, and in the positions that I've held in 18 various leadership positions and in accordance with 19 the various cases that I've brought before the 20 courts -- hundreds of them that I've tried, I think 21 that I have certainly a knowledge of what has been 22 and is today the rules by which lawyers should 23 conduct themselves from.
24 Q. All right, sir. And it would be fair to say

Page 18

1 that every practicing attorney is operating in court
2 in trying to be ethical and observing ethical
3 conduct and sometimes, unfortunately, unethical
4 conduct, correct?
5 A. Unfortunately, yes.
6 Q. And many of those attorneys have long and 7 distinguished careers like yourself, correct?
8 A. I believe so.
9 Q. Would you consider all of those attorneys to 10 be experts on ethics?
11 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
12 A. I don't know what you mean by that.
13 Q. Well, by virtue of the years of experience
14 and their practices in the courts of the 15 Commonwealth, do they become experts?
16 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
17 A. It would have to be looked at on a
18 case-by-case basis.
19 Q. All right, sir.
20 A. What cases they had tried, what was their 21 experience before the courts. That's what counts I
22 believe in establishing whether or not you have some 23 expertise that would be helpful to any tribunal.
24 Q. What was your most recent case where ethics

1 were the issue before the Court?
2 A. I don't think it was a question of ethics,
3 but I believe the Patriots case from time to time,
4 depending on which one -- there were three -- I was 5 involved with all three of them, the two in the 6 state courts and the one in the federal court.
7 Q. And what were the Patriots cases?
8 A. The three of them were there was a case
9 under the rules of Massachusetts under the statutes
10 for an appraisal of the value of shares of stock
11 that were being claimed in a reorganization of a
12 corporation.
13 There was the Coggins case. That was a
14 Sarrouf -- well, the Sarrouf case versus New England
15 Patriots under the statute was the leading case
16 chosen by the Court to go forward. There were ten
17 other cases that were brought by various lawyers
18 throughout the state.
19 MS. LUKEY: He's not a plaintiff. That 20 was how the Court was designating him among the 21 cases so no confusion. So different lawyers.
22 MR. SINNOTT: All right.
23 BY MR. SINNOTT:
24 Q. What was the specific legal ethical point

Page 20

1 that was being litigated in that matter?
2 A. The ethical point I think was more in the 3 federal court case because in the -- it was a -- the 4 Sarrouf case, which is my case in which I
5 represented myself, my wife and my four children,
6 each of them had a hundred shares, I had filed
7 simply a re-appraisal. There were ten other cases.
8 Then the superior court had to choose
9 which one of the eleven would go forward, and the 10 others would simply -- the Court chose my case.
11 There was also a case brought known as 12 the Coggins --
13 Q. Can I ask you about that case though? What 14 was the ethical issue at issue in the Sarrouf versus 15 the New England Patriots?
16 A. There was no ethical issue.
17 Q. My question was what was the last case
18 that --
19 A. Well --
20 Q. -- you worked on where ethics were the issue
21 at hand, and it sounds like that that case was not
22 it. Can you recall --
23 A. No.
24 Q. -- the last case you worked on?

Page 21

1 A. There was a question that arose in the
2 federal case that I later came into before the
3 ethical question or after the ethical questions may 4 have been answered, and I was asked to come in.
5 That was the case before Judge Skinner, and that was
6 the -- let's see. Sarrouf, Coggins. Pavledis case.
7 Q. What was the ethical issue being decided in 8 that case?
9 A. There were two I think. One was who had the 10 capability of representing a class then undetermined
11 of non-voting shareholders, and the second point was 12 in the allocation of fees how that should be 13 handled.
14 And, again, those were decisions that 15 eventually were made by Judge Skinner. I think 16 there were three of them. And they are in the 17 federal supplement.
18 Q. And you were the advocate for -- on one side
19 of those ethical issues?
20 A. I was the lawyer involved -- the lead lawyer
21 after the other lawyers had dropped out.
22 Q. Okay.
23 A. And then the case went up to the first 24 circuit. It was -- the Court's rulings were

Page 22

1 approved as to the federal SEC claims, and it was 2 then remanded as to the evaluations to be applied to
 3 the other shareholders -- non-voting shareholders,
 4 and the direction by the first circuit that the 5 Court must await the rulings in the cases in the 6 state court.
 7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Mr. Sarrouf, could
 8 I -- I'm trying to understand your answer. I think
 9 Mr. Sinnott's questions, to put a finer point on it,
 10 goes to the issue of cases that you were involved in 11 which required or raised the issues of conduct of 12 lawyers under the Massachusetts Rules of 13 Professional Conduct.
 14 I'm not hearing in your answer that I --
 15 THE WITNESS: Then I misunderstood his
 16 question.
 17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah, that's why
 18 I'd like to just sharpen the question a little bit
 19 and limit it to your involvement in cases which 20 raised questions under either the Massachusetts
 21 Rules of Professional Conduct or perhaps other 22 state's Rules of Professional Conduct or, by an 23 analogy, the ABA model rules.
 24 MS. LUKEY: May I ask a clarifying

Page 23

1 question? Are you asking him whether he was
 2 litigating ethical issues or --
 3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Either litigating,
 4 consulting. Any involvement that he's had in those 5 cases, Joan.
 6 MS. LUKEY: Would that include the cases
 7 where there were issues that are at issue here like 8 1.5(e) divisions, even if he wasn't litigating the 9 issue per se, but he was there as counsel --
 10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, if he was 11 involved in it. If he was consulting. If he served
 12 as an expert.
 13 Any involvement -- what we're looking
 14 for here is his background either as an expert, as a 15 consultant or as an attorney in cases in which the 16 conduct of lawyers under the Massachusetts Rules of 17 Professional Conduct were at issue.
 18 MS. LUKEY: Okay.
 19 BY MR. SINNOTT:
 20 Q. With that clarification, sir, can you answer
 21 that question?
 22 A. I have never been asked by any Court in all
 23 the cases that I've tried in this state, in Federal 24 Court of Vermont, in the Federal Court of Maine ever

Page 24

1 a question on a matter of ethics.
 2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Have you ever --
 3 A. Nobody's ever asked me what my referral fee
 4 was in any case ever. Never became an issue.
 5 Q. Well, we weren't asking about whether your 6 conduct was an issue, sir.
 7 The question was whether in your
 8 professional experience you've litigated or 9 participated in proceedings where that was the issue
 10 in the case?
 11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, broader
 12 still, whether the Massachusetts Rules of 13 Professional Conduct or any other Rules of 14 Professional Conduct were raised in the case and the 15 extent of your involvement in those.
 16 A. None.
 17 Q. Do you consider yourself --
 18 A. The Court has never asked ever -- any of the 19 courts -- as to what was the division of fees.
 20 MS. LUKEY: The problem is what he's 21 offered on, the standard of practice. He's not an 22 academic.
 23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I will get there,
 24 Joan. Can I ask my questions? I will get there I

1 promise.
 2 MS. LUKEY: I don't want there to be
 3 confusion or him to be embarrassed. We didn't 4 tender him to rebut Professor Gillers. He's on the 5 standard of practice in Massachusetts.
 6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I understand, Joan.
 7 MS. LUKEY: Thank you.
 8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: We're entitled to 9 inquire -- I need to know -- if I'm being asked to 10 consider his opinion, I need to know the extent of 11 his expertise and involvement with cases, writings,
 12 opinions, comments on the Massachusetts Rules of 13 Professional Conduct. That's all. That's all.
 14 Mr. Sarrouf, if I could, please, if you
 15 could tell us the extent of your involvement in 16 cases or in commenting upon outside of cases
 17 attorney conduct under the Massachusetts Rules of 18 Professional Conduct -- it's a very broad
 19 question --
 20 THE WITNESS: It is very broad.
 21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's a very broad
 22 question.
 23 So we'd like to know the extent of your 24 involvement in the Rules of Professional Conduct as

Page 26

1 they are applied in the state courts, as they are
2 applied in the federal courts, any professional
3 views you may have offered on the Rules of 4 Professional Conduct, and then we will come to 5 Joan's question on the issues of division of fees.
6 THE WITNESS: I have been involved with 7 the rule making when I was president of the Mass.
8 Academy of Trial Attorneys. I was involved with the 9 rule making --
10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I ask -- I'm 11 not from Massachusetts.
12 THE WITNESS: Okay.
13 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So could you tell
14 me what the Massachusetts Academy of Trial Lawyers
15 is?
16 THE WITNESS: It was the successor to 17 what was referred to as the American -- the big 18 fight was the American College of Trial Lawyers is 19 the --
20 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
21 THE WITNESS: -- there was a -- I'm 22 trying to remember. It changed its name a couple of 23 times. It used to be centered here in 24 Massachusetts. It was the one involving, um --

Page 27

1 (Pause.)
2 THE WITNESS: I think today it's called
3 AAJ?
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The American
5 Association of Justices.
6 MS. LUKEY: Replacing ATLA.
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay, I see. Okay.
8 So the Massachusetts Academy of Trial
9 Lawyers is the predecessor to the Massachusetts
10 chapter of the American Association of Trial --
11 of --
12 MS. LUKEY: It was then the American 13 Trial Lawyers Academy.
14 THE WITNESS: Yes.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just so that I
16 understand -- I'm familiar with the Michigan version
17 of that.
18 THE WITNESS: Okay.
19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I attend their 20 events.
21 THE WITNESS: I may have attended one of 22 their events.
23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah, great
24 organization. That's not an endorsement.

Page 28

1 THE WITNESS: All right.
2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's basically a
3 plaintiffs' bar.
4 THE WITNESS: Yes, it is.
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I interrupted you,
6 I'm sorry, but I wasn't sure what the Massachusetts
7 Academy of Trial Lawyers was.
8 THE WITNESS: In answer to the broad
9 question you posed, I have appeared before the 10 Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers who have been 11 accused of violations, and I've done that on several 12 occasions.
13 I was called in once to testify to the 14 -- there was a change that I appeared before a 15 committee that had been formed by my dear friend and 16 now partner, Arnie Rosenfeld, when we were -- when 17 he was seeking to develop a finer definition I think
18 when the matter of IOLTA accounts was being formed
19 and where there were a lot of, unfortunately,
20 misinterpretation by many lawyers as to how that was 21 to be handled, especially with regard to their 22 banking.
23 And I did work with him on that. And I
24 believe that was -- it may have been when I was the

Page 29

1 president of the bar association -- the
2 Massachusetts Bar Association and requested him to 3 spend, if he could, on a monthly basis in the 4 newspaper -- in the weekly to apprise lawyers of 5 their mistakes that get them into trouble, and that
6 they should be doing certain things.
7 And I think that went a long way to
8 resolving those issues.
9 THE SPECIAL MASTER: In your --
10 THE WITNESS: That's a very -- in the 11 broader sense.
12 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay, good. And in 13 your practice have you been involved in representing 14 attorneys who have professional conduct issues
15 before either a Court or a Massachusetts Bar
16 tribunal or -- I don't know if you have a -- we call
17 it a grievance process, Michigan Attorney Grievance
18 Board.
19 I don't know -- I'm sure you have a 20 corollary.
21 THE WITNESS: Yes.
22 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Have you been
23 involved in representing attorneys either in court
24 or before grievance authorities that involved or

Page 30

1 raised issues arising out of the Massachusetts Rules
2 of Professional Conduct?
3 THE WITNESS: Yes.
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Could you
5 tell us about those, please?
6 THE WITNESS: Let me start with those
7 that have been referred to me by a Court.
8 When there have been issues and 9 certainly that involve a lawyer who may have been 10 testifying in a matter, I have been asked by 11 superior court judges to, if I would, come up and 12 make sure that I was offering legal advice to that 13 particular witness in a case, and I would come up
14 and do it pro bono.
15 I'd sit to make sure that the lawyer
16 understands the parameters of what he can say and 17 cannot say, especially in attorney/client relations.
18 There were two of those that I remember.
19 And in most instances when I've been 20 retained by attorneys I have tried to keep the 21 matter out of court and to bring it into some form
22 of mediation before -- the last one I had was before
23 a judge who was Judge Lynch who was a part of JAMS
24 at the time, and we were able to dispose of that.

Page 31

1 If that answers your question, I don't
2 know. I've been required -- asked by lawyers often
3 through the course of my 56 years and have tried to 4 accommodate both requests of Courts and request of 5 lawyers to step in and see what could be done to 6 resolve issues.
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So is it fair to
8 say then that your involvement with cases -- in 9 either cases or public comment before boards has 10 been as a practicing lawyer?
11 THE WITNESS: Yes.
12 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. All right.
13 BY MR. SINNOTT:
14 Q. And, counsel, how many of those cases have 15 involved specifically Rule 1.5(a)?
16 MS. LUKEY: Do you want the rule? Could
17 he see the rule --
18 MR. SINNOTT: Of course.
19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I was going to 20 actually suggest it, Joan.
21 MS. LUKEY: Yeah. (Indicating).
22 THE WITNESS: Yes.
23 (Pause.)
24 MS. LUKEY: For the record, I'm not

Page 32

1 objecting to the question, but I had never asked him
2 to look at Rule 1.5(a) because it wasn't in
3 Professor Gillers' --
4 MR. SINNOTT: I'll be asking him about
5 1.5(e) if it makes you feel any better, Joan.
6 MS. LUKEY: It does. He's not asking
7 about E. He's asking you about A. I know you
8 didn't look at that before, but that's what he's 9 asking about.
10 (Pause.)
11 A. I have represented clients who had a 12 argument or disagreement with their lawyers with 13 regards to the amount of monies that were charged to 14 the client. I have done that.
15 Q. You have done that?
16 A. Yes. And I was an expert in a case that had 17 something to do with this. The case is -- it's 18 referred to in some of the other cases. I was the 19 expert in Fishman versus -- I can't think of the 20 last --
21 PROFESSOR GILLERS: Brooks.
22 THE WITNESS: Brooks.
23 A. Brooks. I was the expert referred to as an 24 experienced tort lawyer.

Page 33

1 Q. All right.
2 A. By the Court.
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Were you the
4 Court-appointed expert, or were you an expert for a
5 party?
6 THE WITNESS: No. I had -- it was the 7 first case I came into as an expert. A very fine
8 lawyer here, Paul Sugarman, had called me.
9 I had first turned it down, and Paul
10 called me and said, Camille, we don't have a 11 conspiracy of silence in the legal profession, and 12 you should be -- take this case.
13 MS. LUKEY: The judge asked you if it
14 was a Court appointment, or was it by the party --
15 THE WITNESS: No. I was hired by the 16 young lawyer who was representing -- in fact, the 17 defendant who then brought a cross action.
18 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Was the charge --
19 did the charge involve claims of an excessive fee
20 under 1.5(a)?
21 THE WITNESS: No. What it involved was 22 the failure of the client -- of the lawyer to send 23 the case to a more qualified lawyer and went ahead
24 and settled for a figure that was way out of line

1 with what the settlement value of that case was.
2 And that's when the Court came down and
3 said there can be cases such as that, poor
4 settlement value. The difference I think in the 5 case I had opined that it was between 450 and 550
6 and not 129. And the Court sent it to the jury, and 7 then upheld the verdict of 500 and something
8 thousand.
9 BY MR. SINNOTT:
10 Q. Did you opine on an ethical issue in the 11 course of the Fishman case?
12 A. Yeah, I opined that the lawyer who was 13 representing the client had a duty to provide the 14 best representation he could. And if he didn't feel 15 appropriately either by experience or otherwise that 16 he should go forward with it, he should have sent it
17 to someone and agreed to a referral fee rather than 18 to feel I'm not going to share my fee with anyone
19 else and go forward to the detriment of the client;
20 that the clients come first.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So it doesn't sound
22 like that case arose under 1.5(a) or E -- or 1.5(e);
23 is that right?
24 THE WITNESS: Well, I think it falls

Page 35

1 within the scope of what a lawyer owes to a client
2 in representation under any circumstances. And that
3 is if he can't handle it, he ought to find a lawyer
4 who can.
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Nobody can quarrel
6 with that.
7 But I'm -- sir, with all due respect,
8 you understand my role? I'm the special master
9 appointed by the Court, and I have to make judgments
10 about weight to be given to testimony, weight to be 11 given to expert opinion.
12 So what I'm trying to understand is the 13 scope, extent, nature, depth of your involvement
14 with cases or commenting upon rules that are at 15 issue here in this case.
16 THE WITNESS: Okay.
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And there are a
18 number of rules that have been raised, and I just 19 want to focus on those rules or any other Rules --
20 THE WITNESS: Your Honor --
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- of Professional
22 Conduct that have relevance to this case.
23 THE WITNESS: I have -- 90 percent of my 24 law practice over the last 56 years -- and certainly

Page 36

1 it's dropped off in certainly the last five or six,
2 maybe a little longer -- have been referral cases.
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Fee referral cases?
4 THE WITNESS: Yes. Every one of them.
5 And in the hundreds that I've tried, I have never
6 had a Court ask me what is your referral fee.
7 Never. It never comes up.
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry. Were 9 you paying referral fees, or were you receiving
10 referral fees?
11 THE WITNESS: No, I was the trial
12 lawyer. I received the -- whatever the judgments
13 were or in the middle of a trial settlements, and I
14 made the referral to the lawyer who brought me the 15 case.
16 MS. LUKEY: You made the referral
17 payment?
18 THE SPECIAL MASTER: You made the
19 referral fee --
20 THE WITNESS: The referral payment to 21 that lawyer.
22 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
23 THE WITNESS: From lawyers throughout
24 this state.

Page 37

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And you've never
2 had an issue raised under the Rules of Professional
3 Conduct about referral fee payments?
4 THE WITNESS: In Massachusetts referral
5 fee payments are appropriate.
6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, that's what
7 we're trying to determine in this case and the 8 circumstances under which they are appropriate.
9 That's what we're trying to determine.
10 So, again, my questions to you are 11 trying to understand the extent of your expertise in 12 the application of the rules -- any rules that you
13 have expertise in, but in this case the application
14 of the rules involving referral fees which include
15 Rule 1.5(e), may include Rule 1.5(a), may include
16 Rule 7.2(b) and perhaps even other rules.
17 So we're trying to make a judgment here,
18 sir, about the extent of your experience in the 19 application of these rules and how these rules are 20 handled by courts, by bar -- I'll use the term bar
21 grievance authorities.
22 Bill, Joan, somebody correct me -- let
23 me use the appropriate Massachusetts --
24 MS. LUKEY: The Board of Bar Overseers.

Page 38

1     THE SPECIAL MASTER: The Board of Bar
2     Overseers.
3     We're trying to make a judgment about
4     the application of the rules -- the Massachusetts
5     Rules of Professional Conduct as regards referral
6     fees. I understand that you've never had a problem
7     with it. I accept that.
8     You would agree, I hope, that the fact
9     that you've never had a problem doesn't make you an
10    expert?
11    MS. LUKEY: Objection.
12    THE WITNESS: Well, if I tried the 13    number of referral fee cases in the hundreds in my 14    career, I think I have a pretty good understanding
15    and add to that my work before the BBO, my work as a 16    president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, my 17    work as a president for two years and my other
18    commitments to the practice of law in Massachusetts,
19    I'm of the opinion that it never is an issue in 20    Massachusetts; that is, the referral of cases.
21    When there is a disagreement, the
22    lawyers take it to a separate case and try it before
23    a Court, or in many instances we try it before a 24    arbitration board or in other instances just an

Page 39

1    agreement to meet at JAMS or whatever to get -- to
2    handle the matter.
3    THE SPECIAL MASTER: So when you --
4    THE WITNESS: But in Massachusetts our
5    concern in all of these rules are the clients.
6    THE SPECIAL MASTER: So let me
7    understand.
8    When you say you've had hundreds of 9    referral cases, you are referring to the cases that 10   you've had as a lawyer in which you have either paid
11   or received a referral fee?
12   THE WITNESS: Yes.
13   THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. My question
14   is a little different.
15   THE WITNESS: Okay.
16   THE SPECIAL MASTER: My question is have 17   you had cases in which the issue of whether a
18   referral fee was appropriate under Rule 1.5, either
19   A or E, or any other Massachusetts Rule of 20   Professional Conduct in which that was the issue in 21   which the Court had to make a decision or perhaps a
22   tribunal -- the Massachusetts Board of Bar Overseers
23   had to make a determination as to whether the 24   referral fee was appropriate?

Page 40

1     THE WITNESS: Never in the manner in
2     which you've expressed it. Whether a fee is 3     appropriate has been an issue in many cases. But 4     it's the fee that was charged to the client that
5     becomes the issue. In Massachusetts.
6     I don't know of any case otherwise in
7     Massachusetts.
8     THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is your testimony
9     then that any referral fee, no matter what the 10    circumstances, is appropriate under the 11    Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct?
12    THE WITNESS: If it complies that it's 13    in -- today in writing and that the client knows
14    that there is to be a sharing of the fees between 15    counsel; that is, the referring counsel and the 16    trial counsel, those don't end up that I know of in 17    courts.
18    THE SPECIAL MASTER: And if the fee is 19    not excessive, the referral fee is not excessive
20    under Rule 1.5(a), does that -- is that also part of 21    the consideration that if it were an issue, a Court
22    would have to decide whether the referral fee was 23    excessive, 1.5(a) -- I think you have it in front of 24    you; you can look --

Page 41

1     THE WITNESS: Yes. The case would be --
2     this is a complaint brought by a client?
3     THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not trying to 4     limit you to that. I'm trying -- sir, I'm just 5     trying to understand your expertise in the 6     application of these rules. That's all I'm trying 7     to understand.
8     And I don't want you to limit yourself
9     to cases. You can include cases, but I don't want
10    you to limit yourself to cases.
11    So when we talk -- the question I want
12    to know is is it your opinion that a referral fee,
13    no matter what, is appropriate under the 14    Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct? You 15    answered it in part because you said it had to 16    comply with 1.5(e), and that I understand.
17    But is that where the scrutiny of a
18    Court ends if the issue is raised?
19    THE WITNESS: But the raising of the 20    issues of fees is an issue separate and apart from 21    the case that is being -- the subject matter of the 22    complaint --
23    THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.
24    THE WITNESS: -- and the complaint must

Page 42

1 come from the client. In Massachusetts.
2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, let me
3 suggest another potential. In a class action there
4 could be an objector.
5 There wasn't in this case, but there
6 could be an objector to a referral fee that the fee
7 is excessive. There could be an objector, and a
8 Court would have to rule on that objection.
9 THE WITNESS: If it's brought before the 10 Court at that time and before the actual conclusion
11 of the case, yes.
12 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So I'm
13 trying to understand your expertise in cases raising
14 the issue of the appropriateness of referral fees.
15 THE WITNESS: In Massachusetts I know of 16 no case with regards to the appropriateness of a 17 referral fee. Referral fees are acceptable in 18 Massachusetts.
19 If there is a question about the 20 referral fee, that is not -- that is between the 21 lawyers that are involved with that referral
22 arrangement.
23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So in your view
24 neither a Court, nor the Massachusetts Board of Bar

Page 43

1 Overseers has a role to play if there is a complaint
2 raised?
3 THE WITNESS: If a complaint is raised
4 by a client, no, they absolutely have a rule -- a
5 role to play.
6 I assume what you're asking is if there
7 is a complaint between the lawyers --
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, I --
9 THE WITNESS: -- that has to be taken
10 out as a separate matter.
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I don't want you to 12 limit yourself to that.
13 You can -- any issues that raise
14 questions of the appropriateness of a referral fee
15 under the Massachusetts Rules of Professional 16 Conduct, those are the cases I'd like to know the 17 extent of your experience and whether they're cases
18 in court or cases before the Board of Bar Overseers.
19 (Pause.)
20 THE WITNESS: I don't know how to 21 otherwise express this. In Massachusetts, unlike 22 many -- most other states, referral fees are 23 acceptable. It's a part of our rules. It's a 24 part of --

Page 44

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not
2 questioning --
3 THE WITNESS: -- what we try cases with.
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Sir.
5 THE WITNESS: It's the equalizer that
6 exists.
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Sir, I'm not
8 questioning that.
9 I'm only questioning the extent of your 10 involvement in cases in which these issues were 11 either cases or bar overseer -- Board of Bar
12 Overseer proceedings, anything in which the question
13 of the appropriateness of a referral fee or a 14 division of fees was an issue in either the case or 15 the proceeding.
16 THE WITNESS: As you pose that question,
17 I don't know.
18 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Thank you.
19 CONTINUED EXAMINATION BY MR. SINNOTT:
20 Q. So, sir, let me ask the question this way:
21 Have you ever briefed a Court on how it should 22 interpret Rule 1.5(e)?
23 A. No. It's never been raised in any case I've 24 ever been involved with.

Page 45

1 Q. Have you ever briefed a Court on how it
2 should interpret Rule 7.2(b)?
3 MS. LUKEY: Sorry, flipped too far.
4 7.2(b) (indicating). This is just for context. And
5 there's the B (indicating).
6 (Pause.)
7 A. The question again is? I've read it.
8 Q. Have you ever briefed a Court on how it
9 should interpret that rule?
10 A. No.
11 Q. And have you ever briefed a Court on how it
12 should interpret Rule 1.5(a)?
13 A. No.
14 Q. Now, sir, I know that you taught at New 15 England School of Law for 19 years; is that correct?
16 A. Roughly. Nineteen or 20, yeah.
17 Q. Did you ever teach legal ethics?
18 A. I taught it as a part of the legal 19 practice --
20 Q. What was the name --
21 A. -- portion.
22 Q. What was the name of the course you taught?
23 A. Actually, imposed the old NITA, the National 24 Institute of Trial Advocacy, of which I was a part

Page 46

1 for several, several years, and I really put it in
2 place at the New England School of Law with four
3 others.
4 There was Judge Mazzone of the federal
5 court, Judge Barton, and Abner Sisson who was really
6 my mentor at the law.
7 Q. But that was a trial advocacy course,
8 correct?
9 A. Yes, it was.
10 Q. I understand it was a pretty good one, too,
11 but --
12 A. I hope so.
13 Q. You did not teach a legal ethics course,
14 correct?
15 A. That was a separate course, but I did teach
16 ethics as to, you know, the extent to which you can 17 work with the facts when you're addressing a jury --
18 Q. Sure.
19 A. -- what is necessary in your presentations
20 to a Court; the ethical rules all apply, and you
21 must be aware of them.
22 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Would that include
23 the duty of candor under Rule 3.3 that a lawyer has 24 to the Court?

Page 47

1 THE WITNESS: Absolutely.
2 BY MR. SINNOTT:
3 Q. So, sir, you don't consider yourself to be 4 an expert on Rule 1.5(e), do you?
5 A. An expert on?
6 MS. LUKEY: Go back one. It's right
7 here (indicating).
8 A. I do consider myself an expert on that rule.
9 Q. And why is that, sir?
10 A. Because I've done almost -- in all the cases
11 I've tried been involved in a referral matter.
12 Q. And your testimony is that that makes you an 13 expert in that area?
14 A. It certainly makes me an expert in how it's 15 been handled here in the Commonwealth of 16 Massachusetts both in the --
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Could I -- I'm
18 sorry, please continue.
19 A. -- state court and adoption of the same
20 rules by the federal court.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does that include
22 class actions?
23 THE WITNESS: The only class action I
24 was involved with in terms -- to the extent that it

Page 48

1 was -- was the Patriots litigation. All others,
2 frankly, I refer out.
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So -- I won't ask
4 you if you receive a fee when you refer them out.
5 THE WITNESS: I do. Sometimes a very
6 small one, but I do receive --
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
8 THE WITNESS: And in many cases I simply 9 send them over to the client; that is, the referral
10 fee.
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So is it fair to
12 say then that your expertise does not include
13 referral fees or division of fees in class actions?
14 THE WITNESS: Other than my own
15 experience in referring matters to whoever the class
16 counsel are and how I receive or my office receives
17 the referral that we agreed upon, no.
18 BY MR. SINNOTT:
19 Q. So, sir, would it be your testimony that any 20 lawyer that engages in referrals is an expert on 21 Rule 1.5(e)?
22 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
23 A. Any lawyer who does referral work better
24 acquaint themselves with this.

Page 49

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Would they be
2 competent to offer expert testimony on the rules
3 under the governing standards of Rule 702?
4 THE WITNESS: Yes.
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you know Rule
6 702? I assume it's the same in Massachusetts. It's 7 the rule that governs the admission of expert
8 opinion testimony.
9 Is it your view that any lawyer who
10 engages in the receipt of referral fees or who pays
11 referral fees would qualify as an expert under Rule
12 702?
13 THE WITNESS: With the extent of 14 experience that I've had, I believe that I should be 15 considered by a Court. I think a Court has been -- 16 has accepted my --
17 (Pause.)
18 THE SPECIAL MASTER: While you're 19 thinking, I would be very interested in any cases in 20 which a Court has recognized you as an expert,
21 offered by a party or appointed by the Court under
22 Rule 706.
23 I'd be very interested in which you've
24 been recognized as an expert on these issues.

Page 50

1 THE WITNESS: Well, I can only put it
2 this way 'cause I can't remember them all: I've
3 never been disqualified by a Court when I appeared
4 as an expert.
5 The only time --
6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Have you appeared
7 as an expert and been recognized by a Court as an 8 expert, either for a party or by the Court, as to 9 Rules 1.5 or Rule 7.2(b)?
10 THE WITNESS: Yes, I was recognized in 11 the case of -- I think it's listed in this.
12 (Pause.)
13 THE WITNESS: Zabin versus Picciotto.
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Zabin.
15 THE WITNESS: Zabin.
16 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay, yes, that's
17 listed. Yep.
18 BY MR. SINNOTT:
19 Q. Wasn't that a case, sir, where the issue was 20 whether your client was entitled to quantum meruit?
21 A. It also became an issue as to which of the 22 clients -- and there were several if you read the 23 case; I don't know how many different lawyers there
24 were. And I ended up really being sort of the

Page 51

1 expert for each of the lawyers during the -- I was
2 on for two days.
3 Q. And what was your testimony specifically
4 with respect to --
5 A. How you divide the -- my testimony was you
6 divide the issues that were being addressed at the 7 particular time that that lawyer was involved,
8 either in the initial case or in the subsequent 9 appeals, and I expressed my opinions as to how --
10 well, the way they should be assessed and presented
11 to the jury in this particular case -- in that case.
12 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And was your view
13 in that case, the Zabin case, that a lawyer could 14 receive -- as I understand the case -- and that was 15 listed. So we looked at the cases.
16 As I understand the case, a lawyer had 17 been discharged from his representation, or he 18 withdrew, he got out of the case, and then he sued
19 his former client for a recovery of some attorneys'
20 fees.
21 And you in that case opined to the jury
22 on your view of what was an appropriate fee that 23 this lawyer should have gotten. And what was the 24 basis of your view as to the amount of the fee?

Page 52

1 THE WITNESS: It was in accordance with
2 the fee agreement that had been entered into between
3 the party and the lawyer.
4 In that case it was --
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And do you recall
6 what the appeals court ultimately ruled in that case
7 as to the basis of a fee to which that lawyer should 8 have received?
9 THE WITNESS: I don't remember exactly
10 that, no.
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Would it help your 12 recollection -- and I'll just try to distill this --
13 to say that the appeals court ruled that the basis
14 of recovery for that attorney was quantum meruit?
15 Does that help your recollection?
16 THE WITNESS: There were several
17 lawyers. I don't know which one they were referring 18 to at that time, but I believe as to Mr. Zabin --
19 Attorney Zabin it was in accordance with the 20 agreement that had been -- the contingent fee
21 agreement signed between Mr. Zabin and the client.
22 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the basis was 23 not quantum meruit?
24 THE WITNESS: There was quantum meruit

Page 53

1 to be determined at various stages with regards to
2 other of the lawyers 'cause there were several of
3 them. He went through lawyers --
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Were you offered by 5 Mr. Zabin?
6 THE WITNESS: Huh --
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Were you offered as
8 the expert for Mr. Zabin?
9 THE WITNESS: Yes. And then suddenly
10 became the expert for everybody else in the case.
11 BY MR. SINNOTT:
12 Q. And how did Rule 1.5(e) figure into that 13 expert testimony of yours? How did you cite that?
14 A. I didn't cite it.
15 MS. LUKEY: I don't think that was the 16 question that elicited that case answer.
17 MR. SINNOTT: Okay, but I'm asking that
18 question.
19 MS. LUKEY: Okay.
20 Q. So 1.5(e) was not cited in your advocacy on 21 behalf of Mr. Zabin, correct?
22 A. No.
23 Q. Do you consider yourself an expert on the 24 Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct?

Page 54

1 A. I know them to the extent that I have been
2 in the practice for as long as I have and have been
3 in the courts of the Commonwealth for as many times
4 as I have, and I'm well acquainted with the rules of
5 ethics.
6 Q. As is any long-term practitioner, correct?
7 A. Yes.
8 Q. Are you prepared to go before Judge Wolf in 9 federal court and testify as an expert on the 10 Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct?
11 A. Yes, I will.
12 Q. You will?
13 A. Yes.
14 Q. Let me ask you about class actions, sir. I
15 know you mentioned the Patriots case.
16 Have you ever entered into an
17 attorney/client relationship with a plaintiff in a
18 class action matter other than yourself?
19 MS. LUKEY: I'm sorry, could you --
20 Q. Have you ever entered into an
21 attorney/client relationship with a plaintiff in a
22 class action matter?
23 A. Yes.
24 Q. And who was that?

Page 55

1 A. Oh, my God. Several. They come up. I
2 refer them out if the class action is already in
3 place.
4 Q. All right.
5 A. But people have come to me in many of the 6 class actions that are out there, especially the 7 asbestos cases. Not only some -- some of them came 8 -- close friends and family came with regards to 9 their claims.
10 I would take down the information, and 11 I'd find out who are the class representatives, and 12 I'd send the matter over to them.
13 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So in those cases
14 you were the referring attorney?
15 THE WITNESS: Yes.
16 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yep. I think
17 Bill's question was a little --
18 Q. Let me be a little more specific.
19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- specific.
20 BY MR. SINNOTT:
21 Q. Have you ever acted as class counsel in a
22 class action?
23 A. Only in the Patriots cases to the extent
24 that you would take those three cases, the federal

Page 56

1 case and the two in the state court. I was involved
2 in each of those.
3 Q. And you were class counsel in those cases?
4 A. Yes. I was the lead case that went forward
5 in the appraisal actions, and then at the request of 6 Judge Young -- William Young, I -- he asked me to 7 intervene in the Coggins case, and then at the 8 request of other lawyers I went into the Pavledis
9 case in the federal court.
10 Q. How many other firms were involved in those 11 cases?
12 A. How many firms?
13 Q. Yes, sir.
14 A. I think there were nine other firms in the 15 appraisal actions. The Coggins, that firm was 16 Nutter McClennen. And in Pavledis, the professor
17 from Suffolk. One other from the firm -- the firm
18 that entered the lawsuit and then the whole class
19 that was expanded to include every person whether 20 they agreed with the proposals of Mr. Sullivan or 21 not, the Court expanded those who would be
22 beneficiaries to every holder of a non-voting share
23 at the time that it was taken private.
24 Q. And what was the recovery for the class in

Page 57

1 those matters?
2 A. Well, the offer was $15 a share. The
3 finding by Judge Young in the appraisal action was
4 that it was $80 a share. And then we moved that it
5 be taken as to interest as though the matter was 6 being held as a trustee 'cause that was one of the 7 findings.
8 And, in fact, Sullivan and the voting
9 shareholders were, in effect, trustees of the 10 valuation at the time of liquidation of -- and 11 should have been more faithful to their 12 responsibilities as trustees.
13 And that -- we prevailed upon the Court
14 to utilize not the statutory interest rate of 1
15 percent a month but as trustees utilizing the 16 federal and then -- and, in fact, it would -- I
17 forget how it was -- and a monthly -- so it was --
18 the interest rate was upon -- applied every month.
19 So it took it from $80 to $186 and some odd cents
20 per share to be attributed.
21 So then there was the determination in 22 Judge Skinner's finding that even those who had 23 agreed and taken that $15, they were eligible for 24 the remainder starting with the date upon which they

Page 58

1 had already received their first submission for the
2 $15.
3 Q. Was there a fee award in that case?
4 A. Yes.
5 Q. And how many attorneys received a portion of 6 that fee award?
7 A. Well, I received a fee for my case. I
8 didn't charge anybody in my family. I sent a
9 hundred shares off to Bowdoin College that was mine,
10 and the rest went to my wife and four children.
11 In the Coggins case I don't think I
12 asked for a fee from Nutter McClennen. In the 13 Pavledis cases the Court awarded the fee after 14 hearings including a -- in one of the Fed Supp cases
15 the judge accepted that he should consider for the 16 lodestar to also include or consider a percentage
17 fee like ordinarily would be in a -- you know, a
18 third. I think he came to 25 percent.
19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you --
20 A. But it's in those cases.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you have
22 experience beyond the Patriots case in class
23 actions --
24 THE WITNESS: Only to the extent that I

Page 59

1 have sent cases to the class action lawyers and, of 2 course, stayed apprised of what's going on and what
3 would the client -- my client of course -- can 4 expect, especially in those instances when I've 5 represented much older people, many retired, in 6 which the money was very much a part of their 7 existence.
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you have
9 experience as lead counsel --
10 THE WITNESS: No.
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- in class
12 actions?
13 THE WITNESS: Other than the Patriots
14 matter, no.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. Do you
16 have experience in the obligations of disclosure to 17 the Court in class actions of attorney fee
18 agreements?
19 THE WITNESS: Here in Massachusetts?
20 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Anywhere but
21 certainly Massachusetts.
22 THE WITNESS: Well, I know in some 23 instances in talking to the lawyers who are the 24 class counsel that they follow the Massachusetts

Page 60

1 rule. I mean federal court here has adopted our
2 rules.
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me ask again do
4 you have experience with the Massachusetts rules in
5 class actions as to the obligations of disclosure
6 that counsel have to the Court in seeking fees?
7 THE WITNESS: I know they would be bound
8 by our rules. The Massachusetts rules.
9 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Hopefully, they're
10 bound by all the rules, but my -- my question again
11 is your experience. Do you have experience
12 personally in --
13 THE WITNESS: No --
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- not what the 15 lawyers tell you, but do you personally have 16 experience in your practice as to the obligations
17 that class lawyers have in disclosing fees to the 18 Court?
19 THE WITNESS: I have never experienced
20 myself, other than the Patriots matter, as a class
21 action lawyer. But I can tell you that I certainly 22 monitor the cases on behalf of my clients.
23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Bill.
24 BY MR. SINNOTT:

Page 61

1 Q. So, sir, with respect to those cases that
2 you monitored, is it fair to say that -- can you
3 tell me if any of those were national class action
4 cases?
5 A. I believe certainly asbestos cases would 6 fall into that category. There was one other having 7 to do with a particular drug. I don't remember what
8 it was, but that certainly was an action cases.
9 Other than that, no.
10 Q. And who were the firms you referred those 11 cases to that you monitored?
12 A. One was the Cetrulo firm I believe. Another
13 was the -- can I just ask -- can I ask her what --
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: She can refresh
15 your recollection.
16 THE WITNESS: Yes, thank you.
17 (Witness and counsel confer.)
18 BY MR. SINNOTT:
19 Q. Sir, you can go ahead and answer.
20 MS. LUKEY: So the name of the person at 21 Manion Gaynor that you wanted to give them. Gaynor.
22 A. Gaynor.
23 MS. LUKEY: Marty Gaynor.
24 Q. All right, sir.

Page 62

1 A. There's another -- I forgot the name of the
2 firm. I can't think of his name, but I know -- he
3 was in my office for a short time.
4 MS. LUKEY: What kind of case?
5 THE WITNESS: Another part of the 6 asbestos matters. A different type of asbestos.
7 Q. That's all right, sir. We can move on.
8 A. All right. I'll get it sooner or later --
9 Q. Do you have any experience --
10 A. There is one other matter --
11 Q. Yes.
12 A. -- that she did remind me of when I was 13 accepted as a lawyer as to fees --
14 MS. LUKEY: The expert.
15 A. -- the expert, I was pro bono for the 16 Commonwealth of Massachusetts in the case in which 17 they opposed the further distribution of fees on the 18 second payment arising out of the tobacco cases.
19 And I agreed -- I think it was Attorney
20 General Tom Riley -- that I would myself, Mike Mone,
21 I forget who the third one was, but Mike Mone and I
22 did it pro bono for the Commonwealth and appeared in 23 the case in front of -- I think it was Judge van
24 Gestel who's still sitting.

Page 63

1 Q. All right.
2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: May I follow up?
3 MR. SINNOTT: Yes.
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm looking at the 5 Zabin case which you referred us to in which you
6 served as Mr. Zabin's expert.
7 THE WITNESS: I was.
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And apparently were 9 recognized by the Court as such 'cause he let you
10 testify, right?
11 THE WITNESS: I don't know why I was.
12 Usually -- they don't usually put names in, but they 13 did there.
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, you are
15 referred to in the Massachusetts Appeals Court
16 opinion as Mr. Zabin's expert.
17 THE WITNESS: I was then examined by 18 every other plaintiff's counsel with regards to 19 their case --
20 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, that's what
21 happens to experts.
22 THE WITNESS: I was on for two days.
23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
24 Your testimony as characterized in the

Page 64

1 appeals opinion, you testified that Mr. Zabin was
2 entitled to receive 40 percent of the 2.2 million
3 dollars which was the highest offer he had received
4 in settlement negotiations plus expenses.
5 And you further testified, according
6 again to the court of appeals opinion, that 7 Mr. Zabin's success was the foundation of the 8 ultimate settlement and that his efforts following 9 the completion of the trial at issue contributed to 10 the ultimate result. Correct?
11 THE WITNESS: Yes.
12 THE SPECIAL MASTER: That was the basis
13 of your testimony as to the basis of his award; that 14 the award should recognize the value of his 15 contribution to the ultimate recovery of his client,
16 correct?
17 THE WITNESS: Yes.
18 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or his former
19 client maybe. Is that correct?
20 THE WITNESS: Yes.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And the jury
22 apparently agreed with you --
23 THE WITNESS: Yeah.
24 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- because they

Page 65

1 awarded him a million ten thousand dollars. Right?
2 That's close to 40 percent.
3 I didn't do the math but something like
4 that, right?
5 THE WITNESS: Yeah, I didn't check on it
6 later, you know. I mean --
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So is it fair to
8 say that your testimony in this case, the Zabin
9 case, supported the award to Mr. Zabin as a result
10 of the value of his contribution to the result of 11 the case?
12 THE WITNESS: Yes, that was the initial 13 amount. Remembering that later it comes up to about 14 8 or 9 million.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Understand. Let me
16 ask the question again maybe a little sharper,
17 clearer, okay?
18 Is it accurate to say that your 19 testimony in the Zabin case was that Mr. Zabin was 20 entitled to this fee of 40 percent as a result of 21 the value that he contributed to the ultimate award
22 in the case?
23 THE WITNESS: Yes.
24 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Thank you.

Page 66

1 BY MR. SINNOTT:
2 Q. All right. Now, Attorney Sarrouf, do you
3 have any experience in class actions involving 4 securities?
5 A. Other than the Patriots case?
6 Q. Yeah, other than that.
7 A. No.
8 Q. And do you have, other than the Patriots
9 case which might arguably fall into this, any 10 experience in class actions involving financial 11 fraud?
12 A. I don't clearly remember. I think I was an 13 expert. The case never got very -- got settled
14 rather quickly. Involving a bank matter concerning 15 -- no, it wasn't a bank.
16 I think it had to do with -- the firm is 17 no longer -- Tucker Anthony & RL Day. They are no
18 longer in existence. I know I was brought in as an 19 expert in the matter. I think it was Gordon Dugan
20 that had hired me.
21 But I think I gave a deposition, and
22 then soon thereafter everything got settled.
23 Q. All right.
24 A. That's the only time I think that I -- and I

Page 67

1 know it had to do with a trust and the investments
2 in that trust.
3 Q. And what was the gist of your expert
4 testimony, if you recall?
5 A. The extent to which a trustee and in my
6 opinion that -- I forget what it was in that
7 particular situation -- their responsibilities to 8 the monitoring of investments on behalf of the 9 beneficiaries.
10 Q. All right, sir. Have you ever been paid,
11 received a referral fee in a class action matter in 12 which you did not perform any substantive work?
13 A. I don't know what you really mean by 14 substantive. In each instance in which we have 15 referred the case over we have gathered the 16 medicals. To the extent that there were physician
17 reports that we felt were appropriate and necessary,
18 we always obtained those and then usually put 19 everything together in a package and sent them
20 along.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So you did the --
22 is it accurate to say you did the initial 23 preparation of the case?
24 THE WITNESS: To the extent that we

Page 68

1 thought the matters and the material that we did
2 gather would be supportive of the claim, then we
3 would send it along to the class counsel.
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Did you also do any
5 valuation of the case --
6 THE WITNESS: No.
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- of some sort?
8 THE WITNESS: No. We couldn't tell -- I
9 didn't have the experience. That's why I would send 10 it over is that those lawyers have a better
11 understanding, especially after they gather whatever
12 information they need as to the loss and what the 13 claim was worth.
14 I think, I suppose, in some of those 15 instances you have limited funds, and you have to 16 appropriately percentage what the clients would 17 receive. I left all of that to the class counsels.
18 But we did always gather our information, send it
19 in.
20 BY MR. SINNOTT:
21 Q. And typically how many plaintiffs were you
22 representing in these referral cases?
23 MS. LUKEY: You mean the class action?
24 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yes.

Page 69

1 MS. LUKEY: Referral of the class
2 actions?
3 MR. SINNOTT: Yes.
4 A. The ones that I -- you know, my son takes
5 over most of this stuff now, not me. I would say
6 maybe 20, 30.
7 Q. In a typical --
8 A. -- referrals.
9 Q. -- case you represent 20, 30 persons?
10 A. Yeah. Some of them are gone now, but in the 11 very beginning I think we put 'em altogether over 12 the years, there would be that much. Maybe more.
13 Q. All right. So in an individual class action
14 referral you're already representing 20 or 30
15 parties, correct?
16 A. Yeah.
17 Q. All right. And is it fair to say that those 18 20 or 30 plaintiffs, or however many there were 19 whose case you were referring, knew that you were 20 going to receive a payment for this referral?
21 A. I'd -- that I would receive back from --
22 yes, I think I told them, and sometimes I just gave 23 them the money that I had as a referral 'cause some 24 of them were -- I know one in particular is a widow.

Page 70

1 We still get a little from her. And whatever we get
2 we send it along. It's not fair.
3 Q. Aside from any award to the class, these 4 plaintiffs knew that you were going to receive a fee
5 for your referral, correct?
6 A. I don't think I ever sat down with my client
7 and said I'm going to get a fee. I developed with 8 most of these people a personal relationship, and I
9 say we'll do the very best, and we're sending this 10 off to the people now that are -- and you'll get -- 11 you'll get a distribution.
12 Q. But you --
13 A. And I know in one case why are you sending 14 this to me if it's for you. And I said because I
15 think you need it better than I do. That's all.
16 Q. Well, in some of those cases did you keep a 17 fee, or did you hand all of the money over to the 18 plaintiffs?
19 A. No, I think there were some that we did a 20 lot of work in the very beginning, and I think we 21 wanted to -- you know, we paid for hospital records.
22 We asked doctors to send us a report if they could
23 go back and find their records, would they please 24 send those, and whatever costs there were with that.

Page 71

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you know if --
2 A. I don't think of any other --
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Sorry.
4 A. Some of them I'm sure we did keep.
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you know if in 6 those cases the clients consented to the division of 7 fees that would be made under Rule 1.5(e) and signed
8 a writing agreeing to that?
9 THE WITNESS: Is the question did I
10 require them to sign a contingent fee agreement?
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Um, well, I'm
12 asking you the question under Rule 1.5(e) 'cause
13 where there is under Rule 1.5(e) -- we talked about 14 this earlier -- where there is a division of a fee
15 agreement between lawyers who are not in the same
16 firm, the client has to be notified of the division
17 of the fee and has to consent in writing.
18 So do you know if in those cases the 19 client consented in writing to the division of the 20 fee?
21 THE WITNESS: They would have signed the 22 forms that we had. Now --
23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And do those forms
24 include a consent to -- if you know, do those forms

Page 72

1 include a consent to the division of fees such that
2 you might be receiving a fee and that the client
3 then signed that agreement to the division of the 4 fee?
5 THE WITNESS: I'd have to go back and
6 look because I don't -- I can remember no client --
7 and I've had clients, some of them now 50 years --
8 ever -- anything I hand over to them, they don't
9 even bother to read it. They just sign it.
10 I've had long relationships with my 11 clients, especially -- although there aren't many 12 left anymore. I'm getting too old. They don't 13 always even understand when you try to explain to 14 them how the division is going to be.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: But --
16 THE WITNESS: They just say, look, I've 17 been coming here enough times, just take care of me.
18 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I understand, but
19 you understand the rule requires -- we talked about 20 this earlier --
21 THE WITNESS: Yes.
22 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- the rule
23 requires that the clients consent to a division of a
24 fee in writing, right?

Page 73

1 THE WITNESS: Yes, okay.
2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So can we assume
3 that in those cases in which you referred cases out
4 to the class lawyers, that at some point those
5 clients agreed to the division of the fee in writing
6 with your firm?
7 THE WITNESS: Yes, I think you can
8 assume that.
9 BY MR. SINNOTT:
10 Q. Now earlier -- just a moment ago you
11 testified that many of those clients don't want to 12 know. Does that make any difference?
13 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
14 A. Any difference to what?
15 Q. In whether or not you would feel obliged to 16 get their written consent.
17 A. If I understand the question --
18 Q. Yes, sir.
19 A. -- the concern in all cases that I have 20 handled, and most of the lawyers that I know, is the 21 welfare of their client. Many clients do not wish
22 to get into a legal argument. They're there because 23 they have some faith in you.
24 And you can explain things, and they're

Page 74

1 not going to understand it. They'll very quickly
2 shut you off and say, look, I've been coming here
3 enough times, take care of my wants. If I find a
4 difference, I'll come to you and say, look, this is
5 better. Is that fair enough? And I'll say yes.
6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Would you say to 7 them under those circumstances, Mr. Smith or 8 Mrs. Smith, I'm required by law to have you -- to 9 inform you that there's a possibility that there
10 will be a division of a fee which I will receive and 11 to have you agree to that in writing? Would you say
12 that to them?
13 When they say I trust you, I love you,
14 have been coming here for years, wouldn't you say to 15 them I appreciate that, but I'm required by law to 16 get your consent in writing?
17 THE WITNESS: They've never -- as soon
18 as I give it to them -- they don't even ask for 19 it -- they've already signed it.
20 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Oh, all right.
21 BY MR. SINNOTT:
22 Q. So it's not your testimony that a lawyer's
23 perception that a client would agree to such a 24 division of fees excuses the attorney from carrying

Page 75

1 out his duties under 1.5(e)?
2 A. The only time you will get a question is
3 does the -- does that referral come from my portion
4 of the recovery, and I always say and start it this
5 has nothing to do with the proportion that's
6 allotted to you in this matter.
7 This is a proportion that comes between 8 a lawyer and me. Or if I'm doing it and they send 9 it and the client hasn't already signed one, I tell
10 them that this is what you're going to sign. This 11 has nothing to do with what you ultimately will 12 receive. There'll be a fee. This is the amount of 13 the fee. You will pay for some of the expenses that 14 we're putting out for you until there's a recovery.
15 And I can tell you now if we don't get a 16 recovery you will not be required to pay any of 17 those expenses either. We make sure we tell them
18 that.
19 But at no time anything between me and 20 your counsel -- your original lawyer -- we have an 21 agreement, and part of what I may -- the fee that is 22 set forth in this agreement, part of it I may send 23 to him or her.
24 Q. And it's your testimony you tell every

Page 76

1 plaintiff client that you're referring in a class
2 action case this colloquy as to what might happen,
3 correct?
4 A. Yes.
5 Q. Now --
6 A. Because they don't understand what class
7 actions are. We're not dealing for the most part --
8 and it's the simple person that very often is the 9 injured party -- doesn't always want to know.
10 They've got enough problems of their own simply 11 trying to exist.
12 Q. But you tell them anyway?
13 A. I tell them that there is a requirement that 14 I tell them, and they say I don't want to hear about 15 it. It's not coming from me; is that right? I say,
16 that's right, it's not coming from you.
17 Q. But you scrupulously tell every client that 18 -- in such a case that a division of fees may result
19 in you getting money from the case, correct?
20 A. When I send it out to a --
21 Q. Yes, sir.
22 A. Yes.
23 Q. Okay. And you're not saying, am I correct, 24 that if an attorney perceives that that client whose

Page 77

1 case he's referring to another firm doesn't care;
2 that doesn't excuse him from going through that same
3 colloquy that you religiously go through, does it?
4 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
5 A. I just don't understand the question.
6 Q. Well, let me see if I can ask it another
7 way.
8 A practitioner is referring -- about to 9 refer a case to a national class action law firm,
10 and the practitioner knows that he may get a 11 substantial portion of the fee for himself for 12 having made that referral.
13 The practitioner considers telling his
14 client about this but then says, jeez, Mrs. Jones,
15 she doesn't care; every time I try to raise 16 something of legal nature with her, she says that's 17 all lawyer talk, I don't want to know about it so 18 I'm not going to tell her this because it's just 19 going to aggravate her, or she's just going to give 20 me the same line.
21 So the practitioner keeps his mouth
22 shut, and the practitioner pockets his portion of 23 the award, and Mrs. Jones gets her settlement amount
24 and doesn't know that the practitioner has received

Page 78

1 a fee from that case.
2 You're not saying that's appropriate,
3 are you?
4 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
5 A. That he receives a fee? And that's the 6 agreement he has with the other counsel?
7 Q. Yes. Without notifying his client.
8 A. Who's --
9 MS. LUKEY: The recipient or sender?
10 I'm confused, too.
11 Is the lawyer in your hypothetical the 12 recipient of the referral fee or the person sending 13 it out to someone else -- I'm sorry, the person
14 getting it in?
15 MR. SINNOTT: The practitioner's the 16 recipient of the referral fee.
17 MS. LUKEY: The recipient of the 18 referral fee.
19 (Pause.)
20 A. I --
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Maybe it would help
22 if I simplified the question and broke it down.
23 You've told us what your practice is,
24 and it sounds like your practice is that when you

Page 79

1 refer clients out to national class counsel, you go
2 through with them the fact and you have them sign --
3 you go through with them the fact that if there is 4 an award, that you may get a division of a fee, and 5 you tell them that.
6 And they may say I don't want to know;
7 this is lawyer talk, but you go through that with 8 them, and you have them sign, or they've already
9 signed when they get to you the consent.
10 THE WITNESS: Yeah, most of the times
11 they've already --
12 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- signed it.
13 THE WITNESS: -- signed it.
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think what
15 Mr. Sinnott is asking is it in your view appropriate
16 for a lawyer not to go through with the client what 17 you've described that you go through in explaining 18 that there will be a division of fees if there's an 19 award; that I may get a division of that fee and 20 that you have to consent to it in writing. I think
21 Mr. Sinnott's question is simply is it ever
22 appropriate not to go through that with the client,
23 even if the client says I don't want to know?
24 THE WITNESS: It may not be appropriate,

Page 80

1 but there has been no -- I don't know how I should
2 state it?
3 The client has never lost anything if
4 there is someone misses putting the thing together
5 in writing. The client hasn't been in any way at 6 risk of any further -- if our concern is the client,
7 if the person to whom most of these rules are set to 8 help, the client doesn't suffer anything.
9 And someone misses a -- maybe just 10 forgets to do it, that person shouldn't be --
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: We're talking about
12 the attorney, not the client now.
13 THE WITNESS: I know but the attorney --
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: It sounds like 15 you're explaining --
16 THE WITNESS: If the client hasn't been
17 damaged in any way, hasn't suffered any decreased
18 monies that would have been due to him and somehow
19 there is a paper glitch or whatever it may be that 20 occurs with regards to something being put in 21 writing but it doesn't harm the client, these rules
22 don't say you got to -- you got to in some way
23 penalize the lawyer.
24 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Not my question.

Page 81

1 Not Bill's question with all due respect,
2 Mr. Sarrouf.
3 MS. LUKEY: Objection. I think he
4 answered your question, your Honor.
5 MR. HEIMANN: I hate to pipe in here,
6 but I do, too.
7 MS. LUKEY: He answered your question.
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's start with
9 the rule.
10 THE WITNESS: I know the rule.
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, maybe --
12 maybe you did answer it.
13 Is your answer that if the client is not 14 harmed the lawyer does not have to comply with the 15 rule? Maybe you did answer it. Is that your 16 answer?
17 THE WITNESS: No, he should comply, but
18 if he fails to, he shouldn't be penalized for it
19 when the client has suffered no damage, no loss of 20 what her or his rights are.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does that relieve 22 the lawyer of the obligation to notify the client of 23 the division of fee and seek the client's consent in 24 writing?

Page 82

1 THE WITNESS: If he wants to get a
2 letter from someone that says, look, don't mess up
3 anymore, but you don't penalize him. That's the 4 rule here in Massachusetts.
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Mr. Sarrouf, I
6 think it would be helpful if we go through the rule.
7 THE WITNESS: Okay.
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Joan, could you put
9 1.5(e) in front of him? Just the rule.
10 MS. LUKEY: Yeah. I have current
11 versions the one that came into effect in 2015. Do
12 you want the one that came into effect --
13 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The current version
14 reflects Saggese.
15 MS. LUKEY: That came into effect in 16 2011.
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Correct.
18 MS. LUKEY: I don't have that one except 19 in -- well, in fact, I don't have that one. I think 20 that's substantially similar to 15.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: It is.
22 MS. LUKEY: The one before that is in 23 the footnote of Saggese. The one before March of 24 11. He has the one that's 15 --

Page 83

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Can we agree we can
2 use this as to the issues of notice to the client
3 and the need to seek consent from the client in
4 writing?
5 MS. LUKEY: Currently. Yes.
6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, but also the 7 Saggese rule.
8 MS. LUKEY: That's where I have a
9 problem. Saggese didn't actually get implemented
10 until March 15, 2011.
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I understand, but
12 it was -- after the rescript in 2005 it was the law.
13 Correct?
14 MS. LUKEY: Yes, although I think there
15 has been some -- I think there were some cases that 16 would suggest when the rule hasn't been amended, if 17 there's an inadvertent reliance on the existing 18 rule, that that's not sanctionable.
19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm just trying to 20 understand Mr. Sarrouf's --
21 MS. LUKEY: So he's got the 2015 version
22 in front of him which is substantially similar to 23 the one that came into effect in March 15, 2011.
24 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Correct. At least

Page 84

1 on the points I want to ask him about --
2 MS. LUKEY: I don't necessarily agree
3 that's the applicable rule to what happened here
4 because the client letter was signed before March
5 15, 2011, but I would agree that he can look at the 6 current one.
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. I
8 understand that.
9 The rule says, "A division of a fee
10 between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be
11 made only if the client is notified before or at the 12 time the client enters into a fee agreement for the 13 matter, that a division of fees will be made and 14 consents to the joint participation in writing."
15 It also says, "and the total fee is 16 reasonable," but we'll put that aside for the 17 moment.
18 So the question is if a lawyer -- if a
19 client comes into the lawyer and says I don't want
20 to know about it; I don't want to hear about it; you
21 just do whatever you're going to do, is it
22 appropriate for the lawyer not to notify the client
23 of the potential for the division fees and to seek 24 the client's consent in writing?

Page 85

1 (Pause.)
2 THE WITNESS: Is it appropriate? It's
3 not appropriate not to put it in writing.
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And to notify the
5 client of the possibility of a division of a fee,
6 yes?
7 THE WITNESS: It would be to notify the 8 client -- if he's going to sign the agreement, the 9 agreement ought to have in it that there will be a
10 division of the fee.
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And that will serve
12 as notice to the client?
13 THE WITNESS: Notice to the client, and 14 most likely you talked about it. And most clients
15 who certainly come from someone that they've been 16 dealing with as their -- as their family lawyer or 17 whatever know that there's going to be -- his family
18 lawyer's going to be taken care of from the fee, not 19 from anything else. Most clients come into you
20 knowing that.
21 But you're insisting that it's got to be 22 on paper and that if somehow it isn't on paper that 23 the lawyer doesn't get anything.
24 THE SPECIAL MASTER: We don't know that.

Page 86

1 That's a different question.
2 That's a question of what happens if
3 there's an objection to the fee, if somebody raises
4 an objection, that's a different question.
5 THE WITNESS: And it's a different
6 matter because the objection, if there is an
7 objection, will be something that goes back to --
8 that is the plaintiff -- the client takes up and 9 becomes a plaintiff against the lawyer.
10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or if there's an 11 objection in a class action by an objector.
12 THE WITNESS: If there's a client in a 13 class action and the objection comes from the 14 client, that's appropriate.
15 But if it's coming from someone other
16 than the client, it's not appropriate.
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's an 18 astounding statement.
19 MS. LUKEY: Objection, your Honor. It's 20 not astounding at all.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just a minute,
22 Joan. Whether the objection is appropriate or not 23 would be decided by the judge.
24 THE WITNESS: Yes.

Page 87

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: There are
2 objections in class actions all the time. Some are
3 not founded at all, and some are found to be well
4 founded.
5 The objections may come from people on
6 behalf of class members including lawyers where
7 absent class members hire lawyers and those lawyers
8 come in and make objections to the judge about a
9 settlement.
10 MS. LUKEY: But your question assumed --
11 I'm sorry -- was under 1.5(e), and that's not 12 established at all --
13 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Objectors can
14 object to anything.
15 MS. LUKEY: I understand that. But it's 16 not under 1.5(e). It's under Rule 23.
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, you would 18 also look to any governing rules. We don't have to 19 debate this.
20 My only point is that these issues can
21 be brought to a Court in any number of forms, don't 22 have to be necessarily brought by the client. They 23 could be brought by the client, but they don't have 24 to be.

Page 88

1 THE WITNESS: Well, isn't it brought by
2 -- to the Court when there has been harm to the 3 party? The plaintiff?
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Or to the class.
5 THE WITNESS: And there hasn't -- I mean
6 as I understand this matter, a client in this
7 instance has said I have no objections.
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The class
9 representative have said that.
10 THE WITNESS: Yes. And he -- he was the 11 plaintiff, was he not? Or he speaks for the 12 plaintiff.
13 THE SPECIAL MASTER: A judge's
14 obligation is to the class, not just the class
15 representative. We can debate this, but the judge's
16 obligation is as a fiduciary to the class.
17 Some courts have referred to this as a
18 gatekeeper. Other courts have referred to this as a 19 fiduciary, but the judge's obligation in ensuring 20 the appropriateness of a settlement and the 21 appropriateness of the fees paid to lawyers under 22 the settlement is an obligation that the Court has 23 to the class.
24 THE WITNESS: Does that require that

Page 89

1 every member of the class undertakes to vote on the
2 matter?
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, they -- they
4 may opt out if they don't like the settlement, but 5 -- at least in some classes.
6 Look, this is a long discussion, and
7 it's involved, but it's a very real discussion about 8 the issues here. And that is one of the issues is 9 what is the role that the Court has to oversee and 10 be a fiduciary to class members in approving a
11 settlement and making an award of fees.
12 That's one of the issues that are in 13 this case. Bill, go ahead.
14 BY MR. SINNOTT:
15 Q. Counsel, you have a predominantly contingent
16 practice, correct?
17 A. It is for the most part.
18 Q. And, you know, typically a client will bring 19 you their case, and you'll say, all right, we're 20 willing to take this on a contingent basis, and my 21 fee will be one third of any recovery.
22 Now that client has the right to say
23 jeez, Camille, sounds great, really want to have you
24 on board, but I'll only hire you if you agree to 25

1 percent of the recovery.
2 And that's something that clients do on
3 occasion, isn't it?
4 A. Yes.
5 Q. Why is the client whose case is being
6 referred to that major class action firm not
7 entitled to that same ability to say to you, no, I
8 don't want you getting that referral fee; or if you
9 get that referral fee, I want a portion of it?
10 So it's not all about, you know, no harm
11 to the client in the perception of the attorney.
12 The client has rights to be informed and to act on 13 that information, doesn't she?
14 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
15 MR. HEIMANN: I object to that multiple
16 compound. There's about five questions there.
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think it is,
18 Bill.
19 MR. SINNOTT: It is, it is but -- I got 20 carried away.
21 BY MR. SINNOTT:
22 Q. Excuse me.
23 A. It's all right.
24 Q. Isn't that client in a class action referral

Page 91

1 situation entitled to that same prerogative as the 2 person that walks in off the street and hires you on
3 a contingent basis?
4 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
5 A. Well, I think that when they join the class
6 they are authorizing whoever's representing the 7 class to proceed. Wouldn't that be the case?
8 Now if it's going to be -- if you got a
9 class of 300,000 but you don't have -- does each
10 person have the right to negotiate what the fee is 11 going to be? How do you proceed with something like
12 that?
13 Q. Well, let me just back up and ask you the 14 same question.
15 Doesn't that client have that same
16 prerogative to bargain --
17 A. Whoever is the representative of the class
18 certainly has the right to bargain.
19 Q. All right. And there's nothing that you've 20 said, is there, that obviates Rule 1.5(e)? I mean
21 that's the rule, correct?
22 MS. LUKEY: Objection. We'll stipulate
23 that that's the rule.
24 MR. SINNOTT: Right.

Page 92

1 MS. LUKEY: Is that the question?
2 Q. You don't think that there's -- strike that.
3 Strike it.
4 MR. SINNOTT: Let me move on, unless you
5 have something else on this, judge.
6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: No.
7 MR. SINNOTT: I looked at my watch a
8 second ago.
9 THE SPECIAL MASTER: It's quarter of 11.
10 Are you doing okay, Mr. Sarrouf?
11 THE WITNESS: I am.
12 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you need a
13 break? You've been going for two hours.
14 MS. LUKEY: Your texts have been dinging
15 I think. Are those yours? I want to make sure it's 16 not Joyce. Do you have a phone? I thought it was 17 coming from you. It may have been coming from down
18 there.
19 MR. KELLY: Not me. I turned my off.
20 MS. LUKEY: Are you okay?
21 (Pause.)
22 (Off the record.)
23 MR. SINNOTT: Joan, do you want to take 24 five?

Page 93

1 MS. LUKEY: It's fine with me.
2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: We're okay. We're
3 asking Mr. Sarrouf --
4 MS. LUKEY: Are you okay?
5 THE WITNESS: No, let's go. Let's see
6 if we can get it done by 1:30.
7 MS. LUKEY: They know.
8 MR. SINNOTT: If we could, madam court
9 reporter, have Mr. Sarrouf's CV marked as an 10 exhibit, that would be Exhibit 1 for this
11 deposition.
12 (Exhibit 1 marked
13 for identification.)
14 BY MR. SINNOTT:
15 Q. So for the record, Attorney Sarrouf's CV has 16 been marked as Exhibit 1.
17 Counsel, you've been retained to provide 18 expert services in this case, correct?
19 A. I have.
20 Q. And what's your rate of compensation
21 currently?
22 A. I think it was 750 an hour. Seven hundred
23 and fifty.
24 MS. LUKEY: Not $7.50? I was hoping.

Page 94

1 MR. SINNOTT: I would have advocated for
2 a raise if it was $7.50.
3 Q. And how many hours do you estimate you've
4 worked on this case so far?
5 A. I think initially it was maybe 14 hours or 6 something like that. It was -- I think the only
7 bill I've sent out was for $10,750, something like
8 that.
9 Q. How many -- up to --
10 A. I haven't billed at all for -- since that
11 time.
12 Q. Okay. So how much additional -- how many 13 additional hours do you think you've worked since
14 you submitted that bill?
15 A. Part of it is going to depend how long I'm 16 here, I suppose. Up to now, I would think -- let's
17 see. Probably another seven to ten hours. I don't
18 know.
19 Q. All right. So approximately --
20 A. I'm not very good -- I'm sure I don't get it
21 all down 'cause I don't...
22 Q. Okay.
23 A. I'm old fashioned. A lot of times in the 24 old days when it wasn't going to be a contingencies,

Page 95

1 you said 5,000, 10,000, whatever it was going to be.
2 You didn't worry about, you know, keeping time.
3 Q. It's one of the nice things about a
4 contingent practice, isn't it?
5 A. Yep.
6 Q. So $10,000 you've billed, and beyond that
7 you believe seven to ten additional hours?
8 A. I would think about that.
9 Q. All right. And if I could direct your 10 attention to your declaration.
11 MR. SINNOTT: And if we could provide a
12 copy for the court reporter. I'm going to ask
13 Paulette mark this as Exhibit 2.
14 (Exhibit 2 marked
15 for identification.)
16 Q. Let me direct your attention, if I might --
17 MR. SINNOTT: Paulette, are you ready?
18 THE REPORTER: I'm all set. Thanks.
19 Q. -- to paragraph 9. And that's page 4. And 20 just to read it out loud.
21 In analyzing these issues -- under the 22 heading of summary of facts relevant to opinions.
23 Number 9. "In analyzing these issues,
24 I've discussed the case with the counsel who

Page 96

1 retained me and reviewed certain documents produced
2 in this case as well as the applicable law and
3 secondary sources relevant to my opinion. I
4 understand and assume the accuracy of the following
5 background facts relevant to the opinions I offer."
6 When you say you reviewed certain
7 documents produced in this case, what are you
8 referring to?
9 A. A pile --
10 Q. Okay.
11 A. -- of documents that were provided that I
12 went through.
13 Q. Okay.
14 A. And then asked questions.
15 Q. Can you identify what those documents were?
16 A. Oh, boy. There were copies of --
17 Q. Say that again. Sorry, sir?
18 A. I think copies of retainer agreements.
19 There were -- golly.
20 MS. LUKEY: Bill, I think you're 21 entitled if you want us to do that -- because you
22 did it for your expert, I think you're entitled to 23 have -- I didn't compile the materials; Justin did
24 -- but to have us pull those together in a format

Page 97

1 and provide those --
2 MR. SINNOTT: Let me just see whether he
3 recalls and --
4 MS. LUKEY: Okay. Well, if you decide
5 you want that, let me know.
6 MR. HEIMANN: Well, I don't agree with 7 your statement. Sorry. Professor Gillers did not 8 provide us with a comprehensive list of the 9 materials he reviewed as far as I know.
10 MS. LUKEY: I thought that -- they gave
11 us the exhibits which I understood was everything --
12 MR. HEIMANN: No, it was not. Not even 13 close.
14 MS. LUKEY: Oh, if that's accurate, then
15 I withdraw what I so woefully suggested.
16 MR. SINNOTT: Thank you for trying to be 17 helpful.
18 BY MR. SINNOTT:
19 Q. So what do you recall having looked at with 20 respect to the documents?
21 A. The agreements. There were -- I have the 22 declaration of George Hopkins. I think the proposal
23 that was initially made by the two firms back in -- 24 what was it? -- December or -- 2008 was it I think?

Page 98

1 MS. LUKEY: Yep.
2 A. And then the agreement that was entered
3 into, I think, on the 29th of December of 2008.
4 There were documents that I think were introduced.
5 There were the negotiations between the various 6 counsel, the three customer, and then I think the 7 others were the ERISA documents. There were a few
8 of those.
9 Then I had a copy of -- no, that's
10 not...
11 THE WITNESS: This is yours, right?
12 MS. LUKEY: Yeah, this one's mine.
13 THE WITNESS: Let me pull mine.
14 A. I received a copy of the response by Labaton
15 to special master's request for supplemental 16 submissions. I received the ethical report for 17 special master, Judge Rosen, by Professor Gillers.
18 I pulled a copy of the Rules of 19 Professional Conduct 7.2. All the other papers are 20 back in the office so...
21 Q. All right. Now let me just -- without going
22 into each of those seven or eight --
23 A. Then there were a lot of questions and 24 answers that I had with counsel.

Page 99

1 Q. Okay. So let me back you up then.
2 So initially you received a package; is
3 that correct?
4 A. Yes.
5 Q. And was it in that binder in front of you?
6 A. This (indicating)?
7 Q. Yes, sir.
8 A. No, this came later.
9 Q. Okay.
10 A. Initially what came was an explanation of 11 what was going on. And then I -- then there was a
12 phone call I had with Attorney Lukey.
13 Then I had her assistant was Attorney
14 Justin Wolosz, and I had discussions with him. And 15 I tried to keep a -- I had questions; I wanted
16 answers. Back and forth until we worked through 17 what I thought was a pretty good understanding of 18 what this matter was about.
19 And then I began to develop my opinions
20 of what were the issues, and I had some difficulty
21 in understanding the role of all of the number of 22 counsel that were involved and where different
23 things occurred. And then I made a few phone calls.
24 I --

Page 100

1 Q. When you say you made a few phone calls, who
2 did you call?
3 A. Well, I brought in Arnie Rosenfeld, and we
4 sat down and discussed the matter at length when I
5 learned that -- or when we were advised that the 6 professor was going to render an opinion, I asked
7 Arnie if he knew him, and Arnie did.
8 And I think Arnie knows his wife as 9 well. She's chairman of a committee of the ABA.
10 And Arnie had, you know, interchange with both of 11 them I guess from time to time.
12 I spoke to certain lawyers who had 13 matters with the Labaton, and I understood that they 14 were -- that that was a fine firm. And I think I
15 had learned that they had some fellows of the 16 American College which I inquired about.
17 And then the rest of it I think were 18 just exchanges that I had with the counsel who 19 retained me.
20 Q. Now in formulating your opinions in the 21 case, did you consult with other people?
22 A. I would from time to time because I have 23 great respect for Arnie Rosenfeld. He'd been bar 24 counsel here for many, many years, one of the very

Page 101

1 best. And he's a dear friend. He's in the office
2 with me. I did with him.
3 Q. And he helped you with your opinions?
4 A. He helped me understand some of the matters
5 that we thought might be critical, and then I
6 discussed other matters with Joan and with her
7 assistant, Justin.
8 Q. All right, thank you.
9 In the course of reviewing documents and 10 the documents you listed, I notice you didn't
11 mention the Damon Chargois deposition. Were you
12 ever shown that?
13 A. Shown the deposition --
14 Q. Yes, sir. Of Mr. Chargois.
15 A. -- itself? No.
16 Q. And outside of the facts that you cite in 17 your declaration, did you receive any other
18 documents or information? Let me put it another
19 way.
20 Outside of the facts that are cited
21 here, were there any other resources or references
22 that you did not cite in your report?
23 A. I don't think so. Of course, you know, this 24 is in a report that was -- what's the date of this

Page 102

1 thing?
2 (Pause.)
3 A. October of 2017. And, you know, there have 4 been a lot that has happened since -- since then.
5 Q. When did you first see the George Hopkins'
6 declaration?
7 A. I'm not --
8 (Pause.)
9 MS. LUKEY: I think the date's on the 10 last page, Camille.
11 THE WITNESS: On the last page?
12 MS. LUKEY: The last page I think. Is 13 it there?
14 THE WITNESS: Oh, that's the 15th.
15 A. When I got back here, I think the first time
16 I would have seen it was Monday.
17 Q. All right. So this is the most recent 18 Hopkins declaration that was signed by him on March 19 15th, correct?
20 A. Is that? Yes.
21 Q. And --
22 A. Yeah, that's the first -- the first time I
23 saw this was Monday afternoon.
24 Q. Okay.

Page 103

1 A. But I had been -- I don't know if I received
2 a call while we were traveling back from Florida.
3 We left on the 15th.
4 Q. Okay. But that's the first time that you
5 saw it?
6 A. Yes.
7 Q. All right. And what significance did you
8 attach to that document?
9 A. Insofar as the agreement of the client
10 without any objection to the relationship between 11 the firms, I think it's vital.
12 Q. You think it's vital?
13 A. Yes.
14 Q. But it wasn't --
15 A. 'Cause this is the client speaking as far as 16 I'm concerned.
17 Q. It wasn't vital enough for you to have not 18 previously issued opinions in the fall of 2017,
19 correct?
20 MS. LUKEY: Objection. It didn't exist
21 in the fall.
22 MR. SINNOTT: No. I'm saying --
23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's the 24 question.

Page 104

1 BY MR. SINNOTT:
2 Q. The question is that document was not in
3 existence when you issued your opinions in the fall
4 of 2017, was it?
5 A. The document wasn't, but I understood that
6 the substance of the document had been expressed
7 before I signed this.
8 Q. So you didn't need that declaration in order
9 to formulate your opinions?
10 A. It was provided to me that the client had 11 agreed that they had no objections to the matter.
12 Q. All right. In advance of this declaration
13 being drafted?
14 A. Of this declaration? Mine?
15 Q. No, of Mr. Hopkins' declaration.
16 A. Well, I understood there had been
17 conversations with Mr. Hopkins throughout the course
18 of the representation, and he was in full agreement
19 with the settlement and in full agreement with the 20 -- I believe the final agreed-upon fees to be 21 charged.
22 Q. Are you aware that he knew nothing of Damon
23 Chargois?
24 MS. LUKEY: Objection.

Page 105

1 A. That he didn't know Damon Chargois?
2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Didn't know he
3 existed.
4 MR. HEIMANN: I think you got to put a
5 timeline and not keep it open ended when he knew.
6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: You're right. His
7 deposition testimony was that he found out and 8 learned about Damon Chargois in the course of this 9 investigation.
10 (Telephone interruption.)
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Joan, I wouldn't
12 confiscate your phone.
13 MS. LUKEY: That wouldn't be your wife?
14 Could I take a moment? It's a Belmont exchange.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Why don't we give 16 Mr. Sarrouf a break. He's been sitting, by my 17 watch, for two-and-a-half hours.
18 MR. SINNOTT: I think he has more
19 endurance than all the rest of us.
20 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah, why don't we 21 take a break.
22 (A recess was taken.)
23 CONTINUED EXAMINATION BY MR. SINNOTT:
24 Q. Attorney Sarrouf, before the break I had

Page 106

1 asked you about Mr. Hopkins' declaration which was
2 signed on March 15th.
3 Do you recall that, sir?
4 A. Yes, sir.
5 Q. And you described it as vital.
6 Is it your testimony that that
7 declaration substituted for -- or satisfied the 8 requirement under 1.5(e) for a writing of consent by
9 the client?
10 A. I think it certainly satisfied the knowledge
11 of the plaintiff in the case and an acknowledgement
12 of as far as the client -- that is, the customer I
13 guess it is that's referred to -- was satisfied with 14 the result. And as our courts have held here in 15 Massachusetts, it's ultimately the responsibility --
16 these rules are to protect the client.
17 And since the referral amounts to other
18 lawyers were entirely out of the agreed-upon fees
19 they would receive and do not come from any -- in 20 any part from the customer or the client's funds,
21 that our -- the intent of our rules has been 22 complied with in Massachusetts, and the courts have
23 repeatedly stated that, especially in the Saggese
24 case. I know it well.

Page 107

1 Q. But, sir, my question was whether that
2 declaration constituted the notification and consent
3 required under 1.5(e). Did it?
4 A. I believe it does. In the final analysis of 5 the matter it does.
6 Q. And --
7 A. A lot of the matters were, I assume, oral
8 conversations that the client had with the lawyer in 9 this case, and now he put it in writing for you.
10 Q. When was the agreement between Arkansas or 11 ARTRS as you refer to them in your declaration and 12 the law firms?
13 A. Well, the first submission was I believe
14 December the 8th or in early December.
15 Q. Of what year?
16 A. I think it's way back. Was it 2008? I
17 believe so.
18 Q. It's not February 8, 2011?
19 MS. LUKEY: I think he's talking about a
20 different submission.
21 MR. SINNOTT: Okay.
22 BY MR. SINNOTT:
23 Q. What are you referring to, sir?
24 A. The initial submission to the client of

Page 108

1 their proposal to represent their interest in the
2 matter.
3 Q. And that was in 2008?
4 A. Yes.
5 Q. Approximately ten years ago?
6 A. Yes. Well, not quite but almost.
7 Q. Now 1.5(e) says, "A division of a fee
8 between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be
9 made only if the client is notified before or at the 10 time the client enters into a fee agreement for the 11 matter."
12 MS. LUKEY: Objection. Could I just 13 have a standing objection on the point I made
14 earlier about which 1.5(e) was in effect at the time
15 the engagement letter was entered?
16 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah.
17 MS. LUKEY: Thank you.
18 BY MR. SINNOTT:
19 Q. So, sir, you don't consider nine to ten
20 years ago to be before or at the time the client,
21 Arkansas, entered into the fee agreement, do you?
22 A. No. I believe they entered into the fee
23 agreement in December the 29th of two -- of 2008.
24 Q. I believe it was February 8th of 2011, but I

Page 109

1 may be wrong.
2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: We're talking about
3 two different agreements.
4 MS. LUKEY: Two different things. He's
5 talking about the panel monitoring, and you're 6 talking about the fee --
7 BY MR. SINNOTT:
8 Q. In any case, sir, those are not -- the 9 declaration of Mr. Hopkins cannot be considered
10 before or at the time the client enters into the fee
11 agreement, can it?
12 A. The client entered into the fee agreement --
13 I think George Hopkins was the representative, was 14 he not?
15 MS. LUKEY: I think he's asking about
16 this declaration. Is this one later than the fee
17 agreement, the new declaration?
18 THE WITNESS: Oh, this declaration?
19 A. Yes. It's November -- March -- March 15 of 20 this year.
21 Q. All right. So to the extent that you
22 consider that to be consent by Mr. Hopkins, that 23 consent certainly isn't before or at the time the 24 client enters into a fee agreement, is it?

Page 110

1 A. If you count this date, no. But if you look
2 at all of the statements that he makes, I think it
3 relates back to when this matter was entered into --
4 the agreement of representation back whenever it was
5 that they produced the final contract.
6 Q. Well, what if you were to learn that 7 Mr. Hopkins was never told about Damon Chargois and 8 his arrangement? Would that change your opinion?
9 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
10 A. No, it does not change -- it does not change
11 my opinion as rendered in this matter.
12 Q. But you testified that this declaration by 13 Mr. Hopkins approximately a week ago was vital to 14 your opinions, correct?
15 A. Oh, I don't think it was vital. I think it
16 -- I had it in writing what I understood to have 17 been what he has said all along.
18 Q. Even though he knew nothing about
19 Mr. Chargois?
20 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
21 Q. Until approximately September of 2017.
22 A. I don't know that, and I don't know that --
23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: That was his
24 testimony.

Page 111

1 MS. LUKEY: It's actually in the
2 declaration, too.
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah, and it's in 4 the declaration.
5 MS. LUKEY: As to when he knew about
6 Mr. Chargois.
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: As to when he knew
8 about Mr. Chargois. Thank you for reminding me.
9 MS. LUKEY: Simpler than looking for the 10 testimony.
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Right.
12 BY MR. SINNOTT:
13 Q. And as far as the documents beyond that and 14 the other documents that you mentioned, do you
15 recall seeing an e-mail dated April 23, 2013
16 sometimes referred to as the Dublin e-mail in this 17 case in which Labaton described -- in which it was 18 described that Labaton had an obligation to pay the 19 local counsel who assists Labaton in matters
20 involving Arkansas? Did you ever see that e-mail?
21 A. An e-mail?
22 Q. Yes, sir.
23 A. I have no memory of it.
24 Q. Okay.

Page 112

1 A. I may have. I just have no memory of it.
2 Q. Did you see a letter from November 22nd --
3 I'm sorry -- an e-mail, and I believe there was an
4 attached letter November 22, 2016 from Larry
5 Sucharow to David Goldsmith, Garrett Bradley, Eric
6 Belfi and Mr. Keller in which the following
7 statement appeared: Class co-counsel get one with 8 ERISA 10 percent off the top; Damon's percentage
9 also off the top. And then Sucharow says no reason
10 for ERISA to see Damon's split. They only need to 11 see their 10 percent and then split three ways.
12 Do you recall seeing that?
13 MS. LUKEY: Well, it's obviously hard to 14 do it without seeing the document. I'm not saying
15 you have to show it to him.
16 MR. SINNOTT: I'm happy to provide it.
17 MS. LUKEY: I'm just saying it may be 18 difficult.
19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Does that ring a
20 bell --
21 MS. LUKEY: Does that ring a bell?
22 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- as to anything
23 you've seen?
24 A. I know that there was an increase. That's

Page 113

1 the one that started -- I think the first agreement
2 was 9 percent, and then they moved it up to 10
3 percent.
4 Q. No, but you did see that document; is that
5 correct?
6 A. Yeah, I did.
7 Q. Okay. And --
8 A. And it explained who the three parties were 9 that contributed to the 10 percent from their
10 portion of the fees.
11 Q. Yes, but I don't believe that was in this 12 document. But would you like to see the document?
13 A. It's up to you. You're the interrogator.
14 Q. I'm just the examiner.
15 A. I see.
16 MR. HEIMANN: The witness is not going 17 to tell the interrogator how to conduct his 18 interrogation.
19 MS. LUKEY: Exactly.
20 MR. SINNOTT: Mark that as Exhibit 3.
21 MS. McEVOY: It's also Exhibit 42.
22 MR. SINNOTT: Yes, previous Exhibit 42.
23 And, for the record, this is TLF-SST 0022172 through 24 74 previously marked as Exhibit 42.

Page 114

1 (Exhibit 3 marked
2 for identification.)
3 BY MR. SINNOTT:
4 Q. So, counsel, have you seen this document
5 before?
6 A. I do not recall it.
7 Q. Thank you. We may come back to that later
8 on.
9 In Exhibit 2, your declaration,
10 paragraph 9 you also refer to secondary sources
11 relevant to your opinions.
12 Do you see that, sir?
13 A. Page 9?
14 MS. LUKEY: Paragraph 9.
15 Q. Paragraph 9, page 4. The first sentence --
16 end of the first sentence.
17 A. Yes, I see the statement.
18 Q. All right. And do you recall which
19 secondary sources you consulted?
20 A. No, but I think I asked at some -- somewhere
21 for --
22 (Pause.)
23 A. I think -- I think it was -- relating it
24 from time to time as I was drafting my initial

Page 115

1 report, I would call Justin and ask him if he could,
2 you know, look to something and just tell me if I'm
3 getting some things right as to dates I think were 4 important for me and the identity of the parties --
5 'cause there were so many -- and I would sometimes
6 go, wait a minute, which party are we talking about.
7 That's what I mean by that.
8 Q. So you're not referring to Mass. practice or 9 Newburg or class actions? When you refer to 10 secondary sources or secondary sources, you're 11 referring to Justin?
12 A. I'm referring to Justin; and, as you remind
13 me, there were a couple of matters that Arnie found
14 for me that I should read.
15 Q. Okay. All of us consider Justin to be a
16 secondary source --
17 MS. LUKEY: I consider him a primary
18 source personally.
19 Q. Sometimes the primary source.
20 But you're not referring to any 21 publications or practice guides or anything of that 22 nature, correct?
23 A. To the extent that Arnie may have been 24 looking at it -- as I say, Arnie Rosenberg --

Page 116

1 MS. LUKEY: Rosenfeld.
2 A. -- Rosenfeld, because we'd sit as I was
3 writing even matter of fact, and he'd -- you know,
4 he'd offer. I have a great respect, first of all,
5 for his experience especially as, you know, bar
6 counsel.
7 Q. And did Attorney Rosenfeld provide to you
8 legal framework for formulating your opinions?
9 A. No.
10 Q. All right. What did he do for you?
11 A. Answer my questions.
12 Q. What kinds of questions would you ask him?
13 A. I'd ask him if he had any -- do you recall
14 anything when you were bar counsel with regards to 15 certain -- which I thought similar issues.
16 And then most of it was in the review of 17 the professor's statement after we were provided
18 with it.
19 Q. Did you look at the local rules --
20 A. But that didn't have anything to do with it
21 because that came later. No, what I said about
22 Arnie was as I would write something, I wanted him
23 sort of to be my editor, and then I sent along --
24 and really in the final analysis, you know, I went

Page 117

1 back and forth with Justin 'til we got it. There
2 were other drafts. And Justin helped as well very
3 much so.
4 Q. What did Justin do for you with respect to 5 the drafts?
6 A. Well, when I was hired, I said that we were 7 short one secretary already, and you're going to --
8 you people are going to have to do a lot of this
9 stuff for me.
10 Q. All right.
11 A. We had one of our secretaries was out --
12 cancer.
13 Q. So Justin did some work for you, secretarial
14 work?
15 A. Well, the firm did it.
16 Q. All right. What else did they do?
17 A. I'd express opinions and ask him, you know,
18 if I've stated it right and stuff.
19 Q. So he helped you frame your opinions?
20 A. He helped. Joan helped. And then I just 21 had to review it in my own mind as to the -- what I
22 felt very comfortable in expressing, and on the 23 basis of my experience I could back up what I was 24 saying.

Page 118

1 Q. Did you or the firm -- by that I mean Justin 2 and Joan and others at the firm -- draft the
3 opinions in your declaration?
4 A. In my declaration?
5 Q. Yes, sir. The one we're looking at right
6 now.
7 A. This is a result of what I had submitted as
8 we went over these things.
9 Q. Yep. But who --
10 A. They --
11 Q. -- who first came up with these opinions?
12 A. Me.
13 Q. So you didn't just ratify what they had 14 drafted. You -- you were the, quote, President
15 Bush; you were the decider; you were the one who -- 16 A. Oh, absolutely. I'm not going to sign
17 something that I'm not.
18 Q. All right. And I'm not saying that you'd 19 sign something you weren't comfortable with, but did
20 you draft these opinions initially or did someone 21 else?
22 A. No, I drafted -- I stated the opinions
23 initially. In terms of how it got typed up and 24 whatnot, they did it for me because I did not have a

Page 119

1 secretary.
2 Q. So their assistance was strictly clerical?
3 A. Yes -- well, no. You know, they had a --
4 they're good lawyers. They knew a lot more I would
5 think than I had about the case 'cause they'd been
6 involved with it since it began.
7 So I wouldn't just call them
8 secretarial, no. They were most helpful in my 9 expressing -- in my reaching the expression of my 10 opinion that appears here.
11 Q. How so? Can you give me an example of that 12 interaction?
13 A. I would go back and forth with Justin 'cause
14 I know we were nearing a time when it was due. And 15 I'd yet -- he'd finish up or the secretary, she was 16 also helpful. Get something over to me. I'd go
17 through it. I'd scratch out certain things.
18 If I had a question about who this 19 person was or that person, I'd pick up, and Justin 20 would explain to me who they were. You know, the 21 ERISA people and then the -- all the different
22 parties that became involved. Those were questions
23 I sometimes wanted to make sure I had everybody
24 right.

Page 120

1 And then the format, I insisted on this
2 format.
3 Q. But their assistance beyond the clerical,
4 the secondary sources --
5 A. Yeah, because they knew a lot more than I
6 did.
7 Q. Okay. Did they --
8 A. And they answered my questions.
9 Q. Did you question them about the applicable
10 law?
11 A. I knew the applicable law in Massachusetts.
12 Q. All right. Did you consult any sources to 13 verify your knowledge of the applicable law?
14 A. Well, I went back and looked at some of my 15 own work when I was at the MBA. I looked up --
16 couldn't find it, but I knew the filing of the 17 motion in the supreme judicial court back in the 18 eighties.
19 Then I called a friend who was a party
20 to it, Mike Mone. He was very ill, and I didn't 21 really push it. But things like that.
22 I tried to be as -- especially with the 23 development of the rule through the years -- be as 24 accurate as I could be.

Page 121

1 Q. All right. Did you look at the local rules
2 for the Massachusetts Federal Court?
3 A. Yes, I -- we went to the federal to get 52
4 something I think that adopts the Massachusetts
5 rules.
6 Q. So you looked at that. Did you look at 7 federal common law at all?
8 A. I didn't look up any cases.
9 Q. All right. Are you familiar with the Agent
10 Orange case?
11 A. No.
12 Q. And --
13 A. Well, I'm familiar with it because of a dear
14 friend who was subjected to it in Vietnam.
15 Q. You're familiar with a victim, but you
16 didn't look that case up with respect to your 17 formulation of your opinions?
18 MR. HEIMANN: That's really vague.
19 There are so many Agent Oranges.
20 MS. LUKEY: That's vague. There's so
21 many Agent Orange. There's dozens.
22 MR. SINNOTT: Yeah, that's true.
23 A. Well, I have a son who's a marine beret.
24 Q. Let me just back up. Just for the record,

Page 122

1 in re Agent Orange case that we've been discussing
2 or that we discussed yesterday was a second circuit
3 case from 1985 in re Agent Orange 611 F Supp 1267
4 affirm 818 F.2d 187 in the second circuit.
5 But you're not familiar with that case,
6 correct?
7 A. No.
8 Q. I'm sorry, sir. I cut you off. Were you
9 about to add something?
10 A. No.
11 Q. Now in your declaration in the following
12 paragraph, paragraph 10, in that first sentence it
13 says: "In mid 2008 Arkansas..." -- and I'll stick
14 with that shorthand as I read through it --
15 "...issued a request for qualifications, an RFQ,
16 which invited firms to submit qualifications to 17 become additional securities monitoring counsel for 18 the retirement fund."
19 And then it goes on to say, Chargois &
20 Herron partner, Tim Herron, had previously
21 facilitated the introduction of Labaton partners to 22 certain officials in Arkansas who played a role with 23 respect to ARTRS or Arkansas.
24 Do you see that, sir?

Page 123

1 A. Yes, sir.
2 Q. Now are you aware that Chargois testified in 3 his deposition that Herron had told Chargois about
4 Hopkins' predecessor, Paul Doane, and that Chargois
5 then cold called him? Are you familiar with that 6 fact?
7 A. Yes.
8 Q. All right. And how are you familiar with
9 that?
10 A. I was told that that's what happened.
11 Q. All right. But you weren't shown Chargois'
12 deposition?
13 A. No, I don't believe I did.
14 Q. All right. So you're aware that Chargois &
15 Herron did not have a previous relationship with 16 Arkansas, are you not?
17 A. I don't understand the question.
18 Q. Did Arkansas have a prior relationship with 19 Chargois & Herron?
20 A. You mean on a different case? I don't know
21 that.
22 Q. All right. In any capacity?
23 A. I don't know.
24 Q. Then it goes on to say in 10 that the plan

Page 124

1 was that Labaton would serve as the monitoring
2 counsel and lead counsel on any litigation matters
3 and Chargois & Herron with its Arkansas connections
4 and presence would work with the client. Do you see
5 that?
6 A. Yes.
7 Q. Are you aware that Chargois & Herron did not
8 retain a local presence at anytime during the State
9 Street case after 2009 or 2010?
10 A. I knew that at some time they had abandoned
11 their Arkansas office, and I gather they -- I think
12 the other office is in Texas.
13 Q. Yes, sir. All right. So you were aware of 14 that?
15 A. Yes.
16 Q. All right. So you're aware that Arkansas --
17 that Chargois & Herron was not in a position to do
18 any local counsel work in Arkansas for Labaton,
19 correct?
20 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
21 A. Well, I was aware --
22 Q. After 2009 or 10.
23 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
24 A. I was aware that the relationship was

Page 125

1 between Mr. Hopkins and Labaton, and it continued
2 throughout the course of this.
3 Q. All right. And you've testified that you
4 were not aware that until you saw the declaration of 5 Mr. Hopkins that he did not know about Mr. Chargois,
6 correct?
7 A. I don't know what you mean by he did not
8 know of them. They submitted a joint proposal. So
9 the papers must have been there that included
10 Chargois as well.
11 Q. Well, and you saw -- and why do you say it 12 must have been there? Have you seen his name in 13 there?
14 A. No. I was advised that the initial
15 submission was a submission by both firms.
16 Q. Oh, the submission to Arkansas --
17 A. Yes.
18 Q. -- the RFQ.
19 A. Yes. So it must be in their records.
20 Q. All right. And that was knowledge as far as 21 you were concerned?
22 A. That was knowledge I assumed.
23 Q. Even though -- go ahead, sir.
24 A. And if in fact they did do it, they

Page 126

1 submitted it. There was a change-over -- I forget
 2 the papers I saw on that -- between -- it may have
 3 occurred with -- oh, it's Mr. Hopkins I think who 4 succeeded the previous person that was there.
 5 But the submission is to the
 6 institution, and that first submission included
 7 Chargois and Labaton.
 8 MR. SINNOTT: Go ahead, judge.
 9 THE SPECIAL MASTER: You understand that
 10 that submission dealt with the possibility that 11 Chargois & Herron would be included as monitoring
 12 counsel, not as a substantive lawyer in -- or local 13 counsel -- in cases? You understand that?
 14 THE WITNESS: Yes. As they submitted,
 15 both firms were identified.
 16 THE SPECIAL MASTER: As prospective
 17 monitoring counsels, right?
 18 THE WITNESS: 'Cause there has to be
 19 monitoring at the beginning, right?
 20 THE SPECIAL MASTER: But that this
 21 submission did not relate to a specific matter. You
 22 understand that?
 23 THE WITNESS: Yes.
 24 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And you also

Page 127

1 understand that the general counsel for Arkansas
 2 Teachers rejected in an e-mail or a letter
 3 Mr. Chargois' firm as monitoring counsel --
 4 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
 5 THE WITNESS: That they --
 6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: You understand
 7 that?
 8 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
 9 THE WITNESS: I didn't understand it as
 10 a rejection. I understood it as they wanted to sign
 11 a contract with one firm, and that firm was to be 12 Labaton.
 13 I did not -- and I don't know that there
 14 ever was a rejection. They just wanted to deal with 15 one.
 16 BY MR. SINNOTT:
 17 Q. Well, let me just quote Christa Clark's
 18 e-mail in part to Labaton.
 19 "Your firm may affiliate that firm or 20 use them as independent contractors if you deem..."
 21 -- and it says if; it should be it --
 22 "...appropriate on a case-by-case basis. There
 23 would be no requirement that you use them if it was 24 not a necessary and appropriate expense of a case."

Page 128

1 So that statement, does it not,
 2 indicates that essentially Labaton's as free to hire
 3 them if it's necessary and appropriate as anyone
 4 else, correct?
 5 A. Yes.
 6 Q. But it's your testimony that that
 7 constituted knowledge on the part of Arkansas as to 8 Damon Chargois' role or Chargois & Herron's role in 9 this case?
 10 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
 11 A. It signifies to me that it was up to Labaton
 12 to do what it thought best in the representation of 13 Arkansas retirement. And I gather that they did in 14 fact maintain Chargois in some form.
 15 Q. That's your conclusion?
 16 A. Yes, that is my conclusion.
 17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me -- let me
 18 put a finer point on it.
 19 Is it your testimony that that complies
 20 with the requirements of Rule 1.5(e)?
 21 THE WITNESS: I don't see a -- let me
 22 put it this way. There's no violation of that rule.
 23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Not my question,
 24 Mr. Sarrouf. I'm sorry.

Page 129

1 THE WITNESS: Well, it's the violation
 2 of the rule that we're talking about.
 3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Mr. Sarrouf, please
 4 answer my question.
 5 THE WITNESS: I will.
 6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Please.
 7 THE WITNESS: Yes.
 8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The question is is
 9 it your testimony that that complies with Rule
 10 1.5(e)?
 11 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
 12 THE WITNESS: It's my testimony that
 13 with the intent of 1.5-2 --
 14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry?
 15 THE WITNESS: -- there is no violation
 16 of it.
 17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: 1.5-2?
 18 THE WITNESS: Is that what you asked me?
 19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: No, 1.5(e).
 20 MS. LUKEY: 1.5(e).
 21 THE WITNESS: 1.5(e).
 22 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry, did you
 23 finish your answer?
 24 THE WITNESS: Yes.

Page 130

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I didn't hear the
2 finish of it. Could you have that read back for me?
3 (Reporter read back.)
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is that the same as 5 saying that what you are relying upon there in the 6 joint application for the monitoring and Christa
7 Clark's response to that, that complies with the 8 requirements of Rule 1.5(e)?
9 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
10 THE WITNESS: In the form of the 11 response, I do not believe there's been a violation
12 of the rule.
13 THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. Let's
14 go through the rule. Okay?
15 THE WITNESS: Okay.
16 MS. LUKEY: Can I ask a question? Are 17 you asking him whether it complies for purposes of 18 State Street?
19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: For State Street.
20 MS. LUKEY: I'm not sure --
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: You're right, Joan.
22 I better rephrase my question.
23 Is it your testimony that what you are 24 referring to here -- and by that I mean the

Page 131

1 application for the joint application for the
2 monitoring and Christa Clark's letter, whether it's 3 characterized as a rejection of Chargois & Herron or 4 some other construction, complies with the 5 requirements of Rule 1.5(e) as it relates to 6 Chargois' receipt of a fee in the State Street case?
7 THE WITNESS: The answer's yes.
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's go through
9 the rule.
10 THE WITNESS: Okay.
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And I understand 12 that this is not the rule that was in effect at the 13 time --
14 MS. LUKEY: Standing objection.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And I'll give you
16 the standing objection.
17 But the Saggese case was in effect at 18 the time, and I think all of us can all agree that 19 Saggese at least governed the conduct of lawyers as 20 to referral fees.
21 Is there any objection to that?
22 Once the rescript was handed down in 23 2005.
24 MS. LUKEY: My point was that I think

Page 132

1 there's case law that suggests if it's not yet
2 incorporated in the rule that's a mitigating
3 factor --
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: It can be a
5 mitigating factor, but the question is whether or 6 not it complies with the rule, the Saggese rule or 7 the rule. Okay?
8 MR. HEIMANN: Can I just ask for a point
9 of clarification? I understand the question you're 10 asking about his opinion, but I didn't understand he 11 was expressing an opinion about the matter you're 12 questioning him in his report. He's not proposing
13 to testify about that.
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let's not have 15 testimony for him, please.
16 MR. HEIMANN: Well --
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I just want him to 18 answer my question, Richard.
19 MR. HEIMANN: Okay.
20 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Just answer my
21 question. That's all I want.
22 MR. HEIMANN: Okay, judge, but I just 23 want to make clear as I read the report, he's not 24 opining on the question you're asking.

Page 133

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: He's offered as an
2 expert.
3 MS. LUKEY: His opinions are a little
4 more narrower, your Honor.
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. My
6 question --
7 PHONE LINE CONFERENCE: The following
8 participant has entered the conference: Sarko.
9 THE SPECIAL MASTER: My question is is 10 it your view that the application for the monitoring
11 agreement coupled with Christa Clark's response to 12 it constitutes compliance with Saggese -- the rule
13 of the Saggese case and Rule 1.5(e) for purposes of 14 the fee that Mr. Chargois received in the State
15 Street case?
16 THE WITNESS: The fee Chargois was to 17 receive came, did it not, from the fee that was 18 awarded custom -- for the so-called customers'
19 attorneys, right?
20 It did not come from the customer. It
21 did not get paid by the --
22 THE SPECIAL MASTER: That's a much more
23 complicated question than you think. So my -- my 24 question to you is --

Page 134

1     THE WITNESS: It did not -- well, what I
2     want to make sure is I am assuming that that fee
3     came from the fee that was awarded Labaton, right?
4     The customers' counsel.
5     THE SPECIAL MASTER: That is something
6     that --
7     THE WITNESS: And that it did not come
8     from the customer. And then to the extent that that
9     is --
10    THE SPECIAL MASTER: This was a -- 11    THE WITNESS: What?
12    THE SPECIAL MASTER: This was a class
13    action.
14    THE WITNESS: Yep but --
15    THE SPECIAL MASTER: There was class
16    fees from which the attorneys' fees came from which 17    Mr. Chargois was paid.
18    THE WITNESS: From which, that's fine.
19    Yes, that's my understanding.
20    THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
21    With that understanding, do you believe
22    that the monitoring agreement and Christa Clark's
23    e-mail response to it constitutes compliance with 24    the Saggese case and compliance with Rule 1.5(e)

Page 135

1     for --
2     THE WITNESS: That is my --
3     THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- for purposes --
4     PHONE LINE CONFERENCE: The following
5     participant has entered the conference: Bob Lieff.
6     THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- for purposes of
7     the fee that Mr. Chargois received in the State
8     Street case?
9     THE WITNESS: That is in compliance with 10    the rule. The fee did not come from the client.
11    And that's what the Saggese case focuses on.
12    THE SPECIAL MASTER: You understand that
13    this is a class action?
14    THE WITNESS: I do understand that.
15    THE SPECIAL MASTER: And there is no fee
16    period until a judge awards a fee period.
17    THE WITNESS: But the judge did in this 18    instance.
19    THE SPECIAL MASTER: All right. The 20    judge was not advised of the Chargois relationship
21    at all --
22    THE WITNESS: I never provided a judge,
23    unless they asked, with that knowledge in any case
24    I've ever --

Page 136

1     MR. HEIMANN: Hey, guys on the phone.
2     THE SPECIAL MASTER: Guys on the
3     phone --
4     MR. SINNOTT: Hello on the phone?
5     MS. LUKEY: On the phone.
6     THE REPORTER: Off the record?
7     MR. HEIMANN: Let's go off the record.
8     (Off the record.)
9     THE SPECIAL MASTER: We're talking about
10    Rule 1.5(e). I now have in front of me the March 11    15, 2011 rule which looks to be substantially the 12    same as the rule we've been looking at.
13    MS. McEVOY: Judge, just give me a
14    sec --
15    MS. LUKEY: The previous one, if anyone
16    wants it, is footnoted in the Saggese case. That's 17    the only way I could find it.
18    THE SPECIAL MASTER: The question I was 19    going to ask is can we treat the rule that was 20    adopted March 15, 2011 as encompassing the Saggese
21    case?
22    MS. LUKEY: Yes. My understanding is 23    that that was what that rule was meant to do.
24    MS. McEVOY: Excuse me, judge.

Page 137

1     MS. LUKEY: Which one did you give him?
2     MS. McEVOY: Until 2011. So this is the
3     one --
4     THE SPECIAL MASTER: Oh, this is the one
5     until 2011.
6     MS. McEVOY: Let me print out the other
7     one.
8     MS. LUKEY: If you found that, can I get
9     a copy of it? Because all I have is a footnote.
10    Just e-mail it to me.
11    MS. McEVOY: Yeah, I think the 12    difficulty is that -- well, definitely, yes, I will
13    work on getting a copy for everybody.
14    (Pause.)
15    THE SPECIAL MASTER: I don't think
16    there's much difference in substance between the 17    March 15 Saggese rule -- March 15, 2011 Saggese rule
18    and the rule we've been using here. Is there?
19    MS. LUKEY: The March 11, 2015 rule and 20    the current rule are, as I understand it, extremely 21    close. I don't think there's a material difference.
22    The difference was the prior one didn't
23    have the writing requirement or the timing
24    requirement.

Page 138

1     THE SPECIAL MASTER: So I've been handed
2 a rule that says text of rule effective until March
3 15, 2011. There was an interim rule I think because 4 this one does have the writing requirement in it.
5     MS. LUKEY: If the -- that I don't -- my 6 understanding is until March 11 -- I'm sorry -- 'til
7 March 15, 2011 the rule was the one that Saggese was 8 addressing before they changed it --
9     THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah.
10    MS. LUKEY: -- with the text. I
11 couldn't find it.
12    THE SPECIAL MASTER: There must have 13 been an interim rule because -- let me just read it
14 into the record.
15    It is largely the Saggese rule. It's 16 got a little bit of a language difference, and it's 17 largely the rule that we've been talking about post
18 March 15th.
19    MS. LUKEY: You can read it because I
20 have not been able to get the text.
21    THE SPECIAL MASTER: Here it is -- I
22 think we just got it.
23    "A division of a fee, including a
24 referral fee, between lawyers who are not in the

Page 139

1 same firm may be made only if the client is notified
2 before or at the time the client enters into a fee
3 agreement for the matter that a division of fees
4 will be made and consents to the joint participation
5 in writing, and the total fee is reasonable."
6    MS. LUKEY: Yeah, I don't know when 7 writing came in because I thought that was not in
8 there until March 15, 2011.
9    THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, here. You'll 10 have to ask Elizabeth what the source is but --
11    MS. McEVOY: These are historical.
12    MS. LUKEY: I'll have to look. I
13 thought what the Saggese rule said which didn't have 14 the writing --
15    THE SPECIAL MASTER: That was in 2005.
16    MS. LUKEY: Right.
17    THE SPECIAL MASTER: And I think there
18 was -- Mr. Sarrouf may know this -- there was an 19 interim rule to cover Saggese until it was finalized
20 which was then adopted in December by the supreme
21 court --
22    MS. LUKEY: -- to be effective --
23    THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- to be effective
24 March 15th.

Page 140

1     At any rate, going to your question,
2 sir, or my question to you -- your answer -- that
3 the monitoring agreement complied -- the monitoring
4 agreement and Christa Clark's e-mail response
5 complied with the rule, let's go through each piece
6 of the rule.
7     THE WITNESS: Okay.
8     THE SPECIAL MASTER: And I'm going to 9 use the rule -- yeah. I'll use -- since the witness
10 has that in front of him, I'll use that rule because 11 it's substantially the same.
12    MS. LUKEY: Right.
13    THE SPECIAL MASTER: A division of a fee
14 between lawyers who are not in the same firm.
15 That's what we have here, correct?
16    THE WITNESS: Yes, it is.
17    THE SPECIAL MASTER: May be made only if 18 the client is notified before or at the time the 19 client enters into a fee agreement for the matter
20 that a division of fees will be made.
21    You're not trying to testify that this
22 was -- that the monitoring agreement and the Christa
23 Clark e-mail was for the matter that the division of 24 fees will be made, are you?

Page 141

1     THE WITNESS: What is the question now?
2 What is the question you're putting to me with
3 regards to that?
4     THE SPECIAL MASTER: Very simply,
5 whether or not the monitoring agreement and the 6 Christa Clark e-mail --
7     THE WITNESS: Yes?
8     THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- constitutes 9 compliance with the rule and specifically now the 10 notification requirement which requires that it be 11 entered into for the matter that the division of fee
12 will be made.
13    THE WITNESS: Yes?
14    THE SPECIAL MASTER: The matter that the 15 division of fee will be made would have to be the 16 State Street case?
17    THE WITNESS: Yes?
18    THE SPECIAL MASTER: Your view --
19    THE WITNESS: What you have --
20    THE SPECIAL MASTER: There was no State
21 Street case at that point.
22    THE WITNESS: There certainly was the 23 attempt to create one, right? They were there for 24 that purpose, were they not?

Page 142

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: No. They were
2 there to be considered as monitoring counsel --
3 THE WITNESS: Yes.
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- which is
5 different than acting as a lawyer in a class action
6 to represent a class representative.
7 THE WITNESS: But that was what was
8 ultimately going to happen was to bring such a case,
9 was it not?
10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The role of 11 monitoring -- are you aware that ATRS had, I
12 believe, five different monitoring counsel? Did you
13 know that?
14 THE WITNESS: No, I'm not aware of that.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The testimony -- I
16 think Mr. Hopkins testified that Labaton was I
17 believe the fifth monitoring counsel.
18 THE WITNESS: (Nods head.)
19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And that they were 20 -- the RFP -- you know what an RFP is?
21 THE WITNESS: Yes, I do. Request for
22 proposals. Yes.
23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The RFP that went 24 out, which was jointly applied to by Labaton and the

Page 143

1 Chargois & Herron firm, was for monitoring counsel.
2 THE WITNESS: Yes.
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So how could that
4 be an appropriate compliance for the division of the 5 fee that the client enters into for the matter that
6 the division of fee would be made?
7 THE WITNESS: What was the purpose of 8 the monitoring?
9 The monitoring purpose was, look, we
10 have a problem, and we want to recoup monies. You
11 monitor -- when you finish your monitoring, you then 12 enter into a lawsuit, do you not? The class action
13 was certified thereafter?
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The testimony was 15 that the role that monitoring counsel played was to 16 monitor the various investments the funds had to 17 ensure that there was compliance and to determine 18 whether or not the fund and its members were in any 19 way being cheated.
20 THE WITNESS: And they came to that
21 conclusion, did they not?
22 THE SPECIAL MASTER: You're saying that
23 that's the same as being entered into as a fee
24 agreement for the matter that a division of fees

Page 144

1 will be made?
2 THE WITNESS: Yes.
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. And are you
4 saying that Christa Clark's response, the e-mail
5 response, constitute consents -- consent to the 6 joint participation in writing?
7 THE WITNESS: And you're still talking
8 about a time period immediately after the joint 9 submission, right?
10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm talking
11 about --
12 THE WITNESS: I think that is --
13 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- to narrow it
14 down.
15 THE WITNESS: It is sufficient.
16 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Christa Clark's
17 e-mail was sufficient to constitute consent?
18 THE WITNESS: Yes.
19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: For the State
20 Street matter and the Chargois fee arrangement
21 itself?
22 THE WITNESS: With the subsequent
23 there's some other communications back and forth,
24 the answer is yes.

Page 145

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
2 BY MR. SINNOTT:
3 Q. All right. Counsel, let me direct your 4 attention to your declaration again and ask you to 5 go to paragraph 14.
6 The second sentence I believe or the
7 third after the parentheses reads: "Labaton
8 informed Lieff and Thornton that it had a
9 fee-sharing obligation to Chargois & Herron. All 10 three firms agreed to share the burden equally for 11 that obligation."
12 Do you see that, sir?
13 A. I do.
14 Q. What was your understanding as to what 15 information was provided by Labaton to Lieff and 16 Thornton regarding Chargois?
17 A. You mean beyond the fact that they felt they 18 had an obligation?
19 Q. Yes. What were the facts that were shared?
20 If you know of any.
21 A. I do not know, but I don't think it was 22 necessary for my expression as an expert in this
23 case.
24 Q. So you don't believe that the communications

Page 146

1 from Labaton to Lieff and Thornton were relevant as
2 to Labaton's obligations or their obligations?
3 A. No. My concern was was there any situation
4 in which the fee that would go to Chargois would
5 come from any part of the plaintiffs or their
6 clients' funds due them, and it did not.
7 Q. And with respect to that relationship,
8 that's the only thing that mattered as far as you
9 were concerned?
10 A. As far as the rule as I understand it and 11 the reasonings behind the rule, it is to protect the 12 plaintiff or the customer here. And the customer
13 was protected under these circumstances.
14 Q. And would those customers include the class
15 members?
16 A. It would include the retirement fund.
17 Q. All right.
18 A. The entire process of it.
19 Q. Were the class members protected?
20 A. You're talking about each member of the 21 teacher retirement program? I think each one was 22 protected --
23 Q. All right.
24 A. -- adequately represented by their -- by

Page 147

1 Mr. Hopkins who was their administrator.
2 Q. Now were you aware that Labaton and others
3 in the customer class represented to Judge Wolf that
4 they were representing the ERISA class as well?
5 MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
6 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
7 Q. Are you aware of that?
8 A. You mean subsequent to the agreement they 9 had reached with the ERISA attorneys?
10 Q. Prior to and subsequent.
11 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
12 A. I don't understand the question. I'm sorry.
13 Q. Would it make a difference in your opinion
14 if the customer class counsel had claimed that they 15 represented the ERISA class members?
16 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
17 MR. HEIMANN: Objection. There was no
18 ERISA class. There was no ERISA class counsel.
19 Q. ERISA class members.
20 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
21 Q. Would that make a difference to you?
22 A. No.
23 Q. And why not?
24 A. Because the concern here is the protection

Page 148

1 of the customer or here the agreement that had been
2 reached with the customer as to what the fee would
3 be.
4 Q. And you're limiting the customer to Arkansas
5 Retired Teachers Fund?
6 A. That's who they were representing.
7 Q. All right. And you're not -- your concern
8 is not with ERISA, correct?
9 A. I don't know what you mean by "my concern
10 with ERISA." ERISA --
11 Q. As far as protecting members.
12 A. Well, their lawyers had come to an agreement
13 in the initial I assume collaboration on what was 14 going to -- how they were going to handle this 15 matter, was it at 9 percent, sometime later they had 16 further discussions, and they moved it up to 10
17 percent. All the lawyers agreed to it.
18 They were operating within the confines
19 of what was provided to be the fee. And they shared
20 them properly with them.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Are you saying that 22 Arkansas Teachers Retirement System represented the 23 ERISA members as well and that Mr. Hopkins could 24 speak for the ERISA members?

Page 149

1 THE WITNESS: No. What I'm saying is
2 the ERISA lawyers had a right and a responsibility
3 to represent the ERISA clients that they had, and 4 they entered into negotiations with the other
5 lawyers as to how they were going to handle the
6 fees.
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So --
8 THE WITNESS: And it didn't apply to 9 either the ERISA clients, nor did it apply to the 10 Arkansas clients. That had already been determined.
11 THE SPECIAL MASTER: And determined by 12 the lawyers amongst themselves, yes?
13 THE WITNESS: Yes, as to their fees was 14 what was being distributed.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Mr. Sarrouf, you
16 understand there is no fee until the Court says
17 there is a fee? You understand that?
18 THE WITNESS: Well, I understand that
19 that is in finality, but when they were agreeing
20 with each other and discussing it with each other,
21 they had an understanding of what they were talking
22 about.
23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you think that 24 the ERISA lawyers were fully informed such that they

Page 150

1 could in the first instance agree to their fee and
2 in the second instance inform their ERISA clients
3 who were named plaintiffs in these two other
4 lawsuits that were consolidated for purposes of 5 discovery and mediation?
6 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
7 THE WITNESS: When they undertook their
8 negotiations, each representing their own clients, a 9 determination had been made, had it not, as to what 10 was going to be the subject matter of the 11 distributions between counsel. Isn't that correct?
12 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, that's a
13 question in the case as to what the ERISA -- as to 14 what the ERISA lawyers knew, when they knew it, what 15 they could inform their clients of, what they could 16 inform -- you may not know this, but there were 17 other actors in the settlement, the Department of 18 Labor, the Securities & Exchange Commission and the 19 Department of Justice.
20 THE WITNESS: Yep.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So a question in 22 the case is what the ERISA lawyers knew, when they 23 knew it and what they could inform their clients of 24 and also the Department of Labor which had a

Page 151

1 responsibility for overseeing the "ERISA-fied" funds
2 and plans.
3 THE WITNESS: But at that time everyone
4 knew what was the fees allocated to the 5 representatives of the Arkansas retirement, right?
6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, let's talk
7 about what "at that time" means.
8 At the time they negotiated their fee
9 they did not know of the existence of Mr. Chargois;
10 they did not know of the obligation to pay
11 Mr. Chargois some percentage of the ultimate fee;
12 they did not know that Mr. Chargois had a 13 long-standing arrangement with the Labaton firm to 14 receive a percentage of all fees that Labaton
15 received as lead counsel in which Arkansas was lead
16 plaintiff. They did not know any of those things.
17 And, by the way, Mr. Lieff testified he 18 didn't know either. He knew some of them I suppose,
19 but he did not -- he testified he did not know
20 either.
21 So at the time the fee was negotiated,
22 the ERISA lawyers did not know any of these things
23 and were not in a position to inform their clients.
24 Did you know that?

Page 152

1 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
2 THE WITNESS: All right. I know that.
3 Okay?
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. So how could
5 they have made a knowing decision on an appropriate
6 size of their fee, and how could they have informed
7 their clients, one of which was a trust, the others
8 of which as class representatives were individual
9 members of ERISA-fied pension plans -- if they 10 didn't know, how could they have informed their 11 clients?
12 MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
13 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay.
15 THE WITNESS: They did know the amount
16 that had been assigned to Labaton, right?
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, even that 18 they didn't know because the Court hadn't approved
19 it. But actually --
20 THE WITNESS: But in their discussions?
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think the facts
22 show that at the time that the ERISA lawyers made
23 their agreement for first the 9 percent, nobody knew
24 how much the fees were going to be.

Page 153

1 THE WITNESS: Okay.
2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: It was not at all
3 resolved. It wasn't even resolved between the 4 customer class lawyers.
5 My question to you is twofold, and I'll
6 ask it one at a time.
7 THE WITNESS: Okay.
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: How could the ERISA
9 lawyers have made a knowing decision as to what an 10 appropriate attorney fee was for them if they did
11 not know about the existence of a fee that was going 12 to be paid to Mr. Chargois who had never appeared in 13 the case and done no -- had done no work in the 14 case?
15 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
16 THE WITNESS: Because the amount of 17 money that was to go to Chargois only came from what 18 they knew --
19 PHONE LINE CONFERENCE: The following
20 participant has entered the conference.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry.
22 THE WITNESS: All right. Can I just
23 have that part read back?
24 (Reporter read back.)

Page 154

1 THE WITNESS: -- already was the amount
2 assigned through Labaton for the other two --
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Sir, there is
4 absolutely --
5 THE WITNESS: It's only coming from
6 Labaton, nobody else. So if they knew what was 7 coming to Labaton, it didn't matter what Labaton was 8 going to do with that money.
9 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm afraid, sir --
10 THE WITNESS: So far as it affects
11 anyone else in the case.
12 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Your answer is 13 assuming facts contrary to the evidence -- all of 14 the evidence in the case.
15 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
16 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The evidence in the 17 case is that at the time -- we're focusing only now
18 at the time the original ERISA agreement was made.
19 THE WITNESS: That's before they came to 20 the next -- from 9 to 10.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: To 10. But even at 22 that time -- even at that time there had been no
23 agreement as to how much the fee was going to be.
24 There had been no agreement that it was going to

Page 155

1 just come from Labaton.
2 In fact, the testimony is that at some
3 time in 2013 the customer class lawyers agreed to 4 share --
5 THE WITNESS: That's my understanding as
6 well.
7 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- the obligation
9 for Mr. Chargois as well.
10 MS. LUKEY: Wait 'til he finishes so I
11 can object.
12 THE WITNESS: Okay.
13 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So how could the 15 ERISA lawyers have made a knowing decision as to 16 whether or not their slice of the whole fee when 17 looked at in the context of the total fee of which 18 Mr. Chargois was going to get some piece was 19 reasonable?
20 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
21 THE WITNESS: Simply because the only
22 place it was coming from was from Labaton. And they 23 already knew or would know what was Labaton going to 24 get.

Page 156

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Okay. Let me ask
2 another question.
3 You would agree --
4 THE WITNESS: I hope.
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I hope. -- that
6 the ERISA lawyers had an obligation to their clients
7 to keep them informed, correct?
8 THE WITNESS: Absolutely.
9 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Absolutely. And
10 that would include, as set forth in Rule 1.5(e), the 11 division of fees made to the lawyers in the case,
12 correct?
13 THE WITNESS: No.
14 MS. LUKEY: No.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Who spoke for the 16 ERISA lawyers -- I'm sorry -- for the members of the 17 ERISA class?
18 THE WITNESS: Their lawyers.
19 MR. HEIMANN: Excuse me. Objection.
20 There is no ERISA class.
21 MS. LUKEY: There is no ERISA class.
22 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Fine. Who spoke
23 for the ERISA class members?
24 MR. HEIMANN: The class lawyers. I'm

Page 157

1 sorry. I apologize.
2 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Did you want to be
3 put under oath, Richard?
4 MR. HEIMANN: No, I just know the answer
5 to the question. I'm sorry. I -- I --
6 THE WITNESS: That would be my answer.
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not surprised
8 after hearing it which is the problem but --
9 THE WITNESS: I doubt very much --
10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- at any rate...
11 THE WITNESS: -- that anyone would speak
12 for any client except the lawyers.
13 THE SPECIAL MASTER: So who was the 14 class representative for the ERISA members of the 15 class?
16 THE WITNESS: I have no idea.
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Was Arkansas
18 Teachers the class representative for members of the 19 ERISA class?
20 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
21 MR. HEIMANN: There's no ERISA class,
22 judge. I mean really.
23 MS. McEVOY: The plan participants.
24 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The plan

Page 158

1 participants.
2 THE WITNESS: Were represented by
3 counsel, were they not?
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: They were.
5 THE WITNESS: And they were not the same
6 people who are the representatives for Arkansas,
7 were they?
8 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Well, I'd like your 9 view on whether or not Arkansas Teachers was the 10 representative for the ERISA -- named ERISA
11 representatives in the other two lawsuits and the 12 ERISA members of the settlement class.
13 MR. HEIMANN: Objection. Compound.
14 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Please answer the
16 question.
17 THE WITNESS: I can't.
18 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me break it
19 down for you.
20 We've agreed that the ERISA members of 21 the class had separate lawyers. Correct?
22 THE WITNESS: Yes.
23 MS. LUKEY: Actually --
24 MR. HEIMANN: That's not true.

Page 159

1 THE WITNESS: Well, they don't have a
2 class but whoever was representing --
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I said the
4 settlement class.
5 THE WITNESS: Okay.
6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: The ERISA members
7 of the class had separate lawyers, correct?
8 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
9 MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Correct?
11 MR. HEIMANN: Objection.
12 THE WITNESS: I don't know that as a
13 fact. I would assume that each party has a lawyer.
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Who was the class
15 representative for the ERISA members of the class?
16 THE WITNESS: I don't know.
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you believe that 18 Arkansas Teachers represented the ERISA members of 19 the class?
20 THE WITNESS: In what capacity?
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Do you believe that
22 Arkansas Teachers was the representative of the 23 ERISA members of the class for purposes of approving
24 a division of fees?

Page 160

1 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
2 THE WITNESS: At what juncture in the 3 process are we talking about? Is this after the 4 settlement had been agreed upon?
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: It could be after 6 the settlement was agreed upon. It could be at the 7 time the class was certified in August of 2016.
8 THE WITNESS: And they had filed their
9 appearance in the case?
10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: They had.
11 MR. HEIMANN: Who's the they? I'm
12 sorry.
13 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I assume by they 14 you meant the ERISA lawyers?
15 THE WITNESS: Yes.
16 THE SPECIAL MASTER: They had filed
17 appearances in both -- there had been three 18 different cases that had been consolidated for 19 mediation and discovery --
20 MR. HEIMANN: Your Honor, I don't think
21 that's true. I don't think there's any formal
22 consolidation of the ERISA case --
23 THE SPECIAL MASTER: There's a
24 consolidation order.

Page 161

1 MR. HEIMANN: If I'm mistaken, I'm
2 mistaken, but I don't believe that's the case.
3 THE SPECIAL MASTER: There's a
4 consolidation.
5 MR. HEIMANN: All right.
6 MS. LUKEY: I'm not sure that it's
7 relevant. I think technically the order may have 8 read only in terms of the pretrial discovery that 9 the mediation was absorbed.
10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Yeah, the pretrial
11 discovery.
12 MR. HEIMANN: Well, you know, pretrial
13 discovery is different from mediation.
14 MS. LUKEY: I don't think the mediation
15 was in the order, but I could be wrong.
16 MR. HEIMANN: Well, I've been told in no
17 uncertain terms that the cases were not consolidated
18 for mediation.
19 In fact, that's even been mentioned
20 indirectly --
21 MS. LUKEY: Right.
22 MR. HEIMANN: -- in your statement of 23 facts, but, if I'm wrong, I'm wrong.
24 THE SPECIAL MASTER: They were

Page 162

1 consolidated at least for purposes of discovery and
2 at least for purposes of pretrial.
3 At any rate --
4 THE WITNESS: I don't mean to interrupt,
5 but may I --
6 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm sorry?
7 THE WITNESS: May I make a phone call,
8 please?
9 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Sure. This would
10 be a good time to --
11 MS. LUKEY: -- take the lunch break?
12 THE SPECIAL MASTER: -- break for lunch.
13 (A lunch recess was taken.)
14 (Whereupon the proceedings
15 adjourned at 12:38 p.m.)

1 an advocate?
2 A. I never have.
3 Q. Have you ever made a written submission to 4 the board?
5 A. I never have.
6 Q. Did you research Board of Bar Overseers
7 decisions?
8 A. I did.
9 Q. Did you find any Board of Bar Overseers
10 decision that indicated that if written consent of 11 the client was not obtained under Rule 1.5(e) the 12 applicable rule would become 7.2?
13 A. Not an overseers' opinion, no, I did not.
14 Q. And are you aware, sir, that there's another
15 mechanism by which lawyers in Massachusetts can 16 obtain advisory opinions relating to ethics?
17 A. Yes, every state bar association provides
18 advisory opinions, and Massachusetts, does, too.
19 Q. Are you referring to the Massachusetts Bar
20 Association's advisory opinions?
21 A. Hm hm.
22 Q. Yes?
23 A. I don't know the name of the body that 24 provides advisory opinions.

Page 54

1 Q. Is there more than one body in
2 Massachusetts?
3 A. I do not know.
4 Q. Are you aware that both the Massachusetts
5 Bar Association and the Boston Bar Association
6 Ethics Committee provide advisory opinions to 7 lawyers?
8 A. Am I aware?
9 Q. Yes, sir.
10 A. I'm not sure as part of my consciousness I
11 would -- if you would ask me, I would assume that 12 they do.
13 Q. Did you search the advisory opinions of the 14 MBA and the BBA Ethics Committees?
15 A. I did.
16 Q. Did you find any opinion of the MBA or BBA
17 Ethics Committee that opined that in the event that 18 consent was not perfected under 1.5(e) the 19 applicable rule would become 7.2(b)?
20 A. No.
21 Q. How many hours did you spend researching the 22 Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, sir?
23 A. I could not quantify it.
24 Q. Can you give us a best estimate?

Page 55

1 A. No.
2 Q. In the course of that research did you find
3 any case, decision or opinion that says in the event
4 of a failure to perfect client consent under Rule
5 1.5(e), the analysis shifts to the advertising Rule
6 7.2(b)?
7 A. Are we limiting our discussion now to the 8 Massachusetts ethics opinions?
9 Q. No. We're talking about any case, any
10 opinion or any decision of the Board of Bar
11 Overseers interpreting Massachusetts Rule 1.5(e),
12 did you find any instance in which if the consent
13 was not perfected under 1.5(e) the analysis shifted
14 to Rule 7.2(b) the advertising rule?
15 A. The Saggese opinion cited in Illinois
16 Intermediate Appellate Court opinion says that if 17 the jurisdiction's division of fee rule is not
18 honored, then it simply becomes a payment for a
19 recommendation of a client.
20 Q. Did the Saggese case say anything at all
21 about Rule 7.2?
22 A. No.
23 Q. So what are you referring to?
24 I asked you whether there was a decision

Page 56

1 anywhere that indicated the failure to obtain client
2 consent caused the analysis to shift from 1.5(e) to
3 7.2(b) if 7.2(b) isn't mentioned in Saggese?
4 A. Of course, the problem with your question is
5 you're framing it in terms of a statement that 6 actually mentions the number 7.2(b) rather than the 7 concept that's involved.
8 Q. So you're saying that -- what is the concept
9 that you claim is mentioned in Saggese, sir, that 10 you say is the equivalent of 7.2(b)?
11 A. A lawyer can take himself out of 7.2(b) by 12 complying with 1.5(e). Otherwise, he's in 7.2(b).
13 That's syllogistic. That's what the rule says.
14 So the concept is if you don't do X,
15 then Y -- look, you want to shake your head at me
16 you can but...
17 Q. Please go ahead. We'll follow up.
18 A. All right. You either comply with 1.5(e) to 19 avoid the prohibition in Rule 7.2 or you don't. And 20 if you don't, you're within the prohibition of Rule
21 7.2.
22 Q. Can you cite me to any case, advisory
23 opinion or decision of the Board of Bar Overseers
24 that says the failure to comply with obtaining

Page 57

1 perfected consent from the client under 1.5(e) means
2 that you are governed by 7.2(b)?
3 A. I can't cite you to any if you're insistent
4 on the words or numbers 7.2(b) being in the opinion.
5 Q. That's correct, sir, I am insisting that you
6 tell me any case, decision, opinion, whatever you
7 want to call it, that supports your position that 8 the analysis is under Rule 7.2(b) if the lawyer or 9 law firms fail to perfect client consent under
10 1.5(e)?
11 A. Does your question ask me to assume that the 12 opinion or whatever I want to call it contains the 13 number 7.2(b)?
14 Q. Yes, sir. I'm asking you for anything that 15 says if consent isn't perfected under 1.5(e) the 16 analysis by the lawyers involved -- the analysis
17 switches to 7.2(b)?
18 A. Let me answer -- let me -- maybe this cuts
19 through it.
20 I know of no case from any authority in 21 Massachusetts that says that a failure to comply
22 with 1.5(e) constitutes a violation of, quote,
23 7.2(b), closed quote.
24 Q. How about any case outside Massachusetts,

Page 58

1 sir, even states that have the Model Rule that
2 requires that the attorney -- the referring attorney
3 perform some work or assumes some liability?
4 Can you point us to any case in any
5 jurisdiction that says the failure to perfect client
6 consent on the part of the referring or receiving
7 attorney causes the analysis to shift to 7.2(b)
8 which is also a Model Rule?
9 A. Saggese itself cites an Illinois
10 Intermediate Appellate Court opinion that says that,
11 although it may not use a number.
12 Q. I was just going to say, sir, that Illinois
13 intermediate opinion doesn't reference 7.2(b), does
14 it?
15 A. I just said although it may not use a
16 number.
17 Q. So what you're saying is you believe it
18 refers to a principle but not to an existing 19 explicit rule under both the Model Rules and the 20 Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct,
21 correct?
22 A. Can you repeat that?
23 Q. What you're saying to us is that you're 24 relying on your interpretation of the principle

Page 59

1 underlying Rule 7.2(b), but you agree that there's 2 no case anywhere in the country that says the
3 failure of the lawyers to perfect client consent
4 under 1.5(e) switches the analysis to 7.2(b),
5 correct?
6 A. No.
7 Q. What's incorrect about that, sir?
8 A. Well, I'm relying on the language of 7.2(b)
9 and the language of 1.5(e).
10 So my argument is that the text of the 11 rules self evidently bring the lawyer within 7.2(b),
12 unless the lawyer does something. And if the lawyer
13 doesn't do anything, doesn't do that something, then 14 it is a payment for a recommendation in violation of 15 7.2.
16 As I said before, I see this
17 sylogistically. It logically follows that you
18 cannot do X unless you do Y; and if you do not do Y,
19 you're -- you've violated X.
20 Now I don't have to go outside the text
21 of the rule to come to that conclusion, but it is 22 also true that the Saggese Court recognizes that 23 principle and cites the Illinois opinion for that 24 principle.

Page 60

1 If you're asking me, well, does the
2 Illinois opinion use the number 7.2(b), it may; it
3 may not. I don't know. It may not be the same
4 number in Illinois.
5 Q. Does Illinois follow the Model Rules?
6 A. I'm sorry?
7 Q. Did Illinois follow the ABA Model Rules?
8 A. No, no jurisdiction does exactly. And 9 whether it follows the Model Rules on 1.5(e), I'm 10 not sure.
11 Q. So if I'm understanding you correctly, what 12 you're saying, sir, is that the basis for your 13 opinion that the failure to perfect client consent
14 under 1.5(e) causes the analysis to switch to 7.2(b)
15 is premised in significant part on how you read the 16 language of those two rules; is that correct?
17 A. I would say that the failure to -- the 18 analysis doesn't shift to 7.2(b); it begins there,
19 and then you can exit 7.2(b)'s prohibition by 20 complying with 1.5(e). And if you don't, you don't.
21 Q. So in your view even when you're talking 22 about a circumstance where two law firms enter into 23 a fee division agreement, the analysis still starts
24 at 7.2(b); is that right?

Page 61

1 A. Until they satisfy Rule 1.5(e).
2 Q. Can you cite us to a single case that says
3 that?
4 A. Haven't we been over this?
5 Q. No. I'm now taking your position that we
6 start with 7.2(b) as opposed to moving to 7.2(b)
7 after the lawyers fail to perfect consent under
8 1.5(e).
9 Tell me any case anywhere that says when
10 you have two law firms that enter into a fee
11 division agreement the analysis of the propriety of 12 their conduct starts with the advertising Rule
13 7.2(b).
14 A. Other than the reference in Saggese to the 15 Illinois case and the language in Saggese that leads
16 to the citation to the Illinois case, I don't know
17 of any Massachusetts authority that has that 18 description.
19 Q. All right. So we're clear, sir, there's no
20 case that you've found anywhere in Massachusetts
21 that deals with the concept of 7.2(b) being the 22 beginning of the analysis when two law firms enter
23 into a fee division agreement, and no case anywhere
24 in Massachusetts that suggests that one switches the

Page 62

1 analysis to 7.2(b) if the law firms fail to perfect
2 client consent under 1.5(e), correct?
3 A. I'm not buying into your characterization.
4 I say it the way I said it.
5 Q. All right. Just tell me if there's any case
6 you know of anywhere that talks about 1.5(e) and 7 7.2(b) in the same case.
8 A. No.
9 Q. Okay. Did you come up with that theory on 10 the basis of your reading of the two rules?
11 A. Yes.
12 Q. Are you aware of any discipline that's ever
13 been taken against a lawyer or a law firm under 14 7.2(b) for failure to perfect client consent under
15 1.5(e)?
16 A. I didn't look anywhere. I looked in 17 Massachusetts. And I'm not.
18 Q. All right. So you only looked in 19 Massachusetts, but beyond Massachusetts, you're not
20 aware of any case anywhere that imposes a sanction
21 or disciplinary action under 7.2(b) for failure to 22 perfect client consent under 1.5(e)?
23 A. I did not research that question outside
24 Massachusetts.

1 doesn't use those numbers, correct.
2 Q. It also doesn't quote the language, does it?
3 A. No, I don't think it does.
4 Q. What is the language that you are relying on 5 from Saggese?
6 A. I want the rule in front of me if I'm going
7 to --
8 Q. You want the rule in front of you?
9 A. Yeah.
10 Q. Rule 7.2 in front of you? Or you want
11 Saggese in front of you?
12 A. No, the rule. You're asking me what is the 13 language in 7.2 --
14 Q. No, no, no.
15 I'm asking you what is the language in 16 Saggese that you say is tantamount to a reference to
17 Rule 7.2?
18 I could give you a copy, but mine is 19 heavily marked up in ways that Mr. Sinnott would not 20 appreciate.
21 (Pause.)
22 A. The language -- the reference is actually in 23 Daynard, D-A-Y-N-A-R-D. And the language is Daynard
24 is nothing like the plaintiffs in many cases or

Page 83

1 denied enforcement of their, quote, fee splitting
2 closed quote, contracts which are in reality fee
3 referral contracts; see, e.g., Holstein versus
4 Grossman, and there's a citation.
5 And then there's a parenthetical
6 reference, quote, holding that a fee-sharing --
7 sorry.
8 "Holding that a 'fee-sharing agreement
9 which is primarily based on a client referral is 10 unenforceable as a matter of public policy where the 11 undisputed facts show that the referred client never 12 consented in writing to the attorneys'
13 arrangement."
14 Q. Where are you in Daynard, sir?
15 MS. McEVOY: 131.
16 MS. LUKEY: 131?
17 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Citing Holstein at 18 616 N.E.2d page 1229.
19 MS. LUKEY: Just need a minute to try to 20 locate it because we have a different version.
21 A. And actually that -- that reference in 22 Daynard is quoted at page 61 of my opinion.
23 Q. It refers to fee referral, correct?
24 What you just read to us is

Page 86

1 distinguishing between a fee-splitting contract and
2 a fee referral contract, correct?
3 A. The Illinois Court uses both the terms
4 fee-sharing agreement and client referral.
5 Q. All right. But the distinction that Judge
6 Young was making in Daynard is between a fee --
7 well, let me go back to the language again and make
8 sure I get it right.
9 (Pause.)
10 BY MS. LUKEY:
11 Q. The distinction is between a fee-splitting
12 contract and a fee referral contract, right?
13 A. I don't think that the labels matter here,
14 whether you call it a referral or a recommendation.
15 Massachusetts uses the word "recommendation" in 7.2
16 and referral as the keyword in Rule 1.5(e) and in 17 one of the exceptions to the prohibition in Rule
18 7.2.
19 So the principle is the same. The 20 principle is that you can't pay for recommendations
21 unless you comply with another rule; that you can 22 call -- you can change the word "recommendation" to 23 referral; you can change the word "recommendation"
24 to forwarding fee.

1 Q. And that was because of Mr. Hopkins'

3 Sucharow and not through any local counsel, correct?
4 A. Yes.
5 THE REPORTER: I'm sorry, I didn't hear
6 the answer.
7 THE WITNESS: Yes.
8 MS. LUKEY: Right.
9 MS. McEVOY: I have an extra copy of the 11 MS. LUKEY: I don't need it right now.

12 I would suggest that we have it marked at some point
13 on the break or have it marked right now as

19 you have seen now from Mr. Hopkins constitute

21 System to the fee referral to Chargois & Herron?
22 A. On behalf of Arkansas alone.

6 case and whom it did not know about."
7 Did I read that correctly?
8 A. Yes.
9 Q. All right. Do you agree -- well, let me ask
10 you this first: Are you saying that under Rules 54
11 and 23 there is something in the language that 12 distinguishes between lawyers who have appeared in 13 the case and lawyers who have not appeared in the 14 case --
15 A. No.
16 Q. -- in terms of disclosure?
17 A. Sorry. No.
18 Q. All right. Are you saying here in the 19 opening phrase that you agree as a general
20 proposition that there is no duty under Rules 23 and 21 54 to disclose the division of fees?
22 A. That's part of the sentence.
23 Q. All right. What are the circumstances under 24 Rule 54 which specifically says under (d)(2)(b) that

Page 115

1 disclosure is only required if the Court orders it
2 -- what are the circumstances, if any, in which you
3 say that disclosure is required even if the Court
4 didn't order it?
5 A. I'm not relying on Rule 54 as the source of 6 authority or obligation to disclose participation of 7 a lawyer whom the Court does not know about.
8 Q. Are you familiar -- well, you read
9 Mr. Sarrouf's affidavit?
10 A. Yes. I did, yes.
11 Q. Or report. Do you have any understanding as 12 to what the standard of practice is in Massachusetts
13 about whether counsel disclose to the Court without 14 an order the existence of fee agreements for 15 attorneys who aren't appearing in the case?
16 A. No.
17 Q. Do you understand that Mr. Sarrouf takes the 18 position that it is not the practice in 19 Massachusetts in the absence of a Court order to 20 disclose a referral fee agreement even if one of the 21 firms hasn't appeared in a case?
22 A. Yes.
23 Q. Do you have any reason to dispute his 24 position that the standard of practice does not

Page 116

[REDACTED]

Page 117

[REDACTED]

Page 142

Page 144

1 A. -- I'm aware of that.
2 Q. Your final question presented, sir, on page
3 54 -- oh, no, wait. Sorry, missed one here. Before
4 we get to that one.
5 You do offer the opinion at page 71 of 6 your report that the omission -- I'll quote. "The 7 omission of the Chargois payment from the fee
8 application violated Rules 3.3(a) and Rule 8.4(c)."
9 A. Right.
10 Q. Now, sir, you would agree with me, I assume,
11 that accusing lawyers of violating ethical rules is 12 a very serious matter, isn't it?
13 A. It is.
14 Q. You are making that accusation with no case
15 support for the notion that Rule 54(d) would be 16 overridden by 3.3 or 8.4 of the Massachusetts Rules
17 of Professional Conduct?
18 A. I don't believe it is overridden. These are 19 two parallel methods of analysis.
20 Q. Do you have any case authority, sir, for the 21 proposition that Massachusetts Rule of Professional
22 Conduct 3.3(a) requires disclosure of fee agreements
23 in cases where no rule or order requires disclosure?
24 A. I have -- I know of no authority that

Page 143

[REDACTED]

Page 145

1 applies 3.3 to the duty to disclose a fee agreement.
2 Q. All right.
3 A. I think that's what you're asking.
4 Q. It is, sir.
5 Do you have any authority for the 6 proposition that Rule 8.4 which deals with
7 dishonesty, fraud, deceit and misrepresentation --
8 well, first let me ask you this: Do you have any 9 basis for saying that counsel in this case acted
10 dishonestly, fraudulently, deceitfully or by
11 misrepresentation?
12 A. I think the -- on the record here, given
13 what Judge Wolf knew and did not know and said, that 14 the failure to disclose the Chargois Arrangement in 15 light of what was disclosed was misrepresentation.
16 Q. I'm sorry, I didn't follow that. Would you
17 mind saying it again?
18 A. No, I do not mind.
19 I think that given what Judge Wolf knew
20 and did not know and given what was said by the 21 lawyers to Judge Wolf, the failure to disclose the 22 Chargois Arrangement to Judge Wolf was a
23 misrepresentation; that an omission can be a
24 misrepresentation.

Page 150

1 Q. -- that also was not disclosed?
2 A. Yes, that's right.
3 Q. Sir, you list some cases in this section,
4 but none of the cases you cite hold that counsel
5 must disclose fee allocations to class members, do
6 they?
7 A. No.
8 Q. Do you have any authority for the 9 proposition that class counsel must disclose fee
10 allocations to class members?
11 A. I think the authority is -- there were rules
12 governing the attorney/client relationship and the 13 duty to inform your client. And I think I addressed
14 that somewhere in there.
15 Q. So you're basing this on the attorney/client
16 relationship in a Rule 23 class situation?
17 A. Yes.
18 Q. Are you familiar with the cases that
19 distinguish the nature of the duties that class
20 counsel have to unnamed class members as contrasted
21 with the duties that attorneys have to their clients
22 more generally including named class members?
23 A. Different proceedings before --
24 THE REPORTER: I'm sorry, I can't hear

Page 151

1 you.
2 THE WITNESS: I'm sorry.
3 A. At what point?
4 Q. Well, it would have to be after the class
5 certification, or it wouldn't be an issue.
6 Are you familiar with the fact that
7 cases distinguish between the nature of the duty
8 that class counsel has to the unnamed class members
9 as contrasted with the nature of the duty that class
10 counsel has to its own direct client, the named
11 plaintiff?
12 A. I'm -- no.
13 Q. You're not aware of a difference?
14 A. Not -- I'm not aware of the difference as 15 regards the duty I'm talking about here, the duty to 16 inform.
17 Q. Can you cite us to a case that says that 18 class counsel has the obligation to notify the 19 unnamed class members; that is, the non-named
20 plaintiffs, of a referral fee that's going to come
21 out of class counsel's fee?
22 A. No.
23 Q. Isn't it the case, sir, that any right that 24 -- never mind. I withdraw that.

Page 152

Page 156

1 Q. All right. Give me a case that supports the 2 notion that in an attorneys' fee award case of any
3 kind -- not a class -- that there was an -- well,
4 never mind. That wouldn't work because that's not
5 the obligation you're talking about so forget that.
6 So basically we have no support for the 7 concept that in a class action a Court has said you,
8 class counsel, must disclose the existence of a
9 referral fee to the class members, right?
10 A. Could you start that again?
11 Q. There's no case that supports the 12 proposition that class counsel has been ordered --
13 that a Court has said that class counsel is 14 obligated to inform the class members of a referral
15 fee?
16 A. Right. Or contradicts it.
17 Q. You are seeking to impose a duty of 18 disclosure of a fee division -- well, let me
19 rephrase it.
20 You're seeking to impose a duty of 21 disclosure of a fee division that no Court has yet
22 imposed in any written decision, right?
23 A. So far as I know, but it's not -- it's an 24 analysis under the Massachusetts rules. It's not an

Page 155

[REDACTED]

Page 157

1 analysis under Rule 23.
2 Q. And what Massachusetts rule?
3 A. The one cited in the point you're talking
4 about.
5 Q. The one cited where?
6 A. In the point you're talking about. A duty
7 to inform a client of -- 1.4 duty to inform a client
8 completely especially when you're inviting the 9 client to accept and not object to a prospect of fee
10 application.
11 Q. Well, 1.5(e)'s duty is to get the consent of 12 the client --
13 A. Right.
14 Q. -- who retains you at the time of retention?
15 A. Yes.
16 Q. That can't happen here because the class
17 becomes a class years after the retention, correct?
18 A. I said 1.4. Maybe you miss -- I said 1.4,
19 not 1.5.
20 Q. I'm sorry. Rule 1.4?
21 A. Yes.
22 Q. What is it that Rule 1.4 says?
23 A. It's a duty to keep a client informed about 24 matters and especially matters within the client's

Page 196

1 right?
2 A. Right.
3 Q. All right. Let me go to page 76 of your
4 report, please. Are you with me?
5 A. I am.
6 Q. About halfway down the page you'll pick up
7 with the sentence that reads: "Recipients are also 8 told..." -- are you with me there?
9 A. Yes.
10 Q. And this is with respect to the class
11 notice, correct?
12 A. Correct.
13 Q. You write there: "Recipients are also told 14 that attorneys' fees for ERISA counsel will not 15 exceed 10.9 million dollars, and they are told how 16 fees for the other counsel will be computed." And 17 then the sentence goes on. Do you see that?
18 A. Right.
19 Q. Who were you referring to when you used the 20 phrase "other counsel"?
21 A. The class counsel.
22 Q. All right. That means the firms of Labaton,
23 Thornton and Lief Cabraser?
24 A. Yes.

Page 195

1 Q. Did you read any portion of the deposition
2 of Mr. Chiplock?
3 A. No.
4 Q. Mr. Lief who's sitting just to the right of 5 Mr. Chiplock --
6 A. No.
7 Q. -- did you read any portion of his
8 deposition?
9 A. No.
10 Q. Mr. Fineman -- Steve Fineman, did you read
11 any portion of his deposition?
12 A. No.
13 Q. My deposition, did you read any portion of 14 my deposition?
15 A. No.
16 Q. Is there any list or any documentation in 17 existence of the materials that you did review in 18 the course of your work?
19 A. No, there is not a list. The statement of 20 facts is my universe.
21 Q. But you weren't confined just to the 22 statement of facts, were you?
23 You reviewed some materials other than 24 materials that appear in the statement of facts,

Page 197

1 Q. And you got this language I gather -- strike
2 that.
3 This statement is based on your review
4 of the class notice itself at page 9; is that right?
5 A. The class notice?
6 Q. I'm going to give you the class notice if
7 you don't have it, but I'm looking at your report.
8 It says -- with respect to that sentence, it's cited
9 at Id. at 9.
10 A. Right. So that quote is Id. at 9.
11 Q. That's something you took upon yourself to 12 determine, not something that's in the statement of 13 facts that was written by Mr. Sinnott, right?
14 A. What's the antecedent of "that"?
15 Q. The statement that you made here that the 16 ERISA counsel's fees were capped at 10.9 million
17 dollars and that the fees for the other counsel were 18 to be computed according to what you write here.
19 A. I think that that is in the statement of 20 facts -- in the -- maybe in the statement of facts
21 but in the notice.
22 Q. I agree it's in the notice. I disagree it's 23 in the statement of facts --
24 A. Okay.

Page 198

1 Q. -- all right?
2 Of what importance, if any, was this to
3 your opinion that the attorneys' fees -- that the 4 notice reported that the attorneys' fees for ERISA
5 counsel would not exceed 10.9 million dollars?
6 A. It's not important in itself. It's 7 important insofar as there is disclosure of 8 attorneys' fees -- some information about the fee
9 application in the notice and in the subsequent fee
10 application posted on the website in which others
11 than Chargois are named, the point being that there
12 is some detail given and then more detail given, and 13 the recipients to the notice are invited, if they so 14 chose, to object not only to the settlement but to 15 the attorneys' fees and how to do so.
16 So they are being given information
17 about those fees. They need that information
18 presumably to decide whether or not they want to 19 object, but they're not given complete information
20 because they're not given the Chargois information.
21 So to answer your question, this is a
22 lead-up to the fact of what I'm claiming is 23 incompleteness by failure to disclose Chargois
24 either in the notice or in the website.

Page 199

1 Q. All right. So it didn't matter to you what
2 the specifics of the information were. As long as 3 there was some information about fees set forth in 4 the notice, your position is that it had to also
5 include the details about the Chargois Arrangement?
6 Is that fair?
7 A. It didn't matter to me who's getting what as 8 described in the notice. It mattered to me that 9 there was an invitation or a right to object coupled
10 with information that purportedly gave the recipient
11 a basis to decide whether or not he or she wished to 12 object.
13 Now I want to come back to a subtle
14 point in your question because it's a legitimate
15 point, and that is could that have happened other 16 than in the notice. Could that have happened in the 17 fee petition? And I think it could have happened in 18 the fee petition.
19 Q. What could have? What is the "it"?
20 A. Notice of Chargois.
21 Q. All right. So if it turns out that once
22 again you're dead wrong here, when you say that the 23 attorneys' fees for ERISA counsel would not exceed 24 10.9 million, that doesn't affect your opinion?

Page 200

1 A. Well, depending on how I'm dead wrong. If
2 you said it was 10.8 million, it wouldn't affect my
3 opinion.
4 Q. The 10.9's right; it just wasn't -- it
5 wasn't a cap on ERISA counsels' fees as you say it
6 was?
7 A. And as the notice says it is.
8 Q. Show me where in the notice it says that.
9 A. Or in the statement of facts. I didn't make
10 up the number 10.9 million.
11 Q. No, but you did cite to the notice when you
12 say -- and you quote from it apparently here -- when 13 you say that the ERISA counsel fees were capped at 14 10.9.
15 I want you to show me where it says that
16 in the notice at page 9.
17 A. Well, if it doesn't, it doesn't. I will 18 look.
19 (Pause.)
20 A. So no more than 10.9 million in fees can be 21 paid out of the ERISA settlement allocation. Is 22 that -- am I missing something?
23 Q. Apparently. Because it doesn't say that the 24 ERISA counsels' fees would not exceed 10.9; it says

Page 201

1 the class fees would not exceed 10.9 out of the
2 ERISA portion of the class settlement.
3 MR. HEIMANN: Do you think that's funny,
4 Judge Rosen?
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I think it's --
6 I'll not respond.
7 A. The opinion says recipients are told that
8 attorneys' fees for ERISA counsel will not exceed 9 10.9 million dollars. And then it goes on to other
10 counsel.
11 Q. That's your report. I gotcha.
12 A. Okay. And that information -- I don't know
13 whether or not that information is in the statement
14 of facts or not. We can look at that if we want.
15 On page 9 it says the ERISA settlement allocation --
16 sorry.
17 Because no more than 10.9 million in 18 fees can be paid out of the ERISA settlement. So
19 your point is that -- and maybe you want to tell me
20 your point, but do I understand that your point is 21 that my opinion says that attorneys' fees for ERISA
22 counsel will not exceed 10.9 whereas the notice says
23 that no more than 10.9 can be paid out of the 24 settlement?

Page 202

1 Q. Out of the ERISA portion of the settlement.
2 A. Out of the ERISA settlement. So your point
3 is that it could be more, but it can't come from
4 there.
5 Q. No. My point is that it wasn't a lid on the 6 fees that would be paid to ERISA counsel; it was a
7 cap on what could be taken out of the ERISA portion
8 of the settlement for purposes of paying all
9 counsel, not just ERISA counsel.
10 A. For purposes of paying all counsel for the 11 ERISA recovery because counsel are being paid --
12 Q. Correct.
13 A. All right.
14 (Pause.)
15 A. You know, I don't -- I take your point, but 16 I'm not quite sure what the consequence is.
17 Q. Well, that was my question.
18 My first question is why you would have 19 phrased this incorrectly in your report; and in 20 learning that it's incorrect, does it make any 21 difference to your opinion?
22 A. So it's incorrect -- just to be clear 'cause
23 we're getting very much into the weeds here --
24 Q. Well, it's weeds that have been pretty tall

Page 203

1 so far in this litigation --
2 A. Okay.
3 Q. -- and I know you don't recognize that --
4 A. All right.
5 Q. -- but others of us do.
6 A. Okay. Recipients are told that attorneys'
7 fees for ERISA counsel will not exceed 10.9, and 8 your point is that that only refers to fees from the 9 ERISA settlement.
10 Q. Correct.
11 A. So that ERISA counsel could get more than 12 10.9, but that extra amount could not come from the
13 ERISA settlement.
14 Q. Correct. Except, of course, that ERISA
15 counsel had already agreed to a set percentage out
16 of the total settlement amount to be paid to ERISA
17 counsel.
18 A. To be paid to?
19 Q. To ERISA counsel.
20 A. Counsel?
21 Q. ERISA counsel.
22 A. ERISA counsel?
23 Q. (Nods head.)
24 A. Yeah, okay. Because that's the 9 percent/10

Page 204

1 percent issue, right?
2 Q. Exactly.
3 A. Right. So now your question to me is since
4 the notice and the agreement allows ERISA counsel to 5 get more than 10.9 but for the side agreement, the 6 statement in the notice only limits it to 10.9 if
7 the money comes from the ERISA settlement.
8 To put it more bluntly, ERISA counsel
9 could look for more money but not from the ERISA
10 settlement.
11 Is that what you're telling me?
12 Q. I think to simplify this, the question
13 really is this: The statement in your report that 14 ERISA counsel's fees could not exceed 10.9 million
15 dollars does not appear in the notice, the fact --
16 A. Okay.
17 Q. -- despite the fact you cite to the notice
18 for that proposition.
19 A. Right, okay.
20 Q. Does that make any difference in terms of 21 your opinions in this case?
22 A. No.
23 Q. Okay, thank you.
24 A. I guess we could have started there.

1 A. No.
2 Q. Okay. If we could go to page 33 of your
3 report. You with me?
4 A. I am.
5 Q. All right. The term "the Chargois
6 Arrangement" appears towards the top in bold letters
7 here.
8 A. Right.
9 Q. The Chargois Arrangement was a defined term
10 according to the report, correct?
11 A. It's a defined term.
12 Q. And that's why it appears with a capital A 13 Chargois Arrangement to show that it's a defined
14 term?
15 A. I don't know -- you could have a defined
16 term without a capital. So I'm not sure if the 17 capital explains a defined term or vice versa.
18 Q. In this instance you understand it's a
19 defined term as used in the report?
20 A. That's what the report does. A defined term
21 is a -- may be a term of art. It may simply be a
22 shorthand, right. So you might say -- let's say you
23 had the name Lieff Cabraser blah and blah, right?
24 Paren, quote, Lieff, closed quote. It's not a

Page 207

[REDACTED]

Page 209

1 defined term; it's just a shorthand.
2 So whether or not it's a shorthand or a
3 defined term is open to question.
4 Q. Well, in this instance the Chargois
5 Arrangement when it's used in the report has a
6 number of elements that are spelled out in the 7 report itself, does it not?
8 A. Are you referring to something in 9 particular?
10 Q. Sure. I can walk you right through it.
11 So under the subheading the Chargois
12 Arrangement in caps in quotation marks, the 13 following appears -- the first sentence: "As 14 consideration for Chargois' efforts Belfi and Keller
15 agreed to pay Chargois' firm, Chargois & Herron, a
16 maximum 20 percent of any attorneys' fees received
17 by Labaton in any litigation involving an 18 institutional investor for whom Chargois facilitated 19 the introduction including ATRS, hereinafter the 20 Chargois Arrangement." Do you see that?
21 A. Could I just read it to myself?
22 Q. Of course.
23 (Pause.)
24 A. Yes.

Page 210

1 Q. The very next sentence goes on to further
2 define the Chargois Arrangement in these terms:
3 "Both Chargois and Belfi understood it was the mere
4 introduction to Chargois to potential institutional
5 investors or potential antitrust clients that was
6 the basis of the agreement to pay Chargois 20
7 percent of any legal fee Labaton earned on any cases
8 in which Labaton was lead counsel or co-lead counsel
9 and the client was lead or co-lead plaintiff."
10 So that's a second aspect of the 11 Chargois Arrangement, correct?
12 A. Right.
13 Q. It goes in the very next sentence to say
14 under this arrangement Chargois was not expected to 15 file an appearance.
16 So that's a third aspect of the Chargois
17 Arrangement, correct?
18 A. Finish the sentence.
19 Q. Well, I'm going -- I'm going to. But the 20 third aspect is --
21 A. Right.
22 Q. -- not expected to file an appearance,
23 right?
24 A. Yes.

Page 211

1 Q. Or assume a substantive role in any of the 2 resulting litigation. So that was another aspect of 3 the Chargois Arrangement, correct?
4 A. Correct.
5 Q. Or even interface with the client. Yet
6 another aspect of the Chargois Arrangement, correct?
7 A. I'm with you.
8 Q. Okay. And, by the way, although it's not 9 spelled out here, it's also your understanding that 10 in the case of the State Street case the Arkansas
11 Fund wasn't even aware of Chargois' existence let 12 alone his role, correct?
13 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
14 A. That's correct.
15 Q. And as a corollary of the other aspects of 16 the arrangement here about not expected to file an 17 appearance or play any substantive role, it would 18 follow as part of the Chargois Arrangement that 19 there was no expectation that Chargois would 20 participate in any meaningful way to the outcome of 21 the case or to the benefit of the class, correct?
22 A. It would not -- the firm would not 23 participate in any meaningful way in the outcome of 24 the case or to the benefit of the class, right.

Page 212

1 That's correct.
2 Q. And that's your understanding again of the 3 Chargois Arrangement as it's used in your report?
4 A. Correct.
5 Q. All right. And if we could go just to -- I
6 want to add one other aspect to the Chargois
7 Arrangement as you use that term. And that's at
8 page 76.
9 A. The statement of facts uses that term.
10 Q. And so do you in your opinion portion,
11 right?
12 A. That's right, I use -- I didn't -- I don't 13 think I created it but...
14 Q. I agree.
15 We're just looking at the statement of 16 fact section, but now there's one other aspect of 17 the Chargois Arrangement that does appear in your 18 section of the report that I want to point out to 19 you, and that's at page 76 --
20 A. Hm hm.
21 Q. -- towards the bottom of the page --
22 A. Right.
23 Q. -- where you write recipients of the notice
24 were not told about the Chargois Arrangement,

Page 213

1 although this information that a lawyer who did no
2 work to produce the class recovery and who accepted
3 no legal responsibility for the work of others --
4 let me stop there.
5 So that's another aspect of the Chargois
6 Arrangement as you use the term, a lawyer who 7 accepted no legal responsibility for the work on the
8 case.
9 A. I think that's already been covered.
10 Q. In other terms -- in other terms meaning --
11 A. Yes, in other terms.
12 Q. All right, sir.
13 Now in your section of the report you
14 use the Chargois Arrangement any number of times.
15 In fact, by my count, over 30 times in your section
16 of the report that phrase or that term appears.
17 Right?
18 A. I take -- I will accept your number.
19 Q. All right. And you used it -- when you used 20 it, you meant to use it as it is defined as 21 described in the factual section of the report and 22 in your section of the report?
23 A. I did, and maybe I used it that way all 30
24 times, but I'm not excluding the possibility of a

Page 214

1 different syntax one or two of the times.
2 Q. Well, let's see. So let's go to page 54 of 3 your report.
4 A. Okay.
5 Q. And let's focus on the issues or questions
6 that you presented in answer.
7 A. Right.
8 Q. So first Roman numeral two --
9 A. Right.
10 Q. -- you say -- the question is was the 11 arrangement with Chargois, paren, the Chargois,
12 capital, arrangement, closed quotation marks and 13 closed paren, a valid division of a fee agreement
14 under Massachusetts law. And you answer that no.
15 Right?
16 A. Right.
17 Q. So there you're using the Chargois
18 Arrangement as it's been gone through, right?
19 A. That's right.
20 Q. Question Roman three, did class counsel have 21 a duty to inform the Court of the Chargois
22 Arrangement, whether or not the Chargois Arrangement
23 was a valid division of fee agreement. Do you see
24 that?

Page 215

1 A. Yes, I do.
2 Q. And, again, you're using the Chargois
3 Arrangement as we've just gone through it, right?
4 A. Right.
5 Q. And your answer to that question is, yes,
6 federal case law and the Massachusetts Rules of 7 Professional Conduct both required class counsel to 8 inform the Court of the Chargois Arrangement.
9 Correct?
10 A. Correct.
11 Q. And you're using it again in the way we've 12 been describing -- it's been described here?
13 A. Yes.
14 Q. Roman numeral four, did class counsel have a 15 duty to inform the certified settlement class of the 16 Chargois Arrangement whether or not it was a valid
17 division of fee agreement. Correct?
18 A. Yes.
19 Q. Again you're using the Chargois Arrangement
20 as we've described, correct?
21 A. Yes.
22 Q. And, finally, your answer to that question
23 is, yes, their fiduciary duty and the Massachusetts
24 Rules of Professional Conduct required class counsel

Page 216

1 to inform the certified settlement class of the 2 Chargois Arrangement. See that?
3 A. Yes.
4 Q. And again you're using it as it was
5 described, the Chargois Arrangement, right?
6 A. Yes. Yes.
7 Q. All right, sir.
8 Is it your opinion that class counsel
9 were ethically required to disclose the allocation
10 of fees or fee-splitting agreements among the 11 plaintiffs' counsel of record to the Court?
12 A. No.
13 Q. Is it your opinion that they were not
14 required ethically to disclose those fee
15 arrangements or fee split agreements?
16 A. It is my opinion they were not required to,
17 yes.
18 Q. All right. Same questions with respect to 19 disclosure to the class.
20 Is it your opinion that class counsel
21 were required to disclose the fee arrangements or 22 fee splits among plaintiffs' counsel of record to 23 the class in the notice?
24 A. No.

Page 217

1 Q. So you have an affirmative opinion they were
2 not obliged ethically to disclose that, correct?
3 A. Correct.
4 Q. All right. What is the difference, sir,
5 between the disclosure to the Court or -- strike
6 that.
7 What is the difference between your
8 opinion that the counsel were not required to 9 disclose to the Court those fee arrangements or fee
10 splits, but they were required to disclose the 11 Chargois Arrangement to the Court? What's the 12 difference?
13 A. To the Court, not to the class.
14 Q. I'll come to the class in a minute. First
15 starting with the Court.
16 A. The difference is that the Court knew who 17 class counsel were, and I would assume they have a
18 division of fee agreement or would in any event
19 eventually. And because the Court knew the identity
20 of class counsel, it could, if it wished, ask to be 21 told what the division of fee agreement is among 22 counsel, or it could simply defer to whatever
23 private agreement it reached.
24 But nothing in the record -- nothing

1 known to the Court.
2 Q. Have you finished?
3 A. Yes.
4 Q. So I gather the key is that Chargois wasn't
5 counsel of record in terms of your opinion that 6 there's a difference between the duty on the part of 7 counsel to disclose him as opposed to disclosing fee
8 splits or fee arrangements among counsel of report;
9 is that right?
10 A. No, it's not right.
11 Q. What's wrong with that?
12 A. Counsel of record is not the trigger; that
13 is, the Court could have learned about Chargois
14 other than by having him be counsel of record. It's 15 not the only way to bring his existence to the 16 attention of the Court.
17 Q. The key then is the fact that the identity
18 of this person was not made known to the Court; that 19 makes the difference in your mind?
20 A. That's right.
21 Q. All right.
22 So let's assume that contrary to the 23 Chargois Arrangement which you're using, there
24 wasn't any Chargois Arrangement. In fact, Chargois

Page 220

1 was local counsel, had performed valuable work for
2 the case, work that was commensurate in terms of the 3 benefit conferred on the class with the amount being
4 paid to him, and therefore the only thing the Court
5 didn't know about the Chargois participation was the 6 existence of the fact that he was going to get a
7 fair and reasonable portion of the fee.
8 Is it still your opinion that counsel
9 violated their ethical obligations in failing to 10 disclose Chargois' existence to the Court?
11 A. My -- so just to be clear what the -- what 12 the assumptions are. Counsel have a basis to 13 believe -- reasonably believe that Chargois has 14 performed -- I think you used the word
15 "substantial" --
16 Q. Valuable would be as good a term, but that's 17 fine. Valuable services.
18 A. -- valuable services to the class --
19 Q. And to -- and to the class representative,
20 Arkansas.
21 A. And therefore to the class.
22 Q. (Nods head.)
23 A. And that counsel have a reasonable basis to 24 believe -- and presumably do believe -- that these

Page 221

1 valuable services are -- justify the fee that by
2 August or September they know that they will be
3 seeking for all counsel, and they also know the 4 portion that will go to Chargois, 4.1 million
5 dollars as it turns out --
6 Q. Five percent more or less?
7 A. Sorry?
8 Q. Five percent more or less.
9 A. Five point five percent of the counsel fees,
10 4.1 million dollars I think, right?
11 Q. As it turned out.
12 A. As it turned out. But we knew what ballpark
13 we were in, even if we didn't know the digit in the 14 third column, right?
15 Q. Fair enough.
16 A. All right.
17 Q. And let me go on. And that Arkansas was 18 fully aware of the existence of the lawyer, had 19 approved of the lawyer, had consented in writing to 20 the lawyer, all that requires that is otherwise the 21 facts as we now know them, but I'm asking you to 22 assume otherwise.
23 A. Okay. And I'm going to assume one thing
24 more which I think you want me to assume, and that

Page 222

1 is that what customer class counsel knew about
2 Chargois' work for the benefit of the class
3 justified a fee in the neighborhood of four million
4 dollars as not clearly excessive within the meaning
5 of Rule 1.5(a).
6 Q. Correct.
7 A. Fine. If all that is true, then I -- then
8 my opinion is not that there was a need to disclose
9 it.
10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Is "not" -- that
11 there was not a need to disclose it?
12 THE WITNESS: Not a need to disclose it.
13 MR. HEIMANN: Can we take five minutes?
14 THE SPECIAL MASTER: (Nods head.)
15 (A recess was taken.)
16 PHONE LINE CONFERENCE: The following
17 participant has joined the conference: Lynn Sarko
18 rejoining.
19 MR. SINNOTT: Lynn, we're on a really
20 quick break.
21 (A recess was taken.)
22 CONTINUED EXAMINATION BY MR. HEIMANN:
23 Q. Professor, could you go now to page 78 of 24 your opinion? Or your report. I'm sorry.

1 A. Yes, we've been through that.
2 Q. All right. And, of course, that the client
3 was fully aware of Chargois and the work that he did
4 and the value of the work that he did to the case --
5 to the class and to the Arkansas firm itself?
6 A. I have the same opinion.
7 Q. At page 67 of your report at the bottom of 8 the page you write: "The Court itself dispelled any 9 uncertainty about what it expected just before
10 approving lead counsel's fee request in full, the 11 Court said, 'I'm relying heavily on the submissions
12 and what's been said today.'"
13 Do you see that?
14 A. I do.
15 Q. Is the fact that the Court said that at that 16 hearing important --
17 A. Yes.
18 Q. -- to your opinion?
19 A. Yes.
20 Q. Why?
21 A. Because the Court signaled to the lawyers in 22 the room that he was relying heavily on the 23 submissions and what's been said here today, that
24 this was important to the Court.

Page 239

1 A. Right.
2 Q. And I'm saying to you assume that based on
3 long experience, 25, 40 years in Mr. Lieff's case --
4 MR. LIEFF: Fifty.
5 Q. -- 5 percent to a local counsel under these
6 types of circumstances is not at all unusual?
7 A. Even if he does no work?
8 Q. Even if he does no work.
9 A. Right. So I'm saying that even in that 10 instance where the lawyers have no reason to believe 11 he's doing work -- he's doing no work, that the 12 judge should be informed.
13 Q. And is it your opinion that these lawyers
14 here violated their ethical obligations when they 15 didn't tell the judge about Mr. Chargois under those 16 circumstances?
17 A. It is my opinion that their duty to the 18 client and the Court required them to disclose to 19 the client and the Court the Chargois fee
20 arrangement of which they knew assuming Chargois was 21 doing no work.
22 Q. All right. And if they thought, as they had 23 been told, that Chargois had done valuable work,
24 does that change your opinion?

Page 241

1 Let me ask you to assume the following
2 about the Lief Cabraser lawyers and what they
3 understood or believed about Mr. Chargois and the 4 role that he played in the State Street litigation.
5 One, the Lief Cabraser lawyers
6 understood that Chargois served as legitimate local
7 counsel to the Arkansas Teachers Fund.
8 A. Hold on. I'm going to --
9 Q. I'll give you plenty of time.
10 MS. LUKEY: Are you doing a whole series
11 so I can object once, or do I have to object each
12 time you say it?
13 MR. HEIMANN: You can have a standing
14 objection to everything I say.
15 THE SPECIAL MASTER: You can have a
16 standing objection.
17 BY MR. HEIMANN:
18 Q. Lief Cabraser understood that Chargois was 19 the legitimate bona fide local counsel to the 20 Arkansas Fund.
21 A. Okay.
22 Q. That he served as such with the express
23 knowledge and written approval of the Arkansas Fund.
24 (Pause.)

Page 247

[REDACTED]

Page 249

1 A. Okay.
2 Q. That he provided valuable legal services to 3 the fund and to the class in his role as local
4 counsel.
5 A. On this case?
6 Q. On this case, yes, specifically.
7 A. Okay.
8 Q. That both Labaton as lead counsel and the 9 Arkansas Fund as the lead class representative
10 regarded the fees to be paid to Chargois as fair and 11 reasonable and consistent with the value that 12 Chargois' services provided to the class and to the 13 benefits obtained on behalf of the class.
14 A. And consistent?
15 Q. With the value of his services and the value
16 of those services to the class and to the benefits
17 obtained for the class.
18 A. Okay.
19 Q. Now based on those assumptions --
20 A. Right.
21 Q. -- is it your opinion that the Lief
22 Cabraser lawyers violated their fiduciary or ethical 23 obligations in failing to proactively disclose to 24 the Court what they knew about Mr. Chargois?

Page 250

1 THE SPECIAL MASTER: May I just -- do we
2 have the deposition of Mr. Lieff available here?
3 MR. HEIMANN: The transcript?
4 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Correct.
5 MR. HEIMANN: I don't.
6 MS. McEVOY: I do.
7 THE SPECIAL MASTER: There was -- I
8 believe it might be helpful for Professor Gillers in 9 answering your question to know what Mr. Lieff's
10 view of "local counsel" was.
11 I believe I specifically asked him that,
12 and he gave a view. Because, as everybody will 13 remember, there was a lot of loose reference to 14 terms to identify Mr. Chargois. We had at least 15 five or six different terms --
16 MR. HEIMANN: Yeah, but those were not 17 terms that were related to us.
18 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I understand that
19 which is why I'm asking to find -- Mr. Lieff did
20 give his understanding of what local counsel meant
21 in his deposition, I believe.
22 MS. McEVOY: You just want those pages
23 are --
24 MR. HEIMANN: Well, I think there's a

Page 251

1 reference to it in the report that we've already
2 covered.
3 MR. LIEFF: I think you read it,
4 Richard. I'll try to find it.
5 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I may have asked
6 him if he understood now -- what I may have asked
7 him is understanding now what Mr. Chargois' role was 8 was that local counsel -- that may have been what I
9 may have asked him, and I thought he gave an answer
10 illumination on what thought local counsel was.
11 MR. HEIMANN: Well, and I don't have any 12 problem if we can dig it out, but I think the way I
13 characterized it is consistent with the testimony of 14 Mr. Lieff and Mr. Chiplock and is consistent with 15 what the written record reflects about what they 16 were told about Mr. Chargois.
17 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
18 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Let me just refresh
19 myself, okay?
20 MR. HEIMANN: Sure.
21 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Because the 22 definition that everybody is referring to for 23 purposes of your question, Richard, might be helpful
24 to Professor Gillers in determining --

Page 252

1 MR. HEIMANN: Well, it may be, but I'm
2 not limiting the Lieff Cabraser understanding of 3 Mr. Chargois to what -- to a snippet of what
4 Mr. Lieff may have said about that subject.
5 You have Mr. Chiplock testifying about
6 it. You have me testifying about it. You've got 7 Mr. Fineman testifying about it, among others.
8 (Pause.)
9 MR. LIEFF: Page 67 of the deposition.
10 MS. LUKEY: The deposition or in the 11 report?
12 MR. LIEFF: In the deposition 67. In 13 the report 44.
14 MS. LUKEY: Thank you.
15 (Pause.)
16 THE SPECIAL MASTER: There are a number
17 of times in the deposition when Mr. Lieff refers to 18 his understanding of local counsel, one of which is 19 when I asked him what was your understanding of what 20 the relationship between Mr. Chargois and Labaton, 21 Mr. Lieff said, "I thought he was local counsel for 22 Labaton in this particular case I assumed dealing
23 with Arkansas Fund because that's what local counsel
24 will do. That was my understanding."

Page 253

1 MR. HEIMANN: That's what I read earlier
2 in the examination.
3 MR. LIEFF: Yes.
4 MR. HEIMANN: I know this is in the
5 nature of argument so I don't want to go down this 6 road too far, but we have testimony from a number of 7 people about local counsel and the practice of local
8 counsel --
9 THE SPECIAL MASTER: We do.
10 BY MR. HEIMANN:
11 Q. I want to stick to the hypothetical that I
12 gave to you --
13 A. Fine.
14 Q. -- Professor Gillers.
15 A. So can I ask a clarification on the 16 hypothetical?
17 Q. Of course.
18 A. In the first assumption began "Lieff
19 understood that Chargois was." Right? Could we add 20 Lieff had a reasonable good faith understanding that 21 Chargois was?
22 Q. You may augment all of my proposed
23 assumptions with that clarifier.
24 A. Okay. And then ask me the final question

Page 254

1 again.
2 Q. In your opinion under those circumstances
3 did the Loeff Cabraser lawyers violate their ethical 4 duties in the way that they dealt with the Court,
5 first of all?
6 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
7 (Pause.)
8 A. Just to be clear, each of the assumptions is 9 made with regard to the State Street litigation?
10 Q. Yes indeed.
11 A. Yes. So the answer is no.
12 Q. Same question with respect to the Loeff
13 Cabraser lawyers' ethical obligation with respect to 14 disclosure in the notice to the class?
15 A. No.
16 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
17 MR. HEIMANN: I have nothing further.
18 Thank you.
19 THE SPECIAL MASTER: Brian, I think
20 you're next up. Anybody want to break first?
21 Paulette, I'm looking at you.
22 THE REPORTER: Just for a minute, that
23 would be great.
24 (A recess was taken.)

1 You yourself don't personally know
2 whether or not Garrett Bradley knowingly made any
3 false representations, do you?
4 A. That's correct.
5 Q. Okay. And a careless mistake does not equal
6 a knowing misrepresentation to a Court, does it?
7 A. It does not.
8 Q. And you've been quoted as saying -- and I
9 think it's in one of these exhibits we've already 10 seen -- "As law teachers we should not testify that 11 a lawyer's conduct did or did not transgress ethical 12 rules, unless we firmly believe that our opinion is
13 correct."
14 A. Are you quoting?
15 Q. I'm quoting from you, Stephen Gillers, "More 16 About Us: Another Take on the Abusive Use of Legal 17 Ethics Rules."
18 A. I accept your quote.
19 Q. Okay. So you have not concluded anything
20 about Garrett Bradley's mental state.
21 You're only relying upon an assumption
22 that was provided to you?
23 A. Correct.
24 Q. All right. So at the end of this report on

Page 270

[REDACTED]

Page 272

1 Q. -- from that case back in 2012.
2 A. Right.
3 Q. So --
4 A. So the mens rea in the New York version of 5 3.3(a) and (b) and (d) is knowledge.
6 Q. Right. And that means actual knowledge.
7 It's a subjective test?
8 A. That's right.
9 Q. And that's what the equivalent of what the 10 Mass. Rules are, correct?
11 A. Yes.
12 Q. So in order for somebody to violate that,
13 that person himself or herself has to know in his 14 own mind at the time he was doing something that he
15 was submitting false information to the Court?
16 A. He has to know that the information
17 submitted is false, right.
18 Q. So you agree then that a person's state of 19 mind is crucial to determining whether an attorney
20 is violating Rule 3.3?
21 A. Yes.
22 Q. And you've commented in the past that this
23 state of mind is very difficult to determine from a 24 paper record, right?

Page 271

1 information provided to the Court for the exercise
2 of its discretion is true.
3 A. Yes.
4 Q. I assume what you're referring to is Rule
5 11? Is that a fair assumption?
6 A. It says Rule 11.
7 Q. Okay. So I guess then that's a pretty fair
8 assumption?
9 A. Yes, it is.
10 Q. All right. So now you'd agree, sir, that 11 not every mistake a lawyer makes should be subject
12 to a Rule 11 sanction, correct?
13 A. Yes, I agree. Yes.
14 Q. All right. And are you aware that the first 15 circuit has in fact reversed a Rule 11 finding, even 16 though there were factually inaccurate and dubious
17 statements in an affidavit in a case that was 18 published in 2005 called Obert, O-B-E-R-T?
19 A. No.
20 Q. Are you aware of that case?
21 A. I'm not. I haven't heard of that case.
22 Q. Okay, I'll just cite it. 398 F.3d 138,
23 again the first circuit 2005, where the first
24 circuit reversed a Rule 11 finding, even though

Page 275

1 You're talking about under any
2 circumstances whatsoever. So I'm not prepared to
3 say yes. I would say ordinarily that would be yes,
4 but there are rules in the rules that actually don't
5 have a mens rea requirement.
6 Q. All right. Let's go to Rule 8.4. You cite
7 that as well in your opinion.
8 A. Right.
9 Q. Is the same mental state in your view
10 required for a violation of Rule 8.4; that is,
11 actual knowledge, and it's a subjective test?
12 A. The authorities are divided on that, and in 13 my view there should be actual knowledge of the 14 inaccuracy of the wrongness of a statement of fact
15 going forward.
16 Q. All right. In your view this particular
17 Rule 8.4 should not be read to expand or lower Rule
18 3.3's mens rea requirement --
19 A. Right.
20 Q. -- right?
21 A. Correct.
22 Q. All right. Now also on page 84 at the end
23 of your report you make a reference to federal law
24 separately requiring reasonable care to ensure the

3 Q. Is it sufficient to alert Arkansas that 4 other counsel may be paid for doing no work on the
5 case?
6 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
7 A. It does not -- it does not do that.
8 Q. My next question involves your testimony
9 about Rule 1.5(e), and I just want to read the first 10 sentence of it and get your understanding.
11 "A division of a fee between lawyers who 12 are not in the same firm may be made only if the 13 client is notified before or at the time the client
14 enters into a fee agreement for the matter that a 15 division of fees will be made and consents to the 16 joint participation in writing and the total fee is 17 reasonable."
18 My question to you is the conjunctive
19 piece of that at the end -- "and the total fee is 20 reasonable" -- does that read into the rule a 21 reasonableness requirement of the total fee relating 22 to the division of fees or something else?
23 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
24 A. I think it says that the total fee of the

Page 365

1 lawyers who are dividing the fee has to be
2 reasonable, and that is simply an echo, I suppose,
3 of Rule 1.5(a) which says fees cannot be clearly
4 excessive. Any one lawyer's fee cannot be clearly
5 excessive.
6 So to answer your question, the total --
7 the word "total" means when you add both lawyers'
8 fees together, it cannot be unreasonable for the 9 work performed. And if you want to look at any 10 single lawyer's fee vis-a-vis that lawyer's work to 11 determine whether it is a valid fee, you go to Rule
12 1.5(a).
13 Q. So the piece of the total fee covered by a 14 division of fee and the reasonableness read into the 15 rule is read not in one 1.5(e) but in 1.5(a)? Is 16 that your understanding?
17 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
18 A. 1.5(a) concerns any single lawyer or law
19 firm's fee. 1.5(e) may result in two lawyers
20 working on a matter.
21 There are two requirements. One is that 22 their fee -- the fee of both of them when added
23 together has to be reasonable for that matter.
24 The second requirement is that the fee

Page 366

1 for each of them has to satisfy the "not clearly
2 unreasonable" requirement at 1.5(a) -- "clearly
3 excessive" requirement of 1.5(a).
4 Q. So which of those rules, if either, as to 5 the reasonableness or not clearly excessiveness
6 would apply to Mr. Chargois -- the Chargois
7 Arrangement, if either of them?
8 A. They both do. Rule 1.5(e) applies to the 9 Chargois Arrangement if there were a valid division
10 of fee agreement, and then you look at the total
11 fee. Now --
12 Q. And I think you testified that -- so the 13 total fee, would that be the total 75 million
14 dollars in this case?
15 A. That's right.
16 Q. And I think you testified in response to a 17 number of questions that that total fee itself was 18 not unreasonable based upon what you knew?
19 A. Right. Actually, the total fee -- since 20 some of that 75 million dollars went to other than 21 class counsel, the total is probably less than 75
22 million.
23 So that -- that will be an application
24 of Rule 1.5(e). And then separately you would look

Page 367

1 at 1.5(a) for any individual lawyer.
2 Q. So are you saying then that Rule 1.5(a) and 3 the requirement that there not be an excessive -- a
4 clearly excessive fee applies to the Chargois
5 Arrangement and the payment under that arrangement
6 to Mr. Chargois of 4.1 million dollars?
7 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
8 A. Yes, because you don't -- you don't escape
9 the constraints of 1.5(a) by bundling multiple 10 lawyers into a division of fee agreement, even if 11 the total is not unreasonable.
12 Q. Okay. I think I understand your opinion and 13 your testimony.
14 A. You will when you read it.
15 Q. All right. I think I understand it. But 16 let me try to summarize it --
17 A. You want an example?
18 Q. Sure.
19 A. Okay. So Jane and June have a valid
20 division of fee agreement under Rule 1.5(e) in 21 Massachusetts. Together they're going to get a
22 hundred dollars for their work. A hundred dollars
23 is a reasonable amount for that work.
24 1.5(e) is satisfied.

Page 368

1 However, Jane is going -- Jane who did 4
2 percent of the work is going to get 95 percent of
3 the fee. And so she has to satisfy Rule 1.5(a)
4 prohibition against clearly excessive fees.
5 Q. Okay. So I'm going to take it piece by 6 piece just to make sure I understand it and
7 everybody understands your opinion.
8 A. Okay.
9 Q. Rule 1.5(a) and Rule 1.5(e) should be read
10 in tandem?
11 A. Absolutely.
12 Q. And the reasonableness of the fee in Rule
13 1.5(e) applies to the total fee; is that right?
14 A. Yes.
15 Q. And in looking at individual fees within the 16 total fee, we look to 1.5(a) to determine if that 17 fee is clearly excessive?
18 A. Correct.
19 Q. And then 1.5(a) sets out eight different
20 factors for a factfinder or a judge or, I suppose a 21 special master, to look at to determine if the fee
22 in question is excessive?
23 A. That's right. There's a list of factors 24 that's been around for a very long time that inform

Page 369

1 the standard of clearly excessive.
2 Clearly excessive is a term in 1.5(a)
3 that varies from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. Some 4 say reasonable or excessive without "clearly."
5 Q. Okay. I'm going to ask you the obvious
6 question that I think the lawyers will want to ask
7 you, and I'm building here upon Mr. Heimann's
8 questions that it is standard practice in the class
9 action field --
10 THE SPECIAL MASTER: I'm not sure,
11 Richard, if you qualified it further by saying
12 securities litigation. I'll accept that if you
13 want.
14 Q. -- for lawyers to receive so-called referral
15 fees of as much as 20 percent for not doing any 16 work.
17 Does that call into question in any way
18 whether or not Rule 1.5(a) is implicated where it's 19 a class action and the fees are coming from the 20 common fund?
21 A. Standard practice cannot change the meaning
22 of a rule. So it doesn't call into question 1.5(a).
23 Q. I'm not sure I understood your answer --
24 A. You asked --

Page 370

1 Q. Well, let me -- are you saying just because 2 it might be standard practice doesn't mean that
3 1.5(a) and a potential violation is not implicated?
4 Is that what you're stating?
5 A. Yes, that's what I'm saying.
6 Q. Putting it another way, if Mr. Heimann is 7 correct and this is standard practice for a 20
8 percent fee to be paid to a lawyer who did no work
9 as a "referral fee," what would your opinion be as 10 to whether or not that implicates the prohibitions
11 on rule -- in Rule 1.5(a) and clearly excessive
12 fees?
13 A. Given the amounts involved in successful
14 class actions resulting in Court-awarded fees, it's 15 hard to imagine that a judge would conclude that a 16 sizable fee for -- for me a referral or 17 recommendation would not be clearly excessive.
18 But we would need the facts of the case.
19 Q. Would a judge be able to make that 20 determination if it was not disclosed to him or her?
21 MS. LUKEY: Objection.
22 A. Um, well, of course, you cannot -- you
23 cannot adjudicate an issue that you do not know
24 about. So the answer is no.

DECLARATION OF ERIC J. MILLER ON BEHALF OF A.B. DATA, LTD.
REGARDING MAILING OF NOTICE TO SETTLEMENT CLASS MEMBERS AND PUBLICATION OF SUMMARY NOTICE

I, Eric J. Miller, declare as follows, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1746:

1. I am a Vice President of A.B. Data, Ltd.'s Class Action Administration Division ("A.B. Data"), whose Corporate Office is located in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Pursuant to the Order Granting Preliminary Approval of Class Action Settlement, Approving Form and Manner of Notice, and Setting Date for Hearing on Final Approval of Settlement, entered on August 11, 2016 (the "Preliminary Approval Order"),<sup>1</sup> A.B. Data was authorized to act as the Claims Administrator in connection with the Settlement in the above-captioned actions. I am over 21 years of age and am not a party to this action. I have personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein and, if called as a witness, could and would testify competently thereto.

MAILING OF THE NOTICE

2. Pursuant to the Preliminary Approval Order, A.B. Data mailed the Notice of Pendency of Class Actions, Proposed Class Settlement, Settlement Hearing, Plan of Allocation, and Any Motion for Attorneys' Fees, Litigation Expenses, and Service Awards (the "Notice"), along with a cover letter, to Settlement Class Members identified as such by counsel for State Street Bank and Trust Company. Class Members categorized as a "Group Trust" received a cover letter concerning their identification as such and non-Group Trusts received a generic cover letter. Copies of the cover letters and Notice are attached hereto as Exhibit A.

3. On July 27, 2016, A.B. Data received 9,610 records of names and address information for Settlement Class Members identified by counsel for State Street Bank and Trust Company, some which represented multiple funds.

4. Once received, the data was processed by A.B. Data to ensure adequate address formatting and aggregated to identify overlapping addresses, of which 7,689 were identified, resulting in 1,921 distinct records for mailing (the “Mailing List”). A.B. Data also standardized and updated the Mailing List addresses using NCOALink®, a national database of address changes that is compiled by the United States Postal Service.

---

<sup>1</sup> All capitalized terms used herein that are not defined have the same meaning as that provided in the Stipulation and Agreement of Settlement, dated July 26, 2016.

5. On August 22, 2016, A.B. Data caused the Notice to be mailed by first class mail to the Settlement Class Members included on the Mailing List.

6. As of the date of this Declaration, 380 Notices were returned by the United States Postal Service to A.B. Data as undeliverable as addressed (“UAA”). Of those returned UAA, 2 had forwarding addresses and were promptly re-mailed to the updated address. The remaining 378 UAAs were processed through LexisNexis to obtain an updated address. Of these, 47 new addresses were obtained and A.B. Data promptly re-mailed to these Settlement Class Members.

7. As of the date of this Declaration, a total of 1,970 Notices have been mailed to Settlement Class Members.

PUBLICATION OF THE SUMMARY NOTICE

8. In accordance with Paragraph 9 of the Preliminary Approval Order, on September 6, 2016, A.B. Data caused the Summary Notice of Pendency of Class Actions, Proposed Settlement, Settlement Hearing, Plan of Allocation, and any Motion for Attorneys’ Fees, Litigation Expenses, and Service Awards (“Publication Notice”) to be published in The Wall Street Journal and to be disseminated over the internet via PR Newswire. Proof of this publication is attached hereto as Exhibits B and C, respectively.

NOTICE TO “GROUP TRUST” CUSTOMERS OF STATE STREET BANK AND TRUST COMPANY (“SSBT”)
State Street Indirect FX Trading Class Action,
Case No. 11-cv-10230 MLW (D. Mass.)

A proposed Settlement of the above-noted class action (the “Class Action”) has been reached and enclosed is a copy of the Notice of Pendency of Class Actions, Proposed Class Settlement, Settlement Hearing, Plan of Allocation, and any Motion for Attorneys’ Fees, Litigation Expenses, and Service Awards (“Notice”). PLEASE READ THE NOTICE CAREFULLY.

You have been identified by SSBT as, or as representing, the entity (entities) listed below, each of which has been identified as a “Group Trust” customer of SSBT.

The Court has ordered Group Trust customers to provide a certification: (1) reporting the average proportion of the Group Trust’s SSBT custodied assets that were held by an ERISA Plan or Plans during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive (the “Class Period”) and/or (2) reporting the average volume of Indirect FX Trades made by the ERISA Plan(s) during the Class Period, and (3) identifying by name each ERISA Plan within the Group Trust.

The certification must be signed by a plan fiduciary or administrator and state that he, she, or it certifies that the information contained within the certification is accurate based on reasonably available information. The certification must be mailed or delivered so that it is postmarked or received no later than December 20, 2016, to:

State Street Indirect FX Trading Class Action
Claims Administrator
c/o A.B. Data, Ltd.
P.O. Box 173000
Milwaukee, WI 53217

Upon request from the Claims Administrator, a Group Trust must promptly provide sufficient information to explain and confirm its certification. Pages 10-11 of the Notice contain more information about the certification process. The certifications are needed so that the Claims Administrator can properly allocate the Class Settlement and calculate individual recoveries. There is no claim process.

If you have any questions, you may contact the Claims Administrator at 877-240-3540, or by email at info@StateStreetIndirectFXClassSettlement.com. Thank you for your cooperation.

NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF CLASS ACTIONS, PROPOSED CLASS SETTLEMENT, SETTLEMENT HEARING, PLAN OF ALLOCATION, AND ANY MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS’ FEES, LITIGATION EXPENSES, AND SERVICE AWARDS

A U.S. Federal Court authorized this Notice. This is not a solicitation from a lawyer.

You Are Receiving this Notice Because Available Information Indicates that You Are a Member of the Settlement Class Defined Below.

If this Is Incorrect, Please Contact the Claims Administrator and Lead Counsel Immediately.

This notice (“Notice”) is being sent to advise you of the pendency of the above-captioned class action lawsuits (collectively, the “Class Actions”) and the proposed settlement of the Class Actions for $300,000,000 (the “Class Settlement Amount”) on the terms discussed below (the “Class Settlement”).<sup>1</sup> The Class Settlement resolves claims arising from the alleged unfair and deceptive practice of State Street Bank and Trust Company (“SSBT”) of charging custody and trust customers of SSBT excessive rates and spreads in connection with certain foreign exchange transactions known as “Indirect FX Transactions”<sup>2</sup> during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive (the “Class Period”), in violation of SSBT’s statutory, contractual, and fiduciary obligations. The Class Actions sought to recover losses on behalf of SSBT’s custodial clients based on this alleged unfair and deceptive practice. If approved, the Class Settlement will resolve all claims asserted in the Class Actions.

The Class Settlement is entered into by and among (i) plaintiffs Arkansas Teacher Retirement System (“ARTRS”), Arnold Henriquez, Michael T. Cohn, William R. Taylor, Richard A. Sutherland, The Andover Companies Employees Savings and Profit Sharing Plan, and James Pehoushek-Stangeland (collectively, “Plaintiffs”), on behalf of themselves and each Settlement Class Member, by and through their counsel, and (ii) State Street Bank and Trust Company (the “Settling Defendant” or “SSBT”). Plaintiffs and SSBT are referred to collectively herein as the “Parties.”

The Honorable Mark L. Wolf of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts (the “Court”) is presiding over the Class Actions. Judge Wolf has provisionally certified the proposed Settlement Class (as defined below) for purposes of settlement only, has directed that this Notice be mailed to members of the Settlement Class, and has scheduled a Final Approval Hearing (“Final Approval Hearing” or “Settlement Hearing”) at which the Court will consider Plaintiffs’ motion for final approval of the Class Settlement and approval of the proposed plan for allocating the settlement proceeds to the Settlement Class (“Plan of Allocation”), and Lead Counsel’s motion, on behalf of ERISA Counsel and Customer Counsel, for an award of attorneys’ fees, payment of Litigation Expenses, and payment of any Service Awards for Plaintiffs. The Final Approval Hearing will be held on November 2, 2016, at 2:00 p.m. in Courtroom 10 of the John Joseph Moakley United States Courthouse, 1 Courthouse Way, Boston, Massachusetts

<sup>1</sup> All capitalized terms used in this Notice that are not otherwise defined herein have the meanings provided in the Stipulation and Agreement of Settlement, dated as of July 26, 2016 (the “Settlement Agreement”). The Settlement Agreement is available on the website for this Settlement, www.StateStreetIndirectFXClassSettlement.com.

<sup>2</sup> “Indirect FX Transactions/Trading” means Foreign exchange transactions executed with SSBT or SSBT’s subcustodians at any time using Indirect FX Methods, including all foreign exchange transactions submitted using Indirect Methods. A transaction submitted or processed using an Indirect Method is an Indirect FX Transaction regardless whether the rate at which the transaction was executed differed from the rates at which other transactions submitted using Indirect Methods were executed. Settlement Agreement ¶ 1(ff).

02210. The Class Settlement will become effective once it reaches its Effective Date, which is after the opportunity to appeal the Court’s Judgment has expired or, if there are any appeals, approval of the Class Settlement is upheld; after the Court approves the proposed Plan of Allocation and the order has become Final; and certain other conditions are met.

Additional information regarding the Class Settlement and this Notice may be obtained by contacting the Claims Administrator: State Street Indirect FX Trading Class Action, c/o A.B. DO NOT CALL THE COURT WITH QUESTIONS ABOUT THE CLASS SETTLEMENT.

PLEASE READ THIS NOTICE CAREFULLY AND COMPLETELY. IF YOU ARE A MEMBER OF THE SETTLEMENT CLASS, YOUR LEGAL RIGHTS ARE AFFECTED WHETHER YOU ACT OR DO NOT ACT.

YOUR LEGAL RIGHTS AND OPTIONS UNDER THE CLASS SETTLEMENT
YOU DO NOT NEED TO TAKE ANY ACTION TO PARTICIPATE IN THE CLASS SETTLEMENT AND RECEIVE A PAYMENT (If you represent a Group Trust,<sup>3</sup> see pages 10-11 below.)	If the Class Settlement is approved and you are a member of the Settlement Class, you do not need to take any action to receive a payment. You will be bound by the settlement, unless you take steps to exclude yourself as explained below, and you cannot bring or be part of any other lawsuit or arbitration against Defendants or any of the other Released Defendant Parties based on any Released Class Claim. Your portion of the Net Class Settlement Fund will be calculated as part of the administration of the Class Settlement. An explanation of the manner in which payments to Settlement Class Members will be determined is set forth in the Plan of Allocation, below. However, Group Trusts, which may include plans or assets governed by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (“ERISA”), need to provide certain information so that their recovery can be properly determined. SSBT has agreed to undertake reasonable efforts to provide the information necessary to determine each Settlement Class Member’s portion of the Net Class Settlement Fund. See the Plan of Allocation in the answer to Question 8 below for important information.
EXCLUDE YOURSELF FROM THE SETTLEMENT CLASS BY SUBMITTING A WRITTEN REQUEST FOR EXCLUSION (WHICH MUST BE RECEIVED NO LATER THAN OCTOBER 7, 2016)	If you do not wish to be a member of the Settlement Class, you must exclude yourself (as described below in Question 10). If you exclude yourself, you will not receive any payment from the Class Settlement. You cannot bring or be part of any other lawsuit or arbitration against Defendants or any of the other Released Defendant Parties based on any Released Class Claim unless you exclude yourself from the Settlement Class.
OBJECT TO THE CLASS SETTLEMENT BY SUBMITTING A WRITTEN OBJECTION (WHICH MUST BE RECEIVED NO LATER THAN OCTOBER 7, 2016)	If you wish to object to any part of the Class Settlement, the Plan of Allocation, or the requests for attorneys’ fees, Litigation Expenses, and/or Service Awards, and do not exclude yourself from the Settlement Class, you can write to the Court and counsel and explain what you do not agree with.
ATTEND THE FINAL APPROVAL HEARING (NOVEMBER 2, 2016 AT 2:00 p.m.)	If you have submitted a written objection to the Court and counsel and notice to appear, as explained below, you may (but do not have to) attend the hearing and speak to the Court about your objection.

Please note: The Court has the authority to change any of the above deadlines, for good cause shown.

<sup>3</sup> “Group Trusts” are group trusts that are exempt from tax pursuant to Internal Revenue Service Revenue Ruling 81-100, as amended, that were custody or trust customers of SSBT during any part of the Class Period. See Settlement Agreement ¶ 1(bb).

As described in more detail below, and in the complaints filed with the Court, the Class Actions allege that Plaintiffs (or the plans they represent) and/or their investment managers entered into agreements authorizing Defendants to engage in Indirect FX Transactions with their custodial accounts under certain circumstances. Plaintiffs alleged that SSBT priced Indirect FX Transactions in a manner advantageous to Defendants and disadvantageous to Plaintiffs, near or outside the high and low of the daily range of interbank rates, contrary to SSBT's contractual obligations and representations and Defendants' fiduciary and statutory responsibilities. Copies of the operative complaints in the Class Actions are available at www.StateStreetIndirectFXClassSettlement.com.

Pursuant to the Settlement Agreement, a Class Settlement Fund consisting of $300 million in cash, plus any accrued interest, has been established, in exchange for the Settlement Class's release of the Released Class Claims (defined below). Payment by or on behalf of SSBT of the $300 million Class Settlement Amount, and the allocations discussed below in the Plan of Allocation, will also satisfy conditions in two separate settlements with federal government agencies.<sup>4</sup> SSBT anticipates reaching a settlement with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") concerning Indirect FX that relates to Settlement Class Members that are Registered Investment Companies (the "SEC Settlement").<sup>5</sup> SSBT has also reached a settlement with the U.S. Department of Labor ("DOL") concerning Indirect FX that relates to Settlement Class Members that are ERISA Plans (the "DOL Settlement").<sup>6</sup>

Based on information provided by SSBT, the average gross recovery for a class member from the Class Settlement is approximately $200,000 before the deduction of Court-approved fees and expenses. A Settlement Class Member's actual "Recognized Claim" will be calculated in accordance with the Plan of Allocation, explained below, and will depend on, among other things, the Settlement Class Member's volume of Indirect FX Transactions, and whether or not the Settlement Class Member is an ERISA Plan, a Group Trust, a Registered Investment Company, or none of these. A Settlement Class Member's payment will be a portion of the Net Class Settlement Fund, which consists of the Class Settlement Fund, less fees and expenses associated with providing notice to the Settlement Class and administering the Class Settlement ("Notice and Administration Expenses"), Taxes and Tax Expenses, Court-approved attorneys' fees, Litigation Expenses, and any Service Awards to Plaintiffs for the effort and time spent by them in connection with the prosecution of the Class Actions. (See Questions 6 and 8 below for details about the Plan of Allocation).

The Settlement Class is defined as follows:

All custody and trust customers of SSBT (including customers for which SSBT served as directed trustee, ERISA Plans, and Group Trusts), reflected in SSBT's records as having a United States tax address at any time during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive, and that executed one or more Indirect FX Transactions with SSBT and/or its subcustodians during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive.

Please Note: There are exceptions to being included in the Settlement Class. A description of those Persons excluded by definition from the Settlement Class is provided below in Question 4.

As with any litigation, the Parties face an uncertain outcome if the Class Actions do not settle and litigation continues. Absent the Class Settlement, orders and appeals on class certification, summary judgment and a trial could result in a judgment or verdict greater or less than the recovery under the Class Settlement, or no recovery at all. Throughout the Class Actions, the Plaintiffs and Defendants have disagreed on both liability and damages, and they do not agree on the amount that would be recoverable even if the Plaintiffs were to prevail at trial. Defendants, among other things: (1) have

---

<sup>4</sup> SSBT has separately reached a settlement with the U.S. Department of Justice ("DOJ") concerning Indirect FX (the "DOJ Settlement"). The DOJ Settlement requires SSBT to pay money to the federal government.

<sup>5</sup> "Registered Investment Company(ies)" means a mutual fund, closed-end fund, unit investment trust or other entity that is registered with the SEC as an investment company under the Investment Company Act. Settlement Agreement ¶ 1(ww).

<sup>6</sup> "ERISA Plans" means the employee benefit plans as defined in 29 U.S.C. § 1002(3) (also referred to as Section 3(3) of ERISA), that are subject to Part 4 of Subtitle B of Title I of ERISA (including master trusts with respect to multiple such plans within the meaning of Department of Labor Regulation § 2520.103-1(e)), and that were custody or trust customers of SSBT during any part of the Class Period. Settlement Agreement ¶ 1(w).

denied the material allegations of the Complaints; (2) have denied any wrongdoing or liability whatsoever; (3) have contested the propriety of class certification; (4) believe that they acted at all times reasonably and prudently, in full compliance with their contractual obligations, and in accordance with applicable law; and (5) would assert certain other defenses if this Class Settlement is not consummated. SSBT is entering into the Class Settlement solely to avoid the cost, disruption, and uncertainty of continued litigation. The Parties have taken into account the uncertainty and risks inherent in these litigations, particularly their complex natures, and have concluded that it is desirable that the Class Actions be fully and finally settled on the terms and conditions set forth in the Class Settlement.

Lead Counsel, on behalf of ERISA Counsel and Customer Counsel, will apply to the Court for an order awarding attorneys' fees in an amount not to exceed $74,541,250.00 and payment of Litigation Expenses in an amount not to exceed $1,750,000.00, plus interest earned on these amounts. As explained further in the Plan of Allocation set forth in Question 8 below, no more than $10,900,000.00 of the attorneys' fees awarded will be paid out of the ERISA Settlement Allocation (as defined below). The remainder of attorneys' fees awarded will be paid out from the RIC Settlement Allocation and the Public and Other Settlement Allocation (both as defined below). If the Court awards attorneys' fees at an overall percentage rate of more than 18.17%, the RIC Settlement Allocation and the Public and Other Settlement Allocation will each bear fees at a higher percentage rate than the ERISA Settlement Allocation. If the Court awards attorneys' fees at an overall percentage rate of 18.17% or less, the three Settlement Allocations (ERISA, RIC, and Public and Other) will each bear fees at the same rate.

Plaintiffs will share in the allocation of the money paid to members of the Settlement Class on the same basis and to the same extent as all other members of the Settlement Class, except that, in addition thereto, Plaintiffs may apply to the Court for Service Awards of up to $85,000.00 in the aggregate. Any Service Awards granted to Plaintiffs by the Court will be payable from the Class Settlement Fund, and will compensate Plaintiffs for their effort and time spent in connection with the prosecution of the Class Actions.

BASIC INFORMATION

1. Why did I receive this Notice?

You received this Notice because records provided by SSBT indicate that during the Class Period you were a domestic custody customer of SSBT that executed one or more Indirect FX Transactions during the Class Period. The Court has directed that this Notice be sent to you. If the Court approves the Class Settlement, and it becomes effective, the Released Defendant Parties and Released Plaintiff Parties will be released from all Released Class Claims and Released Prosecution Claims, respectively, as explained below. In exchange, the Net Class Settlement Fund will be distributed to Settlement Class Members according to the Court-approved Plan of Allocation.

This Notice explains the Class Actions, the Class Settlement, your legal rights, what benefits are available, who is eligible for them, and how you will receive your portion of the Net Class Settlement Fund. The Final Approval Hearing will be held on November 2, 2016 at 2:00 p.m., before the Hon. Mark L. Wolf in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, John Joseph Moakley United States Courthouse, Courtroom 10, 1 Courthouse Way, Boston, Massachusetts 02210, to determine:

- whether the Class Settlement should be approved as fair, reasonable, and adequate;
- whether the complaints should be dismissed with prejudice pursuant to the terms of the Class Settlement;
- whether the proposed Plan of Allocation for the proceeds of the Class Settlement should be approved; and
- whether the applications for attorneys' fees, payment of Litigation Expenses, and payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs should be approved.

The issuance of this Notice is not an expression of the Court's opinion of the merits of any claim in the Class Actions, and the Court has not decided whether to approve the Class Settlement. If the Court approves the Class Settlement, payment to Settlement Class Members will be made after all related appeals, if any, are favorably resolved and the regulatory settlements have become final. Please be patient.

2. What are the Class Actions about? What has happened so far?

The Class Actions were commenced in 2011 and 2012 by the filing of three class action complaints. In the Class Actions, Plaintiffs allege, among other things, that Defendants charged custody and trust customers of SSBT excessive rates and spreads in connection with Indirect FX Transactions between January 2, 1998 and December 31, 2009. Plaintiffs allege that by employing this unfair and deceptive practice, Defendants earned higher spreads on Indirect FX Transactions than they should have. Further, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants failed to disclose this pricing. Plaintiffs assert that this alleged unfair and deceptive practice and nondisclosure thereof constituted violations of the Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act, Mass. Gen. Laws Ch. 93A, §§ 2, 9 and 11 (“Chapter 93A”), breach of an alleged fiduciary duty, and negligent misrepresentation, and, with respect to the ERISA Funds, violations of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1106, for engaging in self-interested prohibited transactions and by causing the plans to engage in party in interest prohibited transactions, violations of ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1104, for breaching duties of prudence and loyalty, and pursuant to ERISA, 29 U.S.C. § 1105, liability for breaches of co-fiduciary obligations.

Defendants have denied Plaintiffs’ allegations. If the Class Actions were to continue, Defendants would raise numerous defenses to liability, including without limitation:

- Defendants acted in accordance with the custody and trust and Indirect FX agreements and did not breach them.
- Defendants either did not owe fiduciary duties or did not breach fiduciary duties owed to certain Settlement Class Members based on state law and the plain language of the agreements that governed Defendants’ custodial obligations.
- Defendants made no actionable misrepresentations or omissions, and did not engage in any Chapter 93A violations.
- All of the FX transactions executed with ERISA customers satisfy statutory or regulatory exemptions for FX transactions.
- Plaintiffs and the Settlement Class knew, or should have known, that Defendants were engaged in the Indirect FX pricing practice alleged in the Complaints.
- Plaintiffs and the Settlement Class were not damaged by Defendants’ conduct and received the benefit of the bargain for the services that were provided.

On June 3, 2011, Defendants State Street Corporation, SSBT, and SSGM LLC moved to dismiss the amended class action complaint in the ARTRS Action. The motion to dismiss was fully briefed as of February 28, 2012. On April 9, 2012, SSBT and SSGM LLC moved to dismiss the amended class action complaint in the Henriquez Action.

On May 8, 2012, the Court heard oral argument on Defendants’ motion to dismiss the ARTRS Action. By order issued from the bench dated the same day, the Court denied the motion in its entirety with regard to the claims against SSBT, but granted the motion with respect to the claims against State Street Corporation. By agreement of the parties, the claims against SSGM LLC were dismissed without prejudice.

On November 16, 2012, the Parties in the Class Actions filed a Stipulation, Joint Motion, and Proposed Order for the Production and Exchange of Confidential Information, which the Court entered on November 20, 2012. Pursuant to the order, the Class Actions were consolidated for pre-trial purposes. Additionally, the order provided that the Parties could engage in formal document discovery until December 1, 2013. The Class Actions were stayed in all other respects until December 1, 2013 and certain motions were withdrawn. At the Parties’ request, the stay of proceedings, other than discovery, was subsequently extended by orders of the Court, while the Parties pursued mediation.

The Class Settlement is the product of protracted, arm’s-length negotiations between Plaintiffs’ Counsel and Defendants’ Counsel, facilitated by a nationally recognized mediator with substantial experience mediating complex litigations of this type. Between October 2012 and June 2015, the Parties engaged in sixteen (16) in-person mediation sessions in Boston, New York City, and Washington, D.C. In addition, the Parties met without the mediator and had numerous arm’s-length discussions among themselves.

Pursuant to agreements concerning the exchange of formal document discovery, informal material to facilitate the mediation process, and managing the Class Actions, the Parties exchanged more than nine million pages of relevant documents. SSBT also provided a significant amount of data and other information relevant to liability, class certification and damages issues, and Plaintiffs and SSBT each made multiple, detailed presentations (including a presentation by an accounting expert) during the mediation process concerning such issues.

On June 30, 2015, Plaintiffs and SSBT reached an agreement-in-principle to settle the Class Actions, which was memorialized in a term sheet on September 11, 2015, and the Settlement Agreement, dated July 26, 2016.

3. Why is this case a class action?

In a class action, one or more individuals or entities, referred to as “Plaintiffs,” sue on behalf of others who have similar claims. All of the Persons on whose behalf Plaintiffs in the Class Actions are suing are members of the “class” referred to in this Notice, and are “Settlement Class Members” or “members of the Settlement Class.” Bringing a case as a class action allows the adjudication of many similar claims that might be economically too small to bring individually. One court resolves the issues for all class members, except for those who exclude themselves from the class. The Court will decide whether to finally certify the Settlement Class at the Final Approval Hearing.

4. How do I know whether I am part of the Settlement Class?

The Court has provisionally certified the following Settlement Class:

All custody and trust customers of SSBT (including customers for which SSBT served as directed trustee, ERISA Plans, and Group Trusts), reflected in SSBT’s records as having a United States tax address at any time during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive, and that executed one or more Indirect FX Transactions with SSBT and/or its subcustodians during the period from January 2, 1998 through December 31, 2009, inclusive.

The “Settlement Class” does not include: Defendants; California Public Employees’ Retirement System (CalPERS), California State Teachers’ Retirement System (CalSTRS), and the State of Washington Investment Board; the predecessors and affiliates of the foregoing, or any entity in which they have a controlling interest; and the officers, directors, legal representatives, heirs, successors, subsidiaries and/or assigns of any such excluded individual or entity in their capacities as such. For the avoidance of doubt, the Parties have agreed that this definition of the “Settlement Class” is intended to supersede the class definitions in the complaints in the Class Actions.

The “Settlement Class” also does not include any Person who submits a timely and valid request for exclusion meeting the requirements in this Notice (see Question 10 below).

If you are not sure whether you are included, you can ask for assistance. You can call 877-240-3540 or visit www.StateStreetIndirectFXClassSettlement.com for more information.

5. Why is there a Class Settlement?

The Court did not finally decide in favor of Plaintiffs or Defendants. Instead, both sides agreed to a settlement. Plaintiffs and Plaintiffs’ Counsel believe that the claims asserted in the Class Actions have merit. They recognize, however, the expense and length of continued proceedings necessary to pursue the claims through trial and appeals, as well as the difficulties in establishing liability. They have considered the uncertain outcome and the risk of any litigation, especially in complex lawsuits like this one, as well as the unique risks here. Defendants have raised a number of arguments and defenses (which they would raise at summary judgment and trial) that could limit or result in the dismissal of the claims and a reduction in any recovery. In the absence of a Settlement, the Parties would present factual and expert testimony on such issues, and there is considerable risk that the Court or jury would resolve the inevitable “battle of the experts” against Plaintiffs and the Settlement Class.

As stated above, the Class Settlement is the product of extensive arm’s-length negotiations between Plaintiffs’ Counsel and Defendants’ Counsel, all of whom are very experienced with respect to complex litigation of this type. The Class

Settlement provides substantial benefits now as compared to the risk that a similar or smaller recovery would be achieved after trial and appeals, years in the future, or that no recovery would be achieved at all. In light of the amount of the Class Settlement and the immediate recovery to the Settlement Class, Plaintiffs and Plaintiffs' Counsel believe that the proposed Class Settlement is fair, reasonable and adequate, and in the best interests of the Settlement Class.

6. What does the Class Settlement provide?

In exchange for the Class Settlement and the release of the Released Class Claims (defined below) against the Released Defendant Parties (defined below), SSBT agreed to create a $300,000,000 cash fund. The $300,000,000, plus any interest that accrues on this amount, will be distributed to the Settlement Class after costs, expenses and fees are deducted, as described herein. The Class Settlement provides for cash payments to Settlement Class Members who do not exclude themselves from the Settlement Class, as explained in the Plan of Allocation in Question 8 below.

The description of the Class Settlement in this Notice is only a summary. The complete terms are set forth in the Settlement Agreement (including its exhibits), which may be obtained at the Class Settlement website, www.StateStreetIndirectFXClassSettlement.com, or Lead Counsel's website, www.labaton.com.

7. What am I giving up to get a payment and by staying in the Settlement Class?

Unless you exclude yourself, you will stay in the Settlement Class, which means that upon the "Effective Date" of the Class Settlement, you will release all "Released Class Claims" (as defined below) against the "Released Defendant Parties" (as defined below) and be subject to a covenant not to sue and a permanent injunction against prosecuting Released Class Claims against Released Defendant Parties.

"Released Class Claims" means any and all claims, demands, losses, costs, interest, penalties, fees, attorneys' fees, expenses, rights, rights of recovery, causes of action, duties, obligations, judgments, actions, debts, sums of money, suits, contracts, agreements, promises, damages, and liabilities of every nature and description, including Unknown Claims, whether known or unknown, direct, representative, class, individual or indirect, asserted or unasserted, matured or unmatured, accrued or unaccrued, foreseen or unforeseen, disclosed or undisclosed, contingent or fixed or vested, accrued or not accrued, at law or equity, whether arising under federal, state, local, foreign, statutory, common, administrative or any other law, statute, rule or regulation that any Releasing Plaintiff: (i) asserted in the Class Actions; (ii) could have asserted in the Class Actions or any other action or in any forum, that arise from or out of, relate to, or are in connection with the claims, allegations, transactions, alleged or actual prohibited transactions or breaches of duty (including fiduciary duty), facts, events, acts, disclosures, matters or occurrences, statements, representations or omissions or failures to act involved, described, set forth, or referred to in the complaints filed in the Class Actions or that arise from or out of, relate to, or are in connection with Indirect FX Methods, Indirect FX Transactions/Trading, StreetFX Methods, StreetFX Transactions, or Rate Comparisons; and (iii) asserted or could assert that arise from or out of, relate to, or are in connection with the defense or settlement of the Class Actions, except for claims relating to enforcement of the Settlement.

"Released Defendant Parties" means SSBT and Defendants; their past, present and future parents, subsidiaries, divisions, and affiliates; the respective past and present officers, directors, trustees, employees, agents, trustees, managers, servants, accountants, auditors, underwriters, financial and investment advisors, consultants, representatives, insurers, co-insurers and reinsurers of each of them; and the heirs, successors and assigns of the foregoing.

"Unknown Claims" means any and all Released Class Claims, which one or more Releasing Plaintiffs does not know or suspect to exist in his, her, or its favor at the time of the release of the Released Defendant Parties, and any Released Prosecution Claims that SSBT or any other Released Defendant Party does not know or suspect to exist in his, her, or its favor at the time of the release of the Released Plaintiff Parties, which if known to him, her, or it might have affected his, her, or its decision(s) with respect to the Class Settlement. With respect to any and all Released Class Claims and Released Prosecution Claims, the Parties stipulate and agree that, upon the Effective Date, Plaintiffs and SSBT shall expressly, and each Releasing Plaintiff and SSBT shall be deemed to have, and by operation of the Judgment or any Alternative Judgment shall have, expressly waived and relinquished any and all provisions, rights, and benefits conferred by any law of any state or territory of the United States or any other jurisdiction, or principle of common law that is, or is similar, comparable, or equivalent to California Civil Code § 1542, which provides:

A general release does not extend to claims which the creditor does not know or suspect to exist in his or her favor at the time of executing the release, which if known by him or her must have materially affected his or her settlement with the debtor.

Releasing Plaintiffs, SSBT, or the other Released Defendant Parties may hereafter discover facts, legal theories, or authorities in addition to or different from those which he, she, or it now knows or believes to be true with respect to the subject matter of the Released Class Claims and the Released Prosecution Claims, but Plaintiffs and SSBT shall expressly, fully, finally, and forever settle and release, and each other Releasing Plaintiff and each other Released Defendant Party shall be deemed to have settled and released, and upon the Effective Date and by operation of the Judgment or any Alternative Judgment shall have settled and released, fully, finally, and forever, any and all Released Class Claims and Released Prosecution Claims as applicable, without regard to the subsequent discovery or existence of such different or additional facts, legal theories, or authorities. The Parties acknowledge, and each other Releasing Plaintiff and Released Defendant Party by operation of law shall be deemed to have acknowledged, that the inclusion of “Unknown Claims” in the definition of Released Class Claims and Released Prosecution Claims was separately bargained for and was a key and material element of the Class Settlement.

The “Effective Date” will occur when, among other things, an Order by the Court approving the Class Settlement becomes Final and is not subject to appeal and when an Order by the Court approving the proposed Plan of Allocation becomes Final and is not subject to appeal, as set out more fully in the Settlement Agreement on file with the Court and available at www.StateStreetIndirectFXClassSettlement.com or www.labaton.com.

If you remain a member of the Settlement Class, all of the Court’s orders about the Class Settlement in the Class Actions will apply to you and legally bind you.

8. What will be my share of the Net Class Settlement Fund? How can I get my portion of the recovery?

At the Final Approval Hearing, Lead Counsel will request the Court approve the Plan of Allocation set forth below. The Plan of Allocation describes the manner by which the Net Class Settlement Fund will be allocated among Settlement Class Members. Assuming you do not exclude yourself from the Settlement Class pursuant to Question 10 below, you do not need to take any further action to receive your portion of the recovery. However, as explained on pages 10-11 below, if you represent a Group Trust, you must provide a certification in order to receive a portion of the ERISA Settlement Allocation, rather than a portion of the balance of the Net Class Settlement Fund.

You are not responsible for calculating the amount you may be entitled to receive under the Class Settlement. This calculation will be done by the Claims Administrator as part of the implementation of the Class Settlement, and will be based on reasonably available information obtained from SSBT. You will be notified of your calculated recovery after the Class Settlement is approved and prior to Lead Counsel’s motion to the Court requesting approval of a distribution of the Class Settlement proceeds.

PLAN OF ALLOCATION

This Plan of Allocation describes steps that the Claims Administrator will take in order to allocate funds in connection with the Class Settlement, including determining distribution amounts. The Court may approve this Plan of Allocation or modify it without additional notice to the Settlement Class. Any order modifying the Plan of Allocation will be posted on the settlement website at: www.StateStreetIndirectFXClassSettlement.com and at www.labaton.com. Distributions in the manner set forth herein will be deemed conclusive against all claimants. Each Settlement Class Member is deemed to have submitted to the jurisdiction of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts with respect to his, her, or its recovery from the Class Settlement.

Distributions to Authorized Claimants will be based on Recognized Claims (defined below). It is important to understand that the Recognized Claims under this Plan of Allocation are not provable damages but rather are amounts derived from a fair and reasonable methodology (described below) to evaluate each Settlement Class Member’s relative stake in the Class Settlement.

The defined terms used herein relate to this Plan of Allocation, and not necessarily to other agreements executed by SSBT or its affiliates with third parties, including governmental agencies, in connection with the Class Settlement. Capitalized terms that are not otherwise defined herein have the same meaning as set forth in the Settlement Agreement.

The Net Class Settlement Fund, which shall consist of Three Hundred Million U.S. Dollars ($300,000,000.00), plus any accrued interest, minus all costs and expenses incurred with respect to the fund, including Taxes and Tax Expenses, Notice and Administration Expenses, attorneys' fees, Litigation Expenses, and Service Awards paid from the Class Settlement Fund with the permission of the Court, will be distributed to eligible Settlement Class Members.

After approval by the Court of the Class Settlement, the Class Settlement Fund shall be allocated as set forth below for the benefit of Settlement Class Members.

The ERISA Settlement Allocation (which shall be the source of distributions to ERISA Plans and certain Group Trusts, as set forth below) shall be at least Sixty Million Dollars ($60,000,000.00) of the Class Settlement Fund (twenty percent of the Class Settlement Fund), plus twenty percent (20%) of any interest accrued on the Class Settlement Fund, minus twenty percent (20%) of any Taxes and Tax Expenses, Notice and Administration Expenses, Service Awards, and Litigation Expenses, and minus attorneys' fees, if awarded by the Court, in an amount not to exceed Ten Million Nine Hundred Thousand Dollars ($10,900,000.00).

The remainder of attorneys' fees will be paid out from the RIC Settlement Allocation and the Public and Other Settlement Allocation (both defined below). Because no more than $10,900,000 in fees can be paid out from the ERISA Settlement Allocation, if the Court awards fees at an overall percentage rate of more than 18.17%, then the RIC Settlement Allocation and the Public and Other Settlement Allocation will bear fees at a higher percentage rate than the ERISA Settlement Allocation. For example, if the Court awards the total amount of fees that Lead Counsel intends to request, the RIC Settlement Allocation and the Public and Other Settlement Allocation will each bear fees at a higher percentage rate (26.52%) than the ERISA Settlement Allocation (18.17%). If the Court awards fees at an overall percentage rate of 18.17% or less, the three Settlement Allocations (ERISA, RIC, and Public and Other) will each bear fees at the same percentage rate.

The ERISA Settlement Allocation was negotiated directly among Lead Counsel, ERISA Counsel, and representatives of the DOL. The ERISA Settlement Allocation, even without the $10,900,000 cap on attorneys' fees described above, provides a premium per dollar of Indirect FX Trading Volume for ERISA Plans and eligible Group Trusts in comparison to the allocations to other Settlement Class Members. The precise size of the premium is not known at this time because the amount of ERISA assets within Group Trusts is currently undetermined, as is the amount of attorneys' fees the Court may award. The premium recognizes the relative strength of the fiduciary duty and other claims available to ERISA Plans and eligible Group Trusts under the federal ERISA laws, as ERISA Counsel and the DOL have contended and as described in Question 2 above. The $10,900,000 cap on attorneys' fees was agreed-to by Lead Counsel and ERISA Counsel separately with the DOL after the Class Settlement Amount was agreed-to by the Parties. The ERISA Settlement Allocation of $60,000,000 and the $10,900,000 cap on attorneys' fees were final, essential conditions for the DOL's support of the Settlement and the conclusion of its own investigation of SSBT. These conditions must be met for the Settlement to be concluded.

The balance of the Class Settlement Fund will be allocated in proportion to the Indirect FX Trading Volume of class members that are not ERISA Plans or eligible Group Trusts (as explained below), specifically to class members that are Registered Investment Companies ("RICs") and class members that are non-ERISA public pension funds, private entities, and other customers ("Public and Other").

After allocation of the ERISA Settlement Allocation, based on information supplied by SSBT, the "RIC Settlement Allocation" will be approximately $142,000,000, on a gross basis before the addition of a proportional amount of any accrued interest and the deduction of proportional attorneys' fees, Litigation Expenses, Service Awards, Notice and Administration Expenses, Taxes and Tax Expenses, and the "Public and Other Settlement Allocation" will be approximately $98,000,000, on a gross basis before interest and the deductions above. These allocations will be adjusted to the extent Indirect FX Trading Volume of Group Trusts is applied to the ERISA Settlement Allocation, as described below.

The Parties have relied on Indirect FX Trading Volume information provided by State Street to develop this Plan of Allocation. The ERISA Settlement Allocation and payment of the Registered Investment Company Minimum Distribution are essential conditions of the Class Settlement, which may be terminated by the Settling Defendant if the minimum allocations set forth in this Plan are not made. The amount of the ERISA Settlement Allocation has been set based on the Indirect FX Trading Volume information provided, including information concerning the total amount of Indirect FX Trading Volume executed during the Class Period by ERISA Plans and Group Trusts. As part of the settlement administration process described below, the Claims Administrator will request information from Group Trusts concerning their ERISA Volume (explained below) during the Class Period.

In light of the fact that the amount of ERISA assets within Group Trusts is currently undetermined, the Parties, with input from the DOL, have agreed that the Plan of Allocation will be modified in the event that the total amount of Group Trusts' ERISA Volume is in excess of 2/3 of the total amount of Group Trusts' Indirect FX Trading Volume, as reported by State Street on July 25, 2016. In that event, the Claims Administrator will use the Indirect FX Trading Volume equal to such excess volume to calculate the net payment amount that would be due with respect to such volume if paid from the Public and Other Settlement Allocation, and will transfer half of that amount to the ERISA Settlement Allocation from each of the RIC Settlement Allocation and the Public and Other Settlement Allocation. (Accordingly, no such modification will be made if actual Group Trusts' ERISA Volume is 2/3 or less of the reported Group Trusts' Indirect FX Trading Volume.)

In the event that the actual total percentage of Indirect FX Trading Volume executed by ERISA Plans and Group Trust exceeds 15.25% of the overall Indirect FX Trading Volume for the Settlement as reported on July 25, 2016, the Claims Administrator will provide notice of the total such percentage to Plaintiffs' Counsel, State Street, and the DOL, and Plaintiffs' Counsel may apply to the Court for modification of this Plan of Allocation, without further notice to the Settlement Class. If the DOL wishes to be heard by the Court on a modification of the Plan of Allocation for this reason, regardless of whether Plaintiffs' Counsel seeks modification, neither State Street nor Plaintiffs' Counsel will object to the DOL's standing to do so.

B. ALLOCATION AMONG SETTLEMENT CLASS MEMBERS

For each Settlement Class Member, the Claims Administrator shall determine that Settlement Class Member's Indirect FX Trading Volume(s) (in U.S. Dollars) during the Class Period, calculate that Settlement Class Member's Recognized Claim, and use those calculations to distribute the Settlement Allocations as set forth herein.

To facilitate this procedure, SSBT has provided the Claims Administrator with: (i) the total Indirect FX Trading Volume (in U.S. Dollars) for each Settlement Class Member during the Class Period; (ii) information concerning whether each Settlement Class Member was an ERISA Plan during the Class Period; (iii) information concerning whether each Settlement Class Member was a Registered Investment Company during the Class Period; and (iv) information concerning whether each Settlement Class Member was a group trust that is exempt from tax pursuant to Internal Revenue Service Revenue Ruling 81-100 ("Group Trust") during the Class Period.

1. Determination of Indirect FX Trading Volumes

The Claims Administrator shall divide each Settlement Class Member's total Indirect FX Trading Volume (in U.S. Dollars) during the Class Period into three parts: (i) Registered Investment Company Indirect FX Trading Volume (in U.S. Dollars) during the Class Period ("RIC Volume"); (ii) ERISA Plan Indirect FX Trading Volume (in U.S. Dollars) during the Class Period ("ERISA Volume"); and (iii) their remaining Indirect FX Trading Volume (in U.S. Dollars) during the Class Period ("Public and Other Volume"). The division shall be determined as follows.

a) Registered Investment Company Settlement Class Members

For each Settlement Class Member that, based on the records supplied by SSBT, was a Registered Investment Company during the Class Period, the RIC Volume shall equal that Settlement Class Member's total Indirect FX Trading Volume during the Class Period. The Settlement Class Member's ERISA Volume and Public and Other Volume shall be zero.

b) ERISA Plan Settlement Class Members

For each Settlement Class Member that, based on the records supplied by SSBT, was solely an ERISA Plan (not including Group Trusts) during the Class Period, the ERISA Volume shall equal that Settlement Class Member's total Indirect FX Trading Volume during the Class Period. The Settlement Class Member's RIC Volume and Public and Other Volume shall be zero.

c) Group Trust Settlement Class Members

SSBT has notified Plaintiffs' Counsel that fifty-five (55) Settlement Class Members represent Group Trusts. For each such Settlement Class Member identified as a Group Trust, a letter concerning the Settlement Class Member's identification as a Group Trust accompanies this Notice. The Indirect FX Trading Volume during the Class Period (in Each Group Trust shall provide the Claims Administrator with a certification that reports the average proportion of the Group Trust's SSBT custodied assets that were held by an ERISA Plan or Plans during the Class Period and/or the average volume of Indirect FX Trades made by the ERISA Plan(s) during the Class Period, and identifies by name each ERISA Plan within the Group Trust. If a Group Trust does not have the foregoing information for each year of the Class Period, but has a reasonable belief that ERISA assets were held by the Group Trust during those years, the years for which data is available should be reported and the results will be averaged by applying the average proportion of the years with known ERISA assets and/or Indirect FX Trading Volume to the years with unknown ERISA assets and/or Indirect FX Trading Volume.

The certification must be signed by a plan fiduciary or administrator and state that he, she, or it certifies that the information contained within the certification is accurate based on reasonably available information. The certification must be mailed or delivered so that it is postmarked or received no later than December 20, 2016, to:

State Street Indirect FX Trading Class Action
Claims Administrator
c/o A.B. Data, Ltd.
P.O. Box 173000
Milwaukee, WI 53217

Upon request from the Claims Administrator, a Group Trust must promptly provide sufficient information to explain and confirm the certification in order to remain eligible for a share of the ERISA Settlement Allocation as set forth herein.

Using the information provided through the certification process, a Group Trust's ERISA Volume shall equal the volume of Indirect FX Trades made by the ERISA Plan(s) in the Group Trust or, if the information concerning the volume of Indirect FX Trades is insufficient, the proportion of assets that were held by the ERISA Plan(s) in a particular Group Trust. Any Indirect FX Trading Volume of a Group Trust that is not categorized by the Claims Administrator as ERISA Volume shall be categorized as Public and Other Volume. In all instances, the RIC Volume of a Settlement Class Member that is a Group Trust shall be zero.

If a Group Trust does not provide a certification by December 20, 2016, it shall be treated for purposes of an allocation as if it held no ERISA Plan assets and it shall not be entitled to a recovery from the ERISA Settlement Allocation. Instead, its Public and Other Volume shall equal that Settlement Class Member's total Indirect FX Trading Volume during the Class Period. In that instance, the Settlement Class Member's RIC Volume and ERISA Volume shall be zero.

However, in instances where a Group Trust is known by the Parties to have ERISA assets based on previous consultations with the U.S. Department of Labor, but a certification is not submitted or the Group Trust does not provide a certification by December 20, 2016, then the trust's ERISA Volume may be calculated utilizing a methodology at Plaintiffs' Counsel's discretion based on discussions with the U.S. Department of Labor or with the Group Trust in response to any informal inquiry from the Claims Administrator or Plaintiffs' Counsel.

Group Trust Settlement Class Members who claim and receive distributions from the ERISA Settlement Allocation must distribute the ERISA Settlement Allocation only to the ERISA Plans identified in the certification submitted to the Claims Administrator and in the same proportion as set forth in the certification. Such distributions are subject to confirmation by the U.S. Department of Labor and/or Plaintiffs' Counsel.

d) Public and Other Settlement Class Members

For each Settlement Class Member that, based on the records supplied by SSBT, was not an ERISA Plan, Group Trust, or Registered Investment Company during the Class Period, the Public and Other Volume shall equal that Settlement Class Member's total Indirect FX Trading Volume during the Class Period. The Settlement Class Member's ERISA Volume and RIC Volume shall be zero.

2. Methodology for Calculation of Recognized Claims

After calculating the ERISA Volume, RIC Volume, and Public and Other Volume for each Settlement Class Member, the Claims Administrator will sum the ERISA Volumes for the Settlement Class in order to derive the classwide ERISA Volume, will sum the RIC Volume for the Settlement Class, in order to derive the classwide RIC Volume, and will sum the Public and Other Volume for the Settlement Class, in order to derive the classwide Public and Other Volume.

A Settlement Class Member's ERISA Recognized Claim equals that class member's ERISA Volume, divided by the classwide ERISA Volume, multiplied by the amount of the ERISA Settlement Allocation. The result of these calculations will be that a Settlement Class Member having no ERISA Volume will have an ERISA Recognized Claim of zero.

A Settlement Class Member's RIC Recognized Claim equals that class member's RIC Volume, divided by the classwide RIC Volume, multiplied by the amount of the RIC Settlement Allocation. The result of these calculations will be that a Settlement Class Member having no RIC Volume will have a RIC Recognized Claim of zero.

A Settlement Class Member's Public and Other Recognized Claim equals that class member's Public and Other Volume, divided by the classwide Public and Other Volume, multiplied by the amount of the Public and Other Settlement Allocation. The result of these calculations will be that a Settlement Class Member having no Public and Other Volume will have a Public and Other Recognized Claim of zero.

Settlement Class Members shall receive distributions from the ERISA Settlement Allocation on a pro rata basis based on their ERISA Recognized Claim amounts, distributions from the RIC Settlement Allocation on a pro rata basis based on their RIC Recognized Claim amounts, and distributions from the Public and Other Settlement Allocation on a pro rata basis based on their Public and Other Recognized Claim amounts.

A Settlement Class Member's total Recognized Claim equals the sum of that Settlement Class member's ERISA Recognized Claim, RIC Recognized Claim, and/or Public and Other Recognized Claim.

C. DISTRIBUTION OF NET CLASS SETTLEMENT FUND

Prior to the Effective Date, the Net Class Settlement Fund shall remain in an interest-bearing escrow account, except as otherwise provided in the Settlement Agreement. After the Class Settlement reaches its Effective Date, distributions to eligible Settlement Class Members will be made after Settlement Class Members have been notified of their ERISA Recognized Claim, RIC Recognized Claim, and Public and Other Recognized Claim amounts, and the Court has approved the Claims Administrator's determinations.

The Parties will use best efforts to seek Court approval to authorize an initial distribution of the Net Class Settlement Fund, including the RIC Settlement Allocation, within one year following the Effective Date of the Class Settlement. If a judgment is entered in the Class Action approving the Class Settlement, but an appeal is taken relating solely to approval of the requested attorneys' fees, Litigation Expenses, and/or Service Awards, Plaintiffs' Counsel will, subject to Court approval, proceed with an initial distribution of the Net Class Settlement Fund, including the RIC Settlement Allocation.

The Net Class Settlement Fund will be allocated among Class Members whose pro-rated distributions would be $10.00 or greater, given the fees and expenses associated with printing and mailing payments. If the prorated distribution to any Authorized Claimant calculates to less than $10.00, it will not be included in the calculation and no distribution will be made to that Authorized Claimant.

Defendants, their counsel, and all other Released Defendant Parties will have no liability whatsoever for the investment of the Class Settlement Fund, the distribution, or the payment of any claim consistent with the Settlement Agreement and the Court-approved Plan of Allocation. Plaintiffs and Plaintiffs' Counsel likewise will have no liability for their reasonable efforts to execute, administer, and distribute funds consistent with the Settlement Agreement and the Court-approved Plan of Allocation.

After initial distribution(s) of the Net Class Settlement Fund, if there is any balance remaining (whether by reason of tax refunds, uncashed checks or otherwise) after at least six (6) months from the date of prior distribution of the Net Class Settlement Fund, Lead Counsel shall, if feasible and economical, redistribute such balance among Authorized Claimants who have cashed their checks in an equitable and economic fashion until it is no longer economically feasible to do so. Any balance that still remains in the Net Class Settlement Fund after redistribution(s) that is not feasible or economical to reallocate, after payment of Notice and Administration Expenses, Taxes and Tax Expenses, and any other fees and costs approved by the Court, shall be contributed to one or more nonsectarian, not-for-profit, 501(c)(3) organizations serving the public interest approved by the Court.

9. When will I receive a payment?

Payment is conditioned on several matters, including the Court's approval of the Class Settlement (and the Judgment becoming Final), approval of the proposed Plan of Allocation (and that order becoming Final), approval of a distribution, and the DOL, and DOJ Settlements becoming final according to their terms. (They do not require court approval.) It is anticipated that at least a partial distribution will be made within one year of the Effective Date of the Class Settlement.

However, a full distribution could take more than a year. Interest accrued on the Class Settlement Fund will be included in the amount allocated and paid to Settlement Class Members.

The Class Settlement may be terminated on several grounds, including if the Court does not approve the Class Settlement or the proposed Plan of Allocation. If the Class Settlement is terminated, there will be no distribution and the Class Actions will proceed as if the Class Settlement had not been reached.

10. Can I exclude myself from the Settlement Class?

If you do not want a payment from this Class Settlement, but you want to keep any right you may have to sue or continue to sue the Defendants and other Released Defendant Parties on your own about the Released Class Claims, then you must take steps to exclude yourself from the Settlement Class. This is called “opting out” of the class. Please note: SSBT may withdraw from and terminate the Class Settlement if Settlement Class Members who have a certain amount of Indirect FX Transactions exclude themselves from the Settlement Class, or a certain number of Settlement Class Members request exclusion.

To exclude yourself from the Settlement Class, you must send a signed letter by mail stating that you request to be “excluded from the Settlement Class in the State Street Indirect FX Trading Class Action, No. 11-CV-10230 (D. Mass.)” Your letter must include the following information: (i) the name of the Person that entered into one or more custody or trust agreements with SSBT and is requesting exclusion; (ii) the Person’s address; (iii) the Person’s telephone number; (iv) the Person’s e-mail address; (v) the approximate date(s) of the agreement(s) referenced in (i) above; (vi) the SSBT entity that was the counterparty to the agreement(s) referenced in (i) above; (vii) a list of all current and former accounts, including both the name and account number of such accounts, that held foreign (non-U.S.) assets and were related to the agreement(s) referenced in (i) above; and (viii) identification (including by case name, court name, and docket number) of all legal actions and claims (if any) that the Person requesting exclusion has brought against any of the Defendants relating to Indirect FX.

You must mail your exclusion request so that it is received no later than October 7, 2016, to:

State Street Indirect FX Trading Class Action
Claims Administrator
c/o A.B. Data, Ltd.
P.O. Box 173000
Milwaukee, WI 53217

You cannot exclude yourself by telephone or by e-mail. Your exclusion request must comply with these requirements in order to be valid, provided, however, that a request for exclusion shall not be invalid for failing to include the foregoing (i) - (vii) if SSBT determines it has sufficient information to determine that such Person is a Settlement Class Member and provides that information promptly to Lead Counsel.

If you request to be excluded in accordance with these requirements, you will not get any payment from the Net Class Settlement Fund, and you cannot object to the Class Settlement. However, you will not be legally bound by anything that happens in the Class Actions, and you may be able to sue Defendants and the other Released Defendant Parties in the future.

11. Do I have a lawyer in this case? How will the lawyers be paid?

Labaton Sucharow LLP has been appointed Lead Counsel for the Settlement Class. Lead Counsel, on behalf of ERISA Counsel and Customer Counsel, will apply to the Court for an award of attorneys’ fees and payment of Litigation Expenses incurred during the prosecution and resolution of the Class Actions. The application for attorneys’ fees will not exceed $74,541,250 (plus any accrued interest), which represents 25% of the $300,000,000 Class Settlement Fund, after first deducting Court-awarded Litigation Expenses (that will not exceed $1,750,000.00) and Court-awarded Service Awards for the seven Plaintiffs (that will not exceed $85,000.00 in the aggregate). You will not be charged directly by Plaintiffs’ counsel. However, if you want to be represented by your own lawyer, you may hire one at your own expense.

The written applications for attorneys’ fees, Litigation Expenses, and Service Awards of Plaintiffs will be filed with the Court by September 15, 2016, and the Court will consider these applications at the Final Approval Hearing. A copy of the applications will be available at www.StateStreetIndirectFXClassSettlement.com and www.labaton.com or by requesting a copy from Lead Counsel.

To date, none of the Plaintiffs' attorneys have received any payment for their services in prosecuting the Class Actions on behalf of the Settlement Class, nor have counsel been paid for their substantial expenses incurred in connection with litigating the Class Actions. The fee requested by Lead Counsel, on behalf of ERISA Counsel and Customer Counsel, would compensate counsel for their efforts in achieving the Class Settlement for the benefit of the Settlement Class and for their risk in undertaking this representation on a contingency basis. The Court will determine the actual amounts of any awards.

By following the procedures described in the answer to Question 12 below, you can tell the Court if you do not agree with the fees and expenses the attorneys and Plaintiffs intend to seek.

OBJECTIONS

12. How do I tell the Court if I do not like the Class Settlement, the Plan of Allocation, or something about the requests for attorneys' fees and expenses?

Any Settlement Class Member may appear at the Final Approval Hearing and explain why it thinks the Class Settlement should not be approved as fair, reasonable and adequate, why a judgment should not be entered, why the proposed Plan of Allocation should not be approved, why the attorneys' fees and expenses of Plaintiffs' counsel should not be awarded, in whole or in part, or why Plaintiffs should not be awarded Service Awards, in whole or in part. However, no Settlement Class Member shall be heard or entitled to contest these matters unless such Settlement Class Member has filed a written objection with the Court and served it on counsel.

To object, you must send a written statement saying that you object to the Class Settlement, the Plan of Allocation, the attorneys' fee request, expenses, and/or the Service Awards in State Street Indirect FX Trading Class Action, No. 11-CV-10230 (D. Mass.). Be sure to include your name, address, telephone number, e-mail address, signature, and a full explanation of all reasons why you object. You must also include the following information in order to confirm your membership in the Settlement Class: (i) the name of the Person that entered into one or more custody or trust agreements with SSBT and is objecting; (ii) the approximate date(s) of the agreement(s) referenced in (i) above; (iii) the SSBT entity that was the counterparty to the agreement(s) referenced in (i) above; (iv) a list of all current and former accounts, including both the name and account number of such accounts, that held foreign (non-U.S.) assets and were related to the agreement(s) referenced in (i) above.

If you cannot provide any of the information required under (i) - (iv), you may still object if you provide a written statement certifying that have undertaken best efforts to provide the missing information and your membership in the Settlement Class can otherwise be confirmed by the Parties.

Your written objection must be filed with the Court, and received by counsel listed below by no later than October 7, 2016:

File with the Clerk of the Court:

Clerk of the Court
 United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts
 John Joseph Moakley United States Courthouse
 1 Courthouse Way
 Boston, Massachusetts 02210

Serve copies of all such papers by mail to each of the following:

Lead Counsel	Defendants' Counsel
Lawrence A. Sucharow, Esq. Labaton Sucharow LLP 140 Broadway New York, NY 10005	William H. Paine, Esq. Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr LLP 60 State Street Boston, MA 02109

Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, any Settlement Class Member who does not object in the manner described above will be deemed to have waived any objection and shall be forever foreclosed from making any objection to the proposed Class Settlement and the applications for attorneys' fees, Litigation Expenses, and any Service Awards.

COURT'S FINAL APPROVAL HEARING

13. When and where will the Court decide whether to approve the Class Settlement?

The Court will hold a Final Approval Hearing at 2:00 p.m. on November 2, 2016, before the Hon. Mark L. Wolf, at the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, John Joseph Moakley United States Courthouse, Courtroom 10, 1 Courthouse Way, Boston, Massachusetts 02210.

At the hearing, the Court will consider whether the Class Settlement is fair, reasonable and adequate. The Court will also consider any motions for attorneys' fees, expenses of Plaintiffs and Plaintiffs' Counsel, and Service Awards for Plaintiffs, as well as for approval of the proposed Plan of Allocation. If there are timely and valid objections, the Court will consider them. We do not know how long decisions on the motions will take.

14. Do I have to come to the hearing?

Lead Counsel will answer any questions that the Court may have about the Class Settlement and related relief at the Final Approval Hearing. You are not required to attend but are welcome to come at your own expense. If you send an objection, you do not have to come to Court to discuss it. As long as you filed your written objection on time, it will be before the Court when the Court considers whether to approve the Class Settlement, the Plan of Allocation, and/or the fee and expense requests. You may also have your own lawyer attend the Final Approval Hearing at your expense, but such attendance is not mandatory.

15. May I speak at the hearing?

If you are a Settlement Class Member and you have filed a timely objection, if you wish to speak, present evidence or present testimony at the Final Approval Hearing, you must state in your objection your intention to appear, and must identify any witnesses you intend to call or evidence you intend to present.

The Final Approval Hearing may be rescheduled by the Court without further notice to the Settlement Class. If you wish to attend the Final Approval Hearing, you should confirm the date and time with Lead Counsel.

IF YOU DO NOTHING

16. What happens if I do nothing at all?

If you do nothing and the Class Settlement is approved, you will be bound by the terms of the Class Settlement, will be deemed to have released all Released Class Claims against all of the Released Defendant Parties, and will receive your pro rata payment as described in Questions 7 and 8 above.

GETTING MORE INFORMATION

17. How do I get more information?

This Notice summarizes the proposed Class Settlement. Full details of the Class Settlement are set forth in the Settlement Agreement. Copies of the Settlement Agreement, as well as other litigation and settlement-related documents, may also be viewed at www.StateStreetIndirectFXClassSettlement.com and www.labaton.com.

You may also contact Lead Counsel at the contact information listed above, or the Claims Administrator toll-free at 877-240-3540.

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED, pursuant to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and an Order of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, that Plaintiffs Arkansas Teacher Retirement System, Arnold Henriquez, Michael T. Cohn, William R. Taylor, Richard A. Sutherland, The Andover Companies Employees Savings and Profit Sharing Plan, and James Pehoushek-Stangeland (collectively, "Plaintiffs"), on behalf of themselves and each Settlement Class Member, by and through their counsel, and State Street Bank and Trust Company have reached a proposed settlement of the above-captioned actions (the "Class Actions") in the amount of $300,000,000 in cash (the "Class Settlement Amount") that, if approved by the Court, will resolve the Class Actions in their entirety (the "Class Settlement").

A hearing will be held before the Honorable Mark L. Wolf of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, Eastern Division in Courtroom 10 of the John Joseph Moakley United States Courthouse, 1 Courthouse Way, Boston, Massachusetts 02210 at 2:00 p.m. on November 2, 2016 to, among other things, determine whether: (1) the proposed Class Settlement should be approved by the Court as fair, reasonable, and adequate; (2) the Class Actions should be dismissed with prejudice as set forth in the Stipulation and Agreement of Settlement, dated as of July 26, 2016; (3) the proposed Plan of Allocation for distribution of the Class Settlement Amount, and any accrued interest, less Court-awarded attorneys' fees, Litigation Expenses, Service Awards, Notice and Administration Expenses, Taxes, Tax Expenses and any other costs, fees, or expenses approved by the Court (the "Net Class Settlement Fund") should be approved as fair and reasonable; and (4) Lead Counsel's application, on behalf of ERISA Counsel and Customer Counsel, for an award of attorneys' fees and payment of Litigation Expenses and Service Awards should be approved. The Court may change the date and/or time of the Final Approval Hearing without providing another notice. You do NOT need to attend the hearing in order to receive a distribution from the Net Class Settlement Fund. Additionally, the Court has the authority to change any of the deadlines below for good cause shown.

IF YOU ARE A MEMBER OF THE SETTLEMENT CLASS, YOUR RIGHTS WILL BE AFFECTED BY THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AND YOU MAY BE ENTITLED TO SHARE IN THE NET CLASS SETTLEMENT FUND. If you have not yet received the full mailed Notice of Pendency of Class Actions, Proposed Class Settlement, Settlement Hearing, Plan of Allocation, and any Motion for Attorneys' Fees, Litigation Expenses, and Service Awards (the "Notice"), you may obtain a copy by contacting the Claims Administrator or visiting the settlement website:

Settlement Class Members do not need to submit a claim form in order to be eligible to share in the distribution of the Net Class Settlement Fund. Your recovery will be calculated by the Claims Administrator as part of the implementation of the Class Settlement, and will be based on information obtained from SSBT. However, as explained in the Notice, if you represent a Group Trust, you must provide a certification postmarked or received on or before December 20, 2016 in order to receive a portion of the ERISA Settlement Allocation, rather than a portion of the balance of the Net Class Settlement Fund.

To exclude yourself from the Settlement Class, you must submit a written request for exclusion in accordance with the instructions in the Notice such that it is received on or before October 7, 2016. If you are a Settlement Class Member and do not exclude yourself from the Settlement Class, you will be bound by all judgments and orders entered in the Class Actions.

Any objection to the proposed Class Settlement, Plan of Allocation, and/or application for attorneys' fees and payment of Litigation Expenses and/or Service Awards must be filed with the Court in accordance with the instructions in the Notice such that it is received on or before October 7, 2016. If you submit an objection, you have the right, but are not required, to attend the Final Approval Hearing; if you wish to speak at the Final Approval Hearing, you must include in your written objection a statement that you intend to appear and speak at the Final Approval Hearing.

Big Banks Face Wider Treasury Auction-Fixing Suit

By Dunstan Priol

Law360, New York (November 16, 2017, 9:58 PM EST) -- A lawsuit accusing 20 of the biggest Wall Street banks of rigging the $13 trillion market for securities sold by the U.S. Department of the Treasury was expanded late Wednesday night with the filing of an amended complaint that alleges two interrelated conspiracies.

The revised suit, filed in the Southern District of New York and brought by an array of large institutional investors, including union, state and municipal pension funds, includes allegations that bankers at competing banks "routinely" shared sensitive client information with each other in chat rooms, allowing them to profit at their clients' expense.

In addition, the new complaint outlines an alleged scheme by a smaller group of seven banks, including JPMorgan, Citigroup, Barclays and Goldman Sachs, to thwart competition in the bidding process in the U.S. Treasury market by blocking their clients' access to electronic trading platforms where better prices were available.

"This complaint is the culmination of a lengthy, multiyear investigation into the Treasury market and alleges facts and claims that heretofore have never been disclosed," said Daniel Blockett, a partner at Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP, one of the three BigLaw firms appointed as lead counsel in the case.

The 17 plaintiffs listed include the Atlanta Firefighters Pension Plan, the City of Pontiac, Michigan Police & Fire Retirement System, the American Federation of Teachers and the Employees Retirement System of Rhode Island.

Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP, Cohen Milstein Sellers & Toll PLLC and Labaton Sucharow LLP were selected in August to lead class actions that have been centralized in New York's Southern District before U.S. District Judge Paul G. Gardephe. To date, more than 48 putative class action complaints have been filed that allege banks conspired to manipulate auction prices in order to boost their own profits, according to the law firms.

The U.S. Treasury borrows money by selling various debt instruments, known as Treasury bonds or Treasury securities. These sales take place in market auctions conducted throughout the year, and a select group of banks — known as primary dealers — bid in the auctions.

In the suit filed late Wednesday, the plaintiffs' attorneys, citing recent reports in the media, included claims that bankers, including ones from Goldman Sachs, shared information with bankers at other institutions related to clients' orders for bids on the securities ahead of Treasury auctions.

The bankers then allegedly used this information to trade ahead of their clients' orders to obtain better prices for the bank. The "defendants did not tell customers that their bidding information was being shared as part of a bid-rigging conspiracy to benefit themselves to the detriment of their customers," the complaint said.

The banks, according to the suit, illegally boosted their profits by using the information to lower the prices of securities that they bought in auctions, and then raise the prices at which they sold them to other clients.

In addition, the suit claims that the banks pooled their information to gain a further competitive edge.

"The informational advantage is magnified when a group pools their resources, so each conspiracy member has more information than they would have in isolation," the suit said. "Collectively, they can then leverage this information against the less-informed market participants."

Through these alleged acts, the defendants "generated profits for themselves both in the auction and in the related markets before and after the auction."

The second part of the conspiracy alleges that seven of the banks included in the original complaint colluded with a trading platform called Tradeweb to block the plaintiffs from trading on platforms where better prices could be obtained.

The suit claims that the defendants allegedly tried to enforce a two-tiered marketplace in which the big banks, or dealers, could obtain lower prices on some trading systems known as interdealer platforms, and nonbank investors, including the plaintiffs, were relegated to other trading platforms where prices tend to be higher.

The banks allegedly pressured some interdealer platforms not to allow the nonbank investors to use those platforms by threatening to boycott the systems, which would have a significant financial impact on the platforms.

Tradeweb allegedly conspired with the banks and was also named as a defendant in the new complaint. It is owned by a consortium of the seven banks named as defendants. A Tradeweb spokesman declined to comment.

Goldman Sachs is represented by Maya Krugman, Penny Shane, Stephen Ehrenberg and Jonathan Lucas Shapiro of Sullivan & Cromwell LLP, and Elizabeth P. Papez, Robert Y. Sperling and Susannah Providence Torpey of Winston & Strawn LLP.

Barclays is represented by David Harold Braff, Kathleen Suzanne McArthur, Matthew Alexander Schwartz and Stephanie Szaro Heglund of Sullivan & Cromwell LLP.

Citigroup is represented by Jay B. Kasner, Paul Madison Eckles and Shepard Goldfein of Skadden Arps Slate Meagher & Flom LLP.

JPMorgan is represented by Mark Putnam Gimbel, Henry Liu and Robert D. Wick of Covington & Burling LLP.

Counsel information for Tradeweb couldn't be determined Thursday.

The plaintiffs are represented by Faith Gay, Daniel Brockett, Steig Olson, Sascha Rand, Christine Chung, Jordan A. Goldstein, Jeremy D. Anderson, Christopher Barker and Daniel P. Cunningham of Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP, J. Douglas Richards, Michael B. Eisenkraft, David A. Young, Carol V. Gilden and Alison Deich of Cohen Milstein Sellers & Toll PLLC, and Jay Himes, Greg Ascioia, Christopher J. McDonald, Robin A. Van Der Meulen and Matthew J. Perez of Labaton Sucharow LLP.

The case is In re: Treasury Securities Auction Antitrust Litigation, case number 1:15-md-02673, before the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York.

Richard:

As Joan Lukey likely informed you, we had a very productive meeting with Joan and Justin yesterday in which we significantly narrowed the scope of the written discovery served on May 18, 2017. In an effort to alleviate the burden on the firms and prioritize the information we need in advance of the depositions (as scheduled) in June, we've adjusted the "due date" for several of the requests—reflecting a new, tiered schedule—as well as eliminated a significant amount of interrogatories and requests for production altogether. As indicated in the attached annotated version of the May 18 Interrogatories and Requests for Production, we've categorized the requests into those due on June 1, 2017, those due on June 9, 2017, and those due on July 10, 2017. Please see below additional clarification based on our discussion yesterday with Labaton's counsel.

In the event that the Firm objects to any of the revised interrogatories and/or RFPs, for any reason, please send us an email detailing the nature of each request and corresponding Ints/RFP by no later than Friday, May 26, 2017. We will consider all timely objections and do our best to further narrow the scope of eliminate extraneous information, if appropriate.

Finally, if the Firm has already produced information requested as part of its prior document productions, please respond in writing with the specific date(s) or production and Bates nos. of all responsive documents. Such information need not be produced a second time.

Interrogatories

No. 2- Stricken in its entirety for now. The Special Master reserves the right to propound additional discovery specifically to address the subject matter, experience and/or expertise of the Law Firm prior to its involvement in the SST Litigation, involving FX-based claims.

No. 4- Stricken in its entirety for now. The Special Master reserves the right to propound additional discovery specifically to address potential double-billing of Staff Attorney and attorney time between the SST Litigation and other, concurrent litigations in which the Firm was involved.

Nos. 10-11, 13- Strike the portion of each interrogatory seeking a description of the "basic substance" of certain communications referenced therein.

No. 10- Please describe the Firm's understanding of the role played by the listed government agencies.

No. 14- Please provide an overview of the litigation strategy throughout the course of the litigation. To the extent that strategy changed, please identify generally the time period or relevant event (i.e. Lobby Conference, Motion to Dismiss, access to State Street production) that caused a change in said strategy.

Nos. 15-16- If the answer is “none,” so state in your response.

No. 18- Figures need not be exact; approximations or ranges for the total number of pages or GB are acceptable. The reference to “general description of the information contained in the production” may include brief descriptions for the various categories of documents, such as “real time trading transactions”; “internal State Street emails between traders and compliance”; and/or “foreign exchange market spreadsheets of exchange rates.”

Nos. 19/22/29- To the extent these interrogatories overlap in substance, the Firm need not answer twice. However, insofar as one or more interrogatories seeks information that is not included in the other two, please respond to all sub-questions presented.

No. 33- Reference to “all other matters in which the Firm entered into a similar arrangement [] to share costs with other firms” refers to any other matters in which the firm agreed to share the costs of the time spent/billed by the Firm’s staff attorneys with another firm, and sought reimbursement directly or indirectly from that firm for staff attorney time. If none, so state in your response.

No. 46- Relates to any situation, whether or not arising to a true “dispute,” in which the Firm ended representation of a client/class representative prematurely or otherwise before the anticipated conclusion of a matter, whether due to insistence of the client/class representative or the Firm, and where the Firm sought payment from the client or the client paid for the work already performed by the Firm. If an hourly rate was paid, please identify that rate. If another sum was paid, please provide that figure and the basis for that payment.

No. 47- Relates principally to hourly rates listed on the Firm’s fee petitions, and also includes any other instance in which the Firm has represented a client/class representative on a non-hourly basis, and then sought reimbursement from another party or the Court that is not captured in a fee petition.

No. 54- Interrogatory seeks identification/description only of those instances in the State Street Litigation where the Firm billed an attorney at a higher or lesser rate than the rate determined by the Firm. Please explain the deviation in any such instance.

No. 56/60- To the extent these interrogatories overlap in substance, the Firm need not answer twice. However, to the extent No. 60, seeking information specifically relating to the Firm’s review or involvement in Thornton’s Fee Petition, goes beyond the scope of No. 56, please answer all sub-questions presented.

RFPs

No. 1- A hard drive containing the database is acceptable. If you contend such production is barred under the terms of the protective order entered into with State Street’s counsel during the State Street Litigation, please respond stating with specificity the nature of such an objection.

No. 2- As discussed yesterday, production of all documents marked “hot” or “smoking hot” in the Catalyst database is sufficient; the phrase “bearing on material issues” is, therefore, stricken.

No. 3: Request seeks documents relating to representation of class representatives in the State Street Litigation only. The reference to all documents “referring to, relating to, or evidencing terms of the law Firm’s representation of class representatives” relates to any written communications, emails, notes that set out the terms of an agreement that is not otherwise reflected in a formal written agreement previously produced, or any documents that contain terms that amend a formal agreement and is not otherwise contained in another written agreement produced therein.

Nos. 4-5: Requests seek only those documents referenced therein from 2009-2011, representing the general timeframe with Lieff first became involved in the State Street Litigation.

Nos. 8-9: Requests seeks only those documents referenced therein from 2010-2011 and 2015-2016. To the extent you object to producing communications relating to the review and adjustment of annual billing rates during this time frame, please respond stating with specificity the nature of such objection.

No. 10- The Firm need only produce those emails and/or other communications or documents soliciting opinions and/or retaining an expert to provide an opinion as described therein, as well as the opinions or work product received.

No. 15- To the extent that a single 1099 or W-2 captures all compensation paid by the Firm to a Staff Attorney, the Firm need not produce the individual paystubs reflected on those documents. However, in the event a Staff Attorney received individual or intermittent payments that are not reflected on a 1099 and/or W-2, please produce both the appropriate 1099/W-2 and all records of payment made, in order to provide a complete record of all payments made in connection with that staff attorney's work on the State Street Litigation.

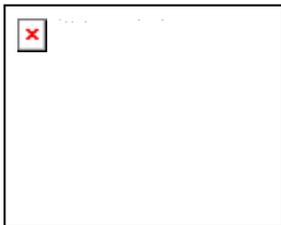

No. 16- If the Firm is unable to complete the search due to a large volume of responsive documents, please respond with the proposed search terms and total number of "hits." Should this be the case, we can provide a list of timekeepers and/or narrowed search terms.

No. 19- If Lieff did not retain an expert, so state in your response.

No. 21- If the Firm is unable to complete the search due to a large volume of responsive documents, please respond with the proposed search terms and total number of "hits." Should this be the case, we can provide a list of timekeepers and/or narrowed search terms.

No. 32- Please search and produce all responsive documents for the attorney deponents (excluding staff attorneys) who will testify on June 5, 14, or 16 by June 9. All other responsive documents located should be produced no later than July 10.

4. The term "Plaintiffs' Law Firms" refers to Labaton Lieff, and/or Thornton, and their respective employees, contractors, affiliates, agents, counsels, and representatives, collectively and/or individually.

5. The term "ERISA firms" or "ERISA counsel" refers to Brian McTigue and/or the McTigue Law Firm, the Law Offices of Keller Rohrback, LLP, Zuckerman Spaeder, LLP, Beins Alexrod, P.C., and any firms retained by one or more of the above, and all employees, agents, counsels, attorneys, and representatives.

6. The term "ARTRS" refers to the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System and/or its Executive Director, George Hopkins, Esq.

7. The term “State Street Litigation”, “SST Litigation” or “Litigation” refers to Arkansas Teacher Retirement System, et al. v. State Street Corporation, et al., C.A. No. 1:11-cv-10230-MLW, pending in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts.

8. The term “State Street Document Review”, “SST Document Review” or “Document Review” refers to the Law Firm’s review of hard copy and electronic documents produced as part of discovery in Arkansas Teacher Retirement System, et al. v. State Street Corporation, et al., C.A. No. 1:11-cv-10230-MLW, pending in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts.

9. The term “State Street” refers to State Street Bank and Trust Company and/or State Street Global Markets, defendants in the SST Litigation.

10. The term “settlement in principle” refers to the settlement agreement reached in substance between counsel by and through mediation.

11. The term “Court” refers to the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts.

12. The term “Fee Petition” or “Fee Application” refers to the Declaration of Lawrence A. Sucharow in Support of Plaintiffs’ Assented-To Motion for Final Approval of Proposed Class Settlement and Plan of Allocation and Final Certification of Settlement Class and Lead Counsel’s Motion for An Award of Attorneys’ Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs (Docket #104), and Exhibits 1-32 attached thereto, filed with the Court in the State Street Litigation. In particular, “Fee Petition” in conjunction with one or more of the individual firms, refers to the respective Exhibit (and exhibits attached thereto) in which an individual law firm sought approval for payment of its respective fee and expenses incurred in the SST Litigation, including all declarations, affidavits, and/or the Lodestar reports filed therewith.

13. The term “Motion for Attorneys’ Fees” refers to Lead Counsel’s Motion for An Award of Attorneys’ Fees and Payment of Litigation Expenses, including the Memorandum in Support and exhibits, filed with the Court on or about September 15, 2016 and October 21, 2016, respectively (Docket #102, 108).

14. The term “Final Settlement” refers to the Stipulation and Agreement of Settlement dated July 26, 2016 (Docket #89).

15. The term “Fee Award” refers to a certain award of attorneys’ fees of $74,541,250.00 and expenses and costs of $1,257,697.94, as approved by the Court in the Lawsuit by Order dated November 2, 2016.

16. The term “November 10, 2016 Letter” refers to the letter from David Goldsmith to Judge Wolf dated November 10, 2016 (Exhibit A to Docket #117), advising the Court of inadvertent errors in the Fee Petitions and Fee Order.

17. The term “December 17, 2016 Article” refers to the Boston Globe article entitled Critics hit law firms’ bills after class-action lawsuits, published on or about December 17, 2016.

18. The term “hourly rates charged” refers to the hourly billing rates corresponding to work of an individual attorney or staff member of the firm, appearing on a fee petition submitted to the Court or otherwise charged to a client for work performed on a legal matter, including the rates listed on the Fee Petitions submitted in the SST Litigation.

19. The term “Staff Attorneys” refers to licensed attorneys working on a part-time or full-time basis for the Law Firm, but who are not deemed “associates” or otherwise on a traditional partnership track.

20. The term “hourly clients” refers to all past, present, and prospective clients who agree to pay and/or are charged for legal services rendered on an hourly basis, notwithstanding the actual amount paid or collected.

21. The term “non-hourly clients” refers to all past, present, and prospective clients who do not pay for legal services on an hourly rate, such as clients paying a flat fee, retained through a contingency arrangement and/or class action litigation, or other non-hourly fee structure, notwithstanding the actual amount paid or collected.

22. Any word written in the singular also includes the plural and vice-versa.

23. In case of doubt as to the scope of a clause including “and,” “or,” “any,” “all,” “each,” or “every,” the intended meaning is inclusive rather than exclusive.

24. The term “any” and the term “all” are intended to mean “any and all.”

25. As used herein, the term “or” and the term “and” shall mean “and/or” and vice-versa.

26. As used herein, the terms “relating to” or “referring to” or “concerning” or “constituting” or the like mean and include all documents that in any manner or form are relevant in any way to or bear upon the subject matter in question, including, without limitation, all documents which contain, record, reflect, summarize, evaluate, comment upon, transmit, refer to, or discuss that subject matter or that in any manner state the background of, or were the basis or bases for, or that record, evaluate comment upon, or were referred to, relied upon, utilized, generated, transmitted, or received in arriving at, your conclusions, opinions, estimates, calculations, positions, decisions, beliefs, assertions or allegations, t h a t undermine, contradict, or conflict with your conclusions, opinions, calculations, estimates, positions, beliefs, assertions, or allegations, concerning the subject matter in question.

27. The term “date” means the exact day, month, and year, if ascertainable, or the best approximation thereof if not.

28. The term “communication” as used herein includes, without limitation, the following: conversations, telephone conversations, e-mails, text messages, social media communications, and other electronic transmissions of any kind, statements, discussions, debates, arguments, disclosures, interviews, consultation and every other manner of oral utterance, correspondence, or electronic or written transmittals of information or messages of any kind.

29. The term “document” shall mean those things described in Rule 34(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The terms “document” and “documents” are used herein in the broadest possible sense and mean written, typed, printed, recorded or graphic matter, however produced or reproduced of any kind and description, and whether an original, master, duplicate or copy, including, but not limited to, e-mails, papers, notes, accounts, books, advertisements, letters, memoranda, notes of conversations, contracts, agreements, drawings, telegrams, tape recordings, communications (as defined in paragraph 28 hereof), including inter-office and intra-office memoranda reports, studies, working papers, corporate records, minutes of meetings, notebooks, bank deposit slips, bank checks, canceled checks, diaries, diary entries, appointment books, desk calendars, photographs, transcriptions or sound recordings or any type of personal or telephone conversations or negotiations, meetings or conferences, or things similar to any of the foregoing, and to include any data, information or statistics contained within any data storage modules, tapes, discs or other memory device, or other information retrievable from storage systems, including but not limited to, computer-generated reports and printouts. If any document has been prepared in multiple copies which are not identical, each modified copy or non-identical copy is a separate “document.” The word “document” also includes data compilations from which information can be obtained and translated, if necessary, by the respondent through detection devices in a reasonably usable form.

30. The term “draft” shall mean any earlier, preliminary, preparatory, proposed, or tentative version of all or part of a document, whether or not such draft was superseded by a later draft or final document and whether or not the terms of the draft are the same or different from the terms of the final document.

INSTRUCTIONS

A. Unless otherwise specified, these requests seek documents for the period from January 1, 2010 until the present.

B. This document request (“Request”) requires you to produce all documents called for herein that were created or originated by you, or that came into your possession, custody or control, from all files or other sources that contain responsive documents, wherever located and whether active, in storage, or otherwise.

C. This Request shall be deemed to include any document now or at any time in your possession, custody, or control. A document is deemed to be in your possession, custody, or control if it is in your physical custody, or if it is in the physical custody of any other person and you: (i) own such document in whole or in part; (ii) have a right, by contract, statute, or otherwise, to use, inspect, examine, or copy such document on any terms; (iii) have an understanding, express or implied, that you may use, inspect, examine, or copy such document on any terms; or (iv) as a practical matter, have been able to use, inspect, examine, or copy such document when you sought to do so. If any requested document was, but no longer is, in your control, state the disposition of each such document.

D. The obligation to produce the documents specified below is of a continuing nature; your production is to be supplemented if at any time you acquire possession, custody, or control of any additional responsive documents, or otherwise discover additional responsive documents, between the time of initial production and conclusion of the investigation, to the fullest extent required by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the March 8, 2017 Court order, and the Local Rules of this Court.

E. Where only a portion of a document relates or refers to the subject indicated, the entire document is to be produced nevertheless, along with all attachments, appendices and exhibits.

F. Each document produced in response to the Requests below should be clearly categorized to indicate which Request(s) it is responsive to.

G. If any document or portion thereof is withheld under a claim of privilege, you shall produce so much of the document as is not subject to the possible claim of privilege, and shall furnish a statement, signed by an attorney representing you, which identifies each document or portion thereof for which a privilege is claimed, including the following information:

- (i) The date of the document;
- (ii) The name and title of the person who sent, authored, prepared, signed, or originated the document, or of the person who knows about the information contained therein;
- (iii) The name and title of the recipient of the document;
- (iv) All persons to whom copies of the document were furnished, along with such persons' job titles or positions;
- (v) A brief description of the subject matter or nature of the document sufficient to assess whether the assertion of privilege is valid;
- (vi) The specific basis upon which the privilege is claimed;

- (vii) With respect to any claim of privilege relating to an attorney, or action or advice or work product of an attorney, the identity of the attorney involved; and
- (viii) The paragraphs of this request to which such document responds.

H. All documents shall be produced as they are kept in the ordinary course of business and in their original file folders with any identifying labels, file markings, or similar identifying features. If there are no documents responsive to a category specified below, you shall so state in a writing produced at the time and place that documents are demanded to be produced by this request.

I. Documents created or stored electronically must be produced in their original electronic format, and not printed to paper or PDF. All electronically stored information (“ESI”) shall be produced in electronic form (the “production set”). Each document will have its own unique identifier (“Bates number”), which must be consistently formatted across the production, comprising of an alpha prefix and a fixed length number of digits (e.g., “PREFIX0000001”).

The production set shall consist of, and meet, the following specifications:

1. Image Files. All ESI will be rendered to single-page, black and white, Group IV tagged image file (“.tif” or “.tiff”) images with a resolution of 300 dpi, the file name for each page is named after its corresponding Bates number. Records in which a color copy is necessary to interpret the document (e.g., photographs, presentations, AUTOCAD, etc.) will be rendered to higher resolution, single-page joint photographic experts group (“.jpg” or “.jpeg”) format. Endorsements must follow these guidelines:
  - a. Bates numbers must be stamped on the lower right hand corner of all images.
  - b. Confidentiality must be stamped on the lower left hand corner of all images.
  - c. Other pertinent language may be stamped on the bottom center, or top of the images, as deemed necessary.
2. Load Files. All ESI must be produced with appropriate data load files, denoting logical document boundaries. The following files should be included within each production set.
  - a. A Concordance delimited ASCII text file (“.dat”).

- i. The .dat file will contain metadata from the original native documents, wherein the header row (i.e., the first line) of the .dat file must identify the metadata fields.
- ii. The .dat file must be delimited with the standard Concordance delimiters (the use of commas and quotes as delimiters is not acceptable):

ASCII 020 [¶] for the comma character;
ASCII 254 [b] for the quote character; and
ASCII 174 [®] for new line.

- iii. All attachments, or child records, should sequentially follow the parent record.
- iv. The following fields and metadata will be produced:

- b. Image cross-reference files, Opticon image file (“.opt”) and IPRO View Load file (“.lfp”), which link images to the database and identifies appropriate document breaks.

J. If any document requested herein has been lost, discarded, or destroyed, that document so lost, discarded, or destroyed shall be identified in writing (produced at the time and place that documents are demanded to be produced by this request) as completely as possible, together with the following information: date of disposal, manner of disposal, reason for disposal, person authorizing the disposal and person disposing of the document.

19. The term "December 17, 2016 Article" refers to the Boston Globe article entitled Critics hit law firms' bills after class-action lawsuits, published on or about December 17, 2016.

20. The term "hourly rates charged" refers to the hourly billing rates corresponding to work of an individual attorney or staff member of the firm, appearing on a fee petition submitted to the Court or otherwise charged to a client for work performed on a legal matter, including the rates listed on the Fee Petitions submitted in the SST Litigation.

21. The term “Staff Attorneys” refers to licensed attorneys working on a part-time or full-time basis for the Law Firm, but who are not deemed “associates” or otherwise on a traditional partnership track.

22. The term “hourly clients” refers to all past, present, and prospective clients who agree to pay and/or are charged for legal services rendered on an hourly basis, notwithstanding the actual amount paid or collected.

23. The term “non-hourly clients” refers to all past, present, and prospective clients who do not pay for legal services on an hourly rate, such as clients paying a flat fee, retained through a contingency arrangement and/or class action litigation, or other non-hourly fee structure, notwithstanding the actual amount paid or collected.

24. Any word written in the singular also includes the plural and vice-versa.

25. In case of doubt as to the scope of a clause including “and,” “or,” “any,” “all,” “each,” or “every,” the intended meaning is inclusive rather than exclusive.

26. The term “any” and the term “all” are intended to mean “any and all.”

27. As used herein, the term “or” and the term “and” shall mean “and/or” and vice-versa.

28. As used herein, the terms “relating to” or “referring to” or “concerning” or “constituting” or the like mean and include all documents that in any manner or form are relevant in any way to or bear upon the subject matter in question, including, without limitation, all documents which contain, record, reflect, summarize, evaluate, comment upon, transmit, refer to, or discuss that subject matter or that in any manner state the background of, or were the basis or bases for, or that record, evaluate comment upon, or were referred to, relied upon, utilized, generated, transmitted, or received in arriving at, your conclusions, opinions, estimates, calculations, positions, decisions, beliefs, assertions or allegations, that undermine, contradict, or conflict with your conclusions, opinions, calculations, estimates, positions, beliefs, assertions, or allegations, concerning the subject matter in question.

29. The term “date” means the exact day, month, and year, if ascertainable, or the best approximation thereof if not.

30. The term “communication” as used herein includes, without limitation, the following: conversations, telephone conversations, e-mails, text messages, social media communications, and other electronic transmissions of any kind, statements, discussions, debates, arguments, disclosures, interviews, consultation and every other manner of oral utterance, correspondence, or electronic or written transmittals of information or messages of any kind.

31. The term “document” shall mean those things described in Rule 34(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The terms “document” and “documents” are used herein in the broadest possible sense and mean written, typed, printed, recorded or graphic matter, however produced or reproduced of any kind and description, and whether an original, master, duplicate or copy, including, but not limited to, e-mails, papers, notes, accounts, books, advertisements, letters, memoranda, notes of conversations, contracts, agreements, drawings, telegrams, tape recordings, communications (as defined in paragraph 30 hereof), including inter-office and intra-office memoranda reports, studies, working papers, corporate records, minutes of meetings, notebooks, bank deposit slips, bank checks, canceled checks, diaries, diary entries, appointment books, desk calendars, photographs, transcriptions or sound recordings or any type of personal or telephone conversations or negotiations, meetings or conferences, or things similar to any of the foregoing, and to include any data, information or statistics contained within any data storage modules, tapes, discs or other memory device, or other information retrievable from storage systems, including but not limited to, computer-generated reports and printouts. If any document has been prepared in multiple copies which are not identical, each modified copy or non-identical copy is a separate “document.” The word “document” also includes data compilations from which information can be obtained and translated, if necessary, by the respondent through detection devices in a reasonably usable form.

32. The term “draft” shall mean any earlier, preliminary, preparatory, proposed, or tentative version of all or part of a document, whether or not such draft was superseded by a later draft or final document and whether or not the terms of the draft are the same or different from the terms of the final document.

INSTRUCTIONS

A. Pursuant to Rule 53(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Court’s March 8, 2017 Order (pp. 3-4), you are required to answer the following Interrogatories under oath and within 14 days, or within the time otherwise required by Court order.

B. For each of the Interrogatories listed below, please include the full name(s) of all persons from the Law Firm (attorneys, staff, agents, consultants, or affiliates) who have knowledge of the information provided.

C. These Interrogatories are deemed to be continuing and to require supplemental responses, if you obtain additional, contradictory, or different information. Such supplemental answers shall be filed promptly upon the discovery by you of such supplemental information. Each Interrogatory is to be answered separately and as completely as possible. The fact that an investigation is continuing and discovery is not complete shall not be used as a reason for failure to answer any Interrogatory as fully as possible.

D. If you refuse to answer any Interrogatory or any part thereof on the grounds of privilege, please identify the claimed privilege (i.e., attorney-client) and the nature of any information you refuse to disclose, referring specifically to the Interrogatory or any part thereof to which the claimed privilege applies, the form in which said information exists, and the grounds for the claimed privilege.

E. If the answer to all or any part of an Interrogatory is not presently known by or available to you, include a statement to that effect, specifying the portion of the Interrogatory which cannot be completely answered.

INTERROGATORIES

1. Describe each of the Law Firm's practice area(s), including areas of specialty, special services offered, the total number of attorneys and staff, and a brief description of any representative matters. [JUNE 1]

~~2. ~~including Mr. Hopkins' substantive contributions to the pleadings and/or case strategy, and what,~~
~~if any, role he had in the negotiation and mediation of the Final Settlement.~~

13. Describe the frequency and nature of communications with ERISA counsel over the course of the Litigation. Please specify the attorneys with whom you dealt ~~and the basic~~ ~~substance of those conversations.~~ [JULY 10]

14. Explain the Law Firm's litigation strategy in pursuing the claims raised in the SST Litigation, including the strategy employed in mediation. Identify and describe all events that impacted or caused the Firm to change that strategy. [JULY 10]

15. Explain any tensions and/or adversarial positions assumed between the ERISA counsel, on the one hand, and the Plaintiffs' Law Firms, on the other, including differences in litigation strategy, legal theories, damages, and/or theories of liability asserted during the SST
Litigation. [JULY 10]

16. Explain how the adversarial positions described above impacted or did not impact the Law Firm's strategy, including its discovery, mediation, and/or the settlement of the SST
Litigation. [JULY 10]

17. Describe in detail all agreements between the Firm/Plaintiffs' Law Firms, on the one hand, and the ERISA firms, on the other, to allocate to the ERISA firms a fixed percentage of the total Fee Award rendered by the Court in the SST Litigation. As to any agreement that did not represent the final agreement for allocation of the Fee Award, explain the reason for modifying a previous agreement, including all persons involved in these discussions and their affiliation/firm.
[JUNE 9]

18. Describe in detail the nature and the scope of the SST Document Review, including the total number of pages and/or size of the productions, the nature and date of each document production(s) received from State Street, all other document production(s) received in connection with the Litigation, and a general description of the information contained in each production. [JUNE 1]

19. Describe in detail how the Law Firm conducted the SST Document Review, including how it selected and/or staffed Staff Attorneys, a description of all training binders/protocols or search terms used for Document Review, and a brief description of the tasks assigned to Staff Attorneys and any other individuals who participated, and how those tasks furthered the Firm's overall litigation strategy. [JUNE 1]

20. 21. Describe in detail all documents destroyed and/or deleted from the Catalyst database, including the date, and explain why each document was deleted/destroyed. [JUNE 1]

22. Identify and describe any training the Firm provided to Staff Attorneys relating to the substantive allegations in the SST Litigation/SST Document Review, including addressing all legal issues, key witnesses, theories of liability, damages, and critical topics raised in the case. [JUNE 1]

~~23. Please list all class actions or other litigations in the past five years in which the Firm has assigned Staff Attorneys to work on the matter. For each matter, please list the full case caption, the docket number, the outcome of the case, and the hourly rates charged, if any, for each Staff Attorney who worked on the matter, and the nature of the work performed by the~~

~~assigned Staff Attorneys.~~

24. Please list the full name of each Staff Attorney who worked on the SST Litigation/Document Review. Please include for each Staff Attorney: his/her employment classification (full-time/part-time employee or independent contractor); how long he or she worked (has worked) at the Firm; the name/description of any other cases to which he or she was assigned during the pendency of SST Litigation/Document Review; whether he/she was allocated to Thornton for any portion of the SST Litigation; any prior experience in securities class action litigations, foreign-exchange trading and/or mismanagement of custodial funds; the physical location where the work was performed; and the hourly rate charged in the Fee Petition.

[JULY 10]

25. For each of the Staff Attorneys listed above, please describe all compensation paid to the Staff Attorney and the total number of hours recorded for work on the SST Litigation/Document Review. [JULY 10]

26. Identify any other individuals who worked on the SST Document review who were not Staff Attorneys and explain their affiliation with the Law Firm, their employment status, and how they were compensated for their time. [JUNE 1]

~~27. Explain how Staff Attorneys working on the SST Litigation recorded, including through handwritten and/or interim measures, and subsequently reported their time to the Firm and what, if any, steps were taken by the Firm to review or scrutinize those hours.~~

28. Explain how the Firm supervised and/or performed quality control of the work performed by the Staff Attorneys and others who participated in the SST Document Review, including the name, title, and tasks performed by any supervising individual. [JUNE 1]

29. Explain in detail the job responsibilities and tasks performed by the Staff Attorneys assigned to the SST Document Review, including those Staff Attorneys allocated to

Thornton, including but not limited to, coding, deposition preparation, creation of witness kits and similar work. [JUNE 1]

30. Describe the process for assigning and reviewing factual, legal, and/or discursive memoranda prepared by Staff Attorneys, including how such memoranda were relevant to, used as part of the SST Litigation, and/or shared among counsel. [JUNE 1]

31. Describe the Firm's understanding of how fees, costs and/or expenses associated with performance of discovery in the SST Document Review would be shared among the Firm, the Plaintiffs' Law Firms, and/or the ERISA firms, including but not limited to who would be responsible for: compensating Staff Attorneys for hours worked; hosting Catalyst and/or other electronic database(s); compiling "hot docs" and other documents relative to the liability and/or damages theories; and/or other expenses associated with the SST Document Review. [JULY 10]

32. For each of the categories listed above, explain the Firm's understanding of how those fees, costs and/or expenses would be reported to the Court in the event of a successful verdict and/or settlement. [JULY 10]

33. Explain the origin of the cost-sharing agreement with Thornton through which the Firm agreed to allocate the costs associated with a certain number of Staff Attorneys to Thornton, including the names and descriptions of all other matters in which the Firm entered into a similar arrangement (whether or not documented) to share costs with other firms, prior to or after the SST Litigation. [JUNE 1]

34. Describe the Firm's understanding, in or about early 2015, as to how Thornton would account for the allocation/sharing of costs for certain of the Firm's Staff Attorneys in its Fee Petition, including the Firm's understanding as to which firm was responsible for reporting the total number of hours worked by those Staff Attorneys on its Fee Petition and/or Lodestar calculation. [JUNE 1]

~~35. Please state whether the Firm's understanding of how Thornton would account for the sharing of Staff Attorney costs has changed since 2015, and if so, when, and explain what prompted that change.~~

~~36. Explain the Firm's current understanding of the all cost sharing agreements (formal or informal) between the Law Firm and Thornton to allocate and/or share costs for certain of the Firm's Staff Attorneys assigned to work on the SST Litigation.~~

37. Explain what knowledge, if any, the Firm had about the existence of a cost-sharing agreement(s) (formal or informal) between Labaton and Thornton to allocate and/or share costs for certain of Labaton's Staff Attorneys assigned to work on the SST Litigation.

[JUNE 9]

38. Describe in detail the process through which the Law Firm invoiced or otherwise sought reimbursement from Thornton for costs of those Staff Attorneys allocated to Thornton as part of the SST Litigation/Document Review. [JUNE 1]

39. Explain the Firm's process for removing time reported by Staff Attorneys allocated to Thornton for whom Thornton reimbursed the Firm, from the Firm's Fee Petition, including the role of the Firm's Accounting Department, and explain why time reported by Christopher Jordan and Jonathan Zaul for reviewing Thornton folders 2/9/15 to 4/14/15 was not removed from the Firm's timekeeping records. [JUNE 1]

40. Explain the Firm's process for removing time reported by Staff Attorneys allocated to Thornton for whom Thornton paid directly through a third-party staffing agency from the Firm's Fee Petition, including the role of the Firm's Accounting Department, and explain why time reported by Staff Attorneys Ann Ten Eyck and Rachel Wintterle for work performed from March through June 2015, was not removed from the Firm's timekeeping records. [JUNE 1]

~~41. Identify and describe all communications between the Law Firm and Thornton relating to the firms' cost-sharing agreement to share the costs of certain Staff Attorneys, including discussions regarding how those costs would be incorporated into the firms' respective Fee Petitions.~~

~~42. Identify and describe all communications between and among the Firm, Labaton, and Thornton relating to cost-sharing agreement(s) between any of the firms, including discussions regarding how those costs would be incorporated into the firms' respective Fee Petitions.~~

43. Describe what knowledge, if any, the Firm had in early 2015 about Michael Bradley's involvement in the SST Litigation, including any knowledge of Thornton's agreement to pay Mr. Bradley an agreed-upon rate of $500/hour. [JUNE 9]

44. Identify and describe all communications relating to Michael Bradley's participation in the SST Litigation/SST Document Review from 2010 through November 2016, including relating to compensation or an hourly billing rate that Thornton would charge for Mr. Bradley's time spent on the matter. [JUNE 9]

~~45. Explain how the Firm supervised and/or performed quality control of the work performed by Michael Bradley in the SST Document Review, including the name, title, and nature of any supervising individual.~~

46. Please describe any previous matters, whether based on a contingency, hourly, or other fee arrangement, in which the Firm engaged in a fee dispute with a client or class representative prior to the conclusion of the representation. For each such matter, explain how that fee dispute was resolved and any hourly rate/quantum meruit applied for work performed. [JULY 10]

47. Explain how the Law Firm determines annual billing rates for all attorneys, including Staff Attorneys. Please identify and describe all factors considered and/or resources relied upon in making these determinations. [JUNE 9]

48. Please explain how the process described above does or does not vary in determining billing rates charged to hourly clients and why. [JUNE 9]

49. Please list all of the Firm's hourly rates charged to hourly clients for each of the years 2010-2016. For each attorney, please list the relative experience level. [JULY 10]

50. Please list all of the Firm's hourly rates charged to non-hourly clients (whether in class action or other contingency-fee litigation) for each of the years 2010-2016. For each attorney, please list the relative experience level. [JULY 10]

51. Please list all of the hourly rates charged or associated with any matters in which the Firm has acted as local counsel for each of the years 2010-2016. For each attorney, please list the relative experience level. [JULY 10]

52. Please identify the Firm's managing partner for each of the years from 2010 to present, and list all members of the Firm's Executive Committee and describe their respective roles in determining annual rates. [JULY 10]

53. Explain how the Firm adjusts its hourly rates to reflect the geographic region in which a matter is filed/pending. If the Firm does not adjust its rates, explain why not. [JUNE 9]

54. Identify and describe all instances in which the Firm has billed an attorney at a lesser or higher rate than the annual rate determined by the Managing Partner, in conjunction with the Executive Committee, for a particular year and explain why that decision was made. [JULY 10]

55. Describe in detail the process for finalizing the term sheet and Final Settlement in the SST Litigation, including the role of the U.S. Department of Labor, U.S. Attorney's Office, U.S. Department of Justice and/or the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission in the negotiations. [JULY 10]

56. Describe in detail how the Firm prepared the Fee Petition and identify all individuals who assisted in the preparation and the nature of their contribution(s). [JUNE 9]

57. Describe in detail any review or steps taken to scrutinize or verify the time reported by the Law Firm prior to submitting the Firm's Fee Petition/Lodestar calculation. If the answer is none, explain why. [JUNE 9]

58. Describe what, if any, steps the Law Firm took to review, verify, or compare the Fee Petitions and/or Lodestar calculations prepared by the Plaintiffs' Firms or ERISA firms with the Firm's Fee Petition prior to filing its Fee Petition with the Court. If no action was taken, explain why not. [JUNE 9]

59. Identify and describe all communication the Firm had with the Plaintiffs' Law Firms and/or ERISA counsel relating to the Firm's preparation of the Fee Petition, including but not limited to preparation of the Lodestar calculation, the inclusion of Staff Attorneys for whom Thornton had paid costs, calculation of a Lodestar multiplier, and reasonableness of attorneys' fees. [JUNE 9]

60. Identify all individuals at the Firm who reviewed, assisted or contributed to the preparation and submission of Thornton's Fee Petition and, if appropriate, describe the nature of their contributions. [JUNE 9]

61. Describe how the Law Firm and/or the Plaintiffs' Law Firms arrived at a total fee percentage roughly equal to 25% of the final Fee Award. Please explain whether the Firm prepared its Lodestar calculation to achieve a 25% award of the total settlement amount. [JULY 10]

62. Identify all billing entries, costs and/or expenses incurred by the Firm during the

SST Litigation that the Firm did not include in its Fee Petition/Lodestar calculation, and the reasons therefor. [JUNE 9]

63. Explain the significance of the statement made in Paragraph 5 to the Declaration of Daniel P. Chiplock on Behalf of Lieff Cabraser Heimann & Bernstein, LLP In Support of Lead Counsel's Motion for An Award of Attorneys' Fees and Payment of Expenses (Docket #104-17), affirming that the hourly rates included in Exhibit A to the Declaration are the Firm's "regular rates charged for their services, which have been accepted in other complex class actions." Please describe any other instances in which the Firm has submitted a Fee Petition with the same or similar language. [JUNE 9]

64. Do you contend that the rates listed in the Firm's Fee Petition represent the prevailing rates in the community for similar services performed by lawyers of reasonably comparable skill, experience and reputation for each of the respective tasks performed? Why or why not? [JUNE 9]

65. Identify, in detail, each error in your Fee Petition, and explain each step or action taken to correct each error, including all documents or information consulted or relied upon in making the correction(s). [JULY 10]

66. Describe when and how the Law Firm first learned about the Boston Globe's inquiry into the Fee Award, and underlying billing practices employed by the Firm and other counsel in the SST Litigation, that preceded the publication of the December 17, 2016 Article. [JUNE 9]

67. Describe when and how the Law Firm first identified duplicative billing entries reflected in the Firm's Fee Petition and describe all actions taken by the Firm to review, confirm, and/or correct those errors. [JUNE 9]

68. Describe in detail how the Law Firm participated in the drafting of the November

10, 2016 Letter, including the full names of all individuals who contributed to the Letter, the nature of any internal review by the Firm, and all individuals outside the firm who reviewed and/or contributed to the Letter and the nature of their contribution(s). [JUNE 9]

69. Identify and describe all documents relied upon by the Law Firm in the drafting of the November 10, 2016 Letter. [JUNE 9]

~~70. State the total number of class members and the estimated recovery or settlement amounts, net of fees and expenses, due to each class member.~~

~~71. Itemize the total estimated damages to the ERISA and non-ERISA plaintiffs and summarize the factual basis for the estimate.~~

72. Identify, in detail, any additional errors in your any communication with the Court or with the Special Master, since filing of the Fee Petition(s) and explain each step or action taken to correct each error, including all documents or information consulted or relied upon in making the correction(s). [JUNE 9]

73. Identify and explain any mistakes you have identified in the Fee Petition, Motion for Attorneys' Fees, and/or Fee Award, not described above. [JUNE 9]

74. Identify any other individuals, not listed above, who have knowledge of the Interrogatories and/or the SST Litigation and explain the general nature of such knowledge. [JUNE 9]

75. Identify and describe the steps taken by the Firm to identify documents responsive to the corresponding Requests for Production of Documents served by the Special Master including, without limitation, the name and title of those involved, the process undertaken, the database and documents searched, and the parameters of any electronic search including date range, timekeepers and search terms. [JULY 10]

76. Identify with specificity sufficient to constitute a valid response to a request for production of documents, any documents identified by you as responsive to the Special Master's Request for Production of Documents but withheld from production to the Special Master on grounds of any evidentiary or other privilege or otherwise including (a) the type of document; (b) its date if any; (c) any identifying marks such as bates stamp or other numeric designation; (d) the reason you withheld it from production; and (e) the current location of the document. To the extent any such document or other responsive document has been destroyed, identify (a) the type of document; (b) its date, if any; (c) the date of its destruction; (d) the circumstance thereof; and (e) the persons involved therein. For each such person, please provide their name, current or prior title or position with the Law Firm, the date, if any, of termination of employment with the Law Firm and the reason therefor, and the last known residential and business address. [JULY 10]

77. Identify the timekeeping, accounting, and billing software systems utilized by the Law Firm to record and bill attorney time charges, costs and expenses associated with legal and other services rendered by the Law Firm in connection with the SST Litigation and the persons within the Law Firm with the most knowledge and responsibility for the system and operation.

Hi Brian:

Thanks for sending over your objections to the written discovery propounded on May 18, 2017.

As noted in my previous correspondence to the group, our meeting addressed a number of concerns raised by Labaton and Lief, which in large part overlapped with Thornton's objections. In addition to prioritizing the information most needed for depositions and eliminating many RFPs and Interrogatories altogether, we respond to Thornton's objections (and clarify the scope of the requests) as listed below.

In the event that Thornton continues to object or raises new objections to the revised RFPs and Interrogatories attached, please send us an email detailing the nature of each request and corresponding Ints/RFP by no later than Friday, May 26, 2017. Again, we will consider all timely objections and do our best to further narrow the scope of eliminate extraneous information, if appropriate.

If the Firm is unable to complete the search by the date provided due to a large volume of responsive documents, please inform me in writing of the proposed search terms and total number of "hits." Should this be the case, we will try to work together to provide a list of relevant timekeepers and/or narrowed search terms.

Finally, as stated previously, if the Firm has already produced information requested as part of its prior document productions, please respond in writing with the specific date(s) or production and Bates nos. of all responsive documents. Such information need not be produced a second time.

Interrogatories

No. 1- Reference to "other representative matters" includes publicly-available information commonly listed on the Firm's website or shared with new or prospective clients. This interrogatory does not seek proprietary information.

No. 2- Stricken in its entirety for now. The Special Master reserves the right to propound additional discovery specifically to address the subject matter, experience and/or expertise of the Law Firm prior to its involvement in the SST Litigation, involving FX-based claims.

No. 4- Stricken in its entirety for now. The Special Master reserves the right to propound additional discovery specifically to address potential double-billing of Staff Attorney and attorney time between the SST Litigation and other, concurrent litigations in which the Firm was involved.

Objection to Nos. 8 & 9- Interrogatories seek (i) a narrative overview describing the Firm's theory of damages and/or the potential monetary recovery to the class; and (ii) an explanation of the risks considered by the Firm and other factors that impacted the Firm's strategy or damage calculation. This information is directly relevant to determining the appropriateness of attorney's fees, hours billed, and fairness of the settlement reached.

Nos. 10-11, 14- Strike the portion of each interrogatory seeking a description of the "basic substance" of certain communications referenced therein.

Objection to No. 10- This interrogatory seeks only those communications between and among Plaintiffs' Law Firms, as described therein, relating to the State Street Litigation or foreign-exchange-based claims. This information is directly relevant to understanding the dynamics and course of the complex class action (7 years in duration) as well as to determining the relationship between the Plaintiffs' Law Firms and the background giving rise to a cost-sharing agreement between Lieff/Labaton and Thornton sharing the costs of certain staff attorneys.

Objection to No. 11- This interrogatory seeks only the Firm's understanding of the role played by the listed government agencies. This information is directly relevant and probative of the hours billed/total attorney hours reported in the Fee Petition as well as bears on the timing and terms of the Final Settlement in the State Street Litigation.

Objection to No. 12- This interrogatory seeks information about any relationship between any Thornton attorneys, including but not limited to Garrett Bradley, and any persons at the USAO, including but not limited to the Boston office of the USAO. Please explain the scope and nature of any conversations between Thornton and the USAO. It is limited to the conversations relating to the State Street Litigation. This information is directly relevant to and probative of the role played by each firm, the hours billed/total attorney hours reported in the Fee Petition, and bears on the timing and terms of the Final Settlement in the State Street Litigation

Objection to Nos. 14 & 16- This interrogatory seeks only those communications between and among Plaintiffs' Law Firms and ERISA counsel, as described therein, relating to the State Street Litigation or foreign-exchange-based claims. This information is directly relevant to understanding the dynamics and course of the complex class action (7 years in duration) as well as to determining the relationship between the Plaintiffs' Law Firms and the ERISA firms, and how that impacted the course of discovery employed by each in the State Street Litigation, including the sharing and/or lack of sharing of resources between and among the firms.

Objection to No. 15- This interrogatory seeks an overview of the litigation strategy employed by Thornton throughout the course of the Litigation. To the extent that Thornton's strategy changed at any time, please identify, generally, the time period or relevant event (i.e. Lobby Conference, Motion to Dismiss, access to State Street production) that caused a change in said strategy. This information is directly relevant to determining the appropriateness of attorney's fees, hours billed, and fairness of the settlement reached.

Nos. 16-17- If the answer is "none," so state in your response.

Objection to No. 17- This interrogatory seeks a general description and/or explanation of how the inclusion of the ERISA firms in the State Street Litigation impacted, if at all, the litigation strategy for the consumer class. This information is directly relevant to provide context for the breadth and scope of the Litigation, impacting the hours billed and utilization of Staff Attorneys, as well as the fairness/appropriateness of the final outcome/Fee Award rendered in the case.

No. 19- Figures need not be exact; approximations or ranges for the total number of pages or GB are acceptable. The reference to "general description of the information contained in the production" may include brief descriptions for the various categories of documents, such as "real time trading transactions"; "internal State Street emails between traders and compliance"; and/or "foreign exchange market spreadsheets of exchange rates."

Nos. 19/29- To the extent these interrogatories overlap in substance, the Firm need not answer twice. However, insofar as one or more interrogatories seeks information that is not included in the other two, please respond to all sub-questions presented.

No. 34- Reference to “all other matters in which the Firm entered into a similar arrangement [] to share costs with other firms” refers to any other matters in which the firm agreed to share the costs of the time spent/billed by another firm’s staff or contract attorneys, and reimbursed that other firm either directly or indirectly for that staff attorney time. If none, so state in your response.

Objection to No. 48 - This interrogatory seeks information about any situation and/or circumstances, whether or not arising to a true “dispute,” in which the Firm has ended its representation of a client/class representative prematurely or otherwise before the anticipated conclusion of a matter, whether due to insistence of the client/class representative or the Firm, and where the Firm sought payment from the client or the client paid for the work already performed by the Firm. To the extent an hourly rate was paid to the Firm for services rendered, please identify that rate. If another sum was paid, please provide that figure and the basis for that payment. Any proprietary and/or privileged client information may be redacted. Moreover, this information is directly relevant to and probative of the “hourly rates” charged by the Firm to its clients.

Objections to Nos. 49-56- Information about how the Firm arrives at the hourly billing rates submitted in the Fee Petitions, including the rates submitted for Staff Attorneys used and/or paid for by the Firm, is directly relevant to and probative of the central issue in this case—appropriateness of the representations in the Fee Petition (and attorney billing rates reported therein) and the Fee Award in the State Street Litigation. The Firm’s hourly billing rates throughout the course of the State Street Litigation (a 7 year period) is essential to fully evaluating this issue. Moreover, the nature of billing rates charged in other matters as well as in non-class action matters is directly relevant to determining whether the hourly rates charged in the State Street Litigation are “regular rates charged for their services, which have been accepted in other complex class actions.”

No. 56- This interrogatory seeks identification/description only of those instances in the State Street Litigation where the Firm billed an attorney at a higher or lesser rate than the rate determined by the Firm. Please explain the deviation in any such instance.

Objection to No. 57- This interrogatory seeks the Firm’s general observations and understandings about the role played by the listed government agencies in progressing from the settlement in principle to the Final Settlement resolving the Litigation. This information is directly relevant to and probative of the role played by each firm, the hours billed/total attorney hours reported in the Fee Petition, and bears on the timing and terms of the Final Settlement in the State Street Litigation

Objection to No. 66- This interrogatory does not call for speculation, but asks the Firm to agree or dispute with a central contention in the case regarding the appropriateness of the hourly billing rates submitted in the Fee Petition.

RFPs

No. 1- As proposed by Lief/Labaton, a hard drive containing the Catalyst database is acceptable. If you contend such production is barred under the terms of the protective order entered into with State Street’s counsel during the State Street Litigation, please respond stating with specificity the nature of such an objection.

No. 2- As discussed with counsel yesterday, production of all documents marked “hot” or “smoking hot” in the Catalyst database is sufficient; the phrase “bearing on material issues” is, therefore, stricken.

No. 3: This request seeks documents relating to representation of class representatives in the State Street Litigation only. The reference to all documents “referring to, relating to, or evidencing terms of the law Firm’s representation of class representatives” relates to any written communications, emails, notes that set out the terms of an agreement that is not otherwise reflected in a formal written agreement previously produced, or any documents that contain terms that amend a formal agreement and is not otherwise contained in another written agreement produced therein.

Objection to Nos. 4 & 5 (6 is now stricken) : These requests seek only information, as described therein, from 2009-2011. To the extent any such information is privileged and/or bears on the attorney-client privilege, you may redact such privileged information. This information is directly relevant to and probative of the hourly billing rate charged by the Firm and review of the Fee Award, two central issues in this case.

Objection to Nos. 7, 8, 9 : Requests nos. 8 and 9 seek only those documents referenced therein from 2010-2011 and 2015-2016. Moreover, each of these requests seeks information about the typical and regular billing rates charged by the Firm for providing legal services notwithstanding the rates charged here. To the extent any such information is privileged and/or bears on the attorney-client privilege, you may redact such privileged information. This information is directly relevant to and probative of the hourly billing rate charged by the Firm and review of the Fee Award, two central issues in this case.

Objection to No. 10- This request seeks only those emails and/or other communications or documents soliciting opinions and/or retaining an expert to provide an opinion as described therein with regard to Staff Attorneys only, as well as all opinions, reports or work product received by the Firm from said experts or third parties.

No. 17- To the extent that a single 1099 or W-2 captures all compensation paid by the Firm directly to a particular Staff Attorney, the Firm need not produce the individual paystubs reflected on those documents. However, in the event a Staff Attorney received individual or intermittent payments from the Firm that is/are not reflected on a 1099 and/or W-2, please produce both the appropriate 1099/W-2 and all records of payment made by Thornton directly, in order to provide a complete record of all payments made in connection with that particular Staff Attorney's work on the State Street Litigation. If none, so state.

Objection to No. 22- This request seeks information solicited and/or maintained by the Firm from a third-party with the express purpose of assisting the Firm in litigating the legal and factual issues in the State Street Litigation. This information is directly relevant to provide context for the breadth and scope of the Litigation, including as the nature of the Litigation impacts the hours billed and utilization of Staff Attorneys, as well as the fairness/appropriateness of the final outcome/Fee Award rendered in the case. If Thornton did not retain an expert, so state in your response. Moreover, If you contend such production is barred under the terms of the protective order entered into with State Street's counsel during the State Street Litigation, please respond clarifying the scope of the protective order and how this request violates it.

Objections to Nos. 26 & 27- These requests seek work product produced by the Staff Attorneys working on the State Street Litigation, the nature of which varied over the 7-year course of the litigation. This information is extremely probative of the central issue in the case concerning the appropriate billing rate for staff attorneys and the appropriateness of the rates submitted in the firms' Fee Petitions.

Objection to No. 30- This request seeks communications, or other documents evidencing communications, between Thornton attorneys (including but not limited to Garrett Bradley) and attorneys at the USAO Boston/other offices to further confirm or clarify Thornton's role in the multi-faceted negotiation of the Final Settlement in the State Street Litigation. It is limited to the conversations relating to the State Street Litigation. This information is directly relevant and probative of the role played by each firm in the Litigation, the hours billed/total attorney hours reported in the Fee Petition, and bears on the timing and the fairness of terms of the Final Settlement.

Objections to No. 52- This request seeks all work product, if any, produced by Michael Bradley. Like the Staff Attorneys, Michael Bradley was a licensed attorney who performed document review as part of his work on the State Street Litigation, the nature of which varied over the 7-year course of the litigation. This information is extremely probative of the central issue in the case concerning the appropriate billing rate for Michael Bradley and/or the appropriateness of the rates submitted by Thornton in its fee petition.

All the best,

Bill

4. The term "Plaintiffs' Law Firms" refers to Labaton, Lieff, and/or Thornton, and their respective employees, contractors, affiliates, agents, counsels, and representatives, collectively and/or individually.
5. The term "ERISA firms" or "ERISA counsel" refers to Brian McTigue and/or the McTigue Law Firm, the Law Offices of Keller Rohrback, LLP, Zuckerman Spaeder, LLP, Beins Alexrod, P.C., and any firms retained by one or more of the above, and all employees, agents, counsels, attorneys, and representatives.
6. The term "ARTRS" refers to the Arkansas Teacher Retirement System and/or its Executive Director, George Hopkins, Esq.

7. The term “State Street Litigation”, “SST Litigation” or “Litigation” refers to Arkansas Teacher Retirement System, et al. v. State Street Corporation, et al., C.A. No. 1:11-cv-10230-MLW, pending in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts.

8. The term “State Street Document Review”, “SST Document Review” or “Document Review” refers to the review of hard copy and electronic documents produced as part of discovery in Arkansas Teacher Retirement System, et al. v. State Street Corporation, et al., C.A. No. 1:11-cv-10230-MLW, pending in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts.

9. The term “State Street” refers to State Street Bank and Trust Company and/or State Street Global Markets, defendants in the SST Litigation.

10. The term “settlement in principle” refers to the settlement agreement reached in substance between counsel by and through mediation.

11. The term “Court” refers to the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts.

12. The term “Fee Petition” or “Fee Application” refers to the Declaration of Lawrence A. Sucharow in Support of Plaintiffs’ Assented-To Motion for Final Approval of Proposed Class Settlement and Plan of Allocation and Final Certification of Settlement Class and Lead Counsel’s Motion for An Award of Attorneys’ Fees, Payment of Litigation Expenses, and Payment of Service Awards to Plaintiffs (Docket #104), and Exhibits 1-32 attached thereto, filed with the Court in the State Street Litigation. In particular, “Fee Petition” in conjunction with one or more of the individual firms, refers to the respective Exhibit (and exhibits attached thereto) in which an individual law firm sought approval for payment of its respective fee and expenses incurred in the SST Litigation, including all declarations, affidavits, and/or the Lodestar reports filed therewith.

13. The term “Motion for Attorneys’ Fees” refers to Lead Counsel’s Motion for An Award of Attorneys’ Fees and Payment of Litigation Expenses, including the Memorandum in Support and exhibits, filed with the Court on or about September 15, 2016 and October 21, 2016, respectively (Docket #102, 108).

14. The term “Final Settlement” refers to the Stipulation and Agreement of Settlement dated July 26, 2016 (Docket #89).

15. The term “Fee Award” refers to a certain award of attorneys’ fees of $74,541,250.00 and expenses and costs of $1,257,697.94, as approved by the Court in the Lawsuit by Order dated November 2, 2016.

16. The term “November 10, 2016 Letter” refers to the letter from David Goldsmith to Judge Wolf dated November 10, 2016 (Exhibit A to Docket #117), advising the Court of inadvertent errors in the Fee Petitions and Fee Order.

17. The term “December 17, 2016 Article” refers to the Boston Globe article entitled Critics hit law firms’ bills after class-action lawsuits, published on or about December 17, 2016.

18. The term “hourly rates charged” refers to the hourly billing rates corresponding to work of an individual attorney or staff member of the firm, appearing on a fee petition submitted to the Court or otherwise charged to a client for work performed on a legal matter, including the rates listed on the Fee Petitions submitted in the SST Litigation.

19. The term “Staff Attorneys” refers to licensed attorneys working on a part-time or full-time basis for Lief/Labatton or other firm, but who are not deemed “associates” or otherwise on a traditional partnership track.

20. The term “hourly clients” refers to all past, present, and prospective clients who agree to pay and/or are charged for legal services rendered on an hourly basis, notwithstanding the actual amount paid or collected.

21. The term “non-hourly clients” refers to all past, present, and prospective clients who do not pay for legal services on an hourly rate, such as clients paying a flat fee, retained through a contingency arrangement and/or class action litigation, or other non-hourly fee structure, notwithstanding the actual amount paid or collected.

22. Any word written in the singular also includes the plural and vice-versa.

23. In case of doubt as to the scope of a clause including “and,” “or,” “any,” “all,” “each,” or “every,” the intended meaning is inclusive rather than exclusive.

24. The term “any” and the term “all” are intended to mean “any and all.”

25. As used herein, the term “or” and the term “and” shall mean “and/or” and vice-versa.

26. As used herein, the terms “relating to” or “referring to” or “concerning” or “constituting” or the like mean and include all documents that in any manner or form are relevant in any way to or bear upon the subject matter in question, including, without limitation, all documents which contain, record, reflect, summarize, evaluate, comment upon, transmit, refer to, or discuss that subject matter or that in any manner state the background of, or were the basis or bases for, or that record, evaluate comment upon, or were referred to, relied upon, utilized, generated, transmitted, or received in arriving at, your conclusions, opinions, estimates, calculations, positions, decisions, beliefs, assertions or allegations, that undermine, contradict, or conflict with your conclusions, opinions, calculations, estimates, positions, beliefs, assertions, or allegations, concerning the subject matter in question.

27. The term “date” means the exact day, month, and year, if ascertainable, or the best approximation thereof if not.

28. The term “communication” as used herein includes, without limitation, the following: conversations, telephone conversations, e-mails, text messages, social media communications, and other electronic transmissions of any kind, statements, discussions, debates, arguments, disclosures, interviews, consultation and every other manner of oral utterance, correspondence, or electronic or written transmittals of information or messages of any kind.

29. The term “document” shall mean those things described in Rule 34(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The terms “document” and “documents” are used herein in the broadest possible sense and mean written, typed, printed, recorded or graphic matter, however produced or reproduced of any kind and description, and whether an original, master, duplicate or copy, including, but not limited to, e-mails, papers, notes, accounts, books, advertisements, letters, memoranda, notes of conversations, contracts, agreements, drawings, telegrams, tape recordings, communications (as defined in paragraph 28 hereof), including inter-office and intra-office memoranda reports, studies, working papers, corporate records, minutes of meetings, notebooks, bank deposit slips, bank checks, canceled checks, diaries, diary entries, appointment books, desk calendars, photographs, transcriptions or sound recordings or any type of personal or telephone conversations or negotiations, meetings or conferences, or things similar to any of the foregoing, and to include any data, information or statistics contained within any data storage modules, tapes, discs or other memory device, or other information retrievable from storage systems, including but not limited to, computer-generated reports and printouts. If any document has been prepared in multiple copies which are not identical, each modified copy or non-identical copy is a separate “document.” The word “document” also includes data compilations from which information can be obtained, translated, if necessary, by the respondent through detection devices in a reasonably usable form.

30. The term “draft” shall mean any earlier, preliminary, preparatory, proposed, or tentative version of all or part of a document, whether or not such draft was superseded by a later draft or final document and whether or not the terms of the draft are the same or different from the terms of the final document.

INSTRUCTIONS

A. Unless otherwise specified, these requests seek documents for the period from January 1, 2010 until the present.

B. This document request (“Request”) requires you to produce all documents called for herein that were created or originated by you, or that came into your possession, custody or control, from all files or other sources that contain responsive documents, wherever located and whether active, in storage, or otherwise.

C. This Request shall be deemed to include any document now or at any time in your possession, custody, or control. A document is deemed to be in your possession, custody, or control if it is in your physical custody, or if it is in the physical custody of any other person and you: (i) own such document in whole or in part; (ii) have a right, by contract, statute, or otherwise, to use, inspect, examine, or copy such document on any terms; (iii) have an understanding, express or implied, that you may use, inspect, examine, or copy such document on any terms; or (iv) as a practical matter, have been able to use, inspect, examine, or copy such document when you sought to do so. If any requested document was, but no longer is, in your control, state the disposition of each such document.

D. The obligation to produce the documents specified below is of a continuing nature; your production is to be supplemented if at any time you acquire possession, custody, or control of any additional responsive documents, or otherwise discover additional responsive documents, between the time of initial production and conclusion of the investigation, to the fullest extent required by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the March 8, 2017 Court order, and the Local Rules of this Court.

E. Where only a portion of a document relates or refers to the subject indicated, the entire document is to be produced nevertheless, along with all attachments, appendices and exhibits.

F. Each document produced in response to the Requests below should be clearly categorized to indicate which Request(s) it is responsive to.

G. If any document or portion thereof is withheld under a claim of privilege, you shall produce so much of the document as is not subject to the possible claim of privilege, and shall furnish a statement, signed by an attorney representing you, which identifies each document or portion thereof for which a privilege is claimed, including the following information:

- (i) The date of the document;
- (ii) The name and title of the person who sent, authored, prepared, signed, or originated the document, or of the person who knows about the information contained therein;
- (iii) The name and title of the recipient of the document;
- (iv) All persons to whom copies of the document were furnished, along with such persons' job titles or positions;
- (v) A brief description of the subject matter or nature of the document sufficient to assess whether the assertion of privilege is valid;
- (vi) The specific basis upon which the privilege is claimed;

(vii) With respect to any claim of privilege relating to an attorney, or action or advice or work product of an attorney, the identity of the attorney involved; and

(viii) The paragraphs of this request to which such document responds.

H. All documents shall be produced as they are kept in the ordinary course of business and in their original file folders with any identifying labels, file markings, or similar identifying features. If there are no documents responsive to a category specified below, you shall so state in a writing produced at the time and place that documents are demanded to be produced by this request.

I. Documents created or stored electronically must be produced in their original electronic format, and not printed to paper or PDF. All electronically stored information (“ESI”) shall be produced in electronic form (the “production set”). Each document will have its own unique identifier (“Bates number”), which must be consistently formatted across the production, comprising of an alpha prefix and a fixed length number of digits (e.g., “PREFIX0000001”).

The production set shall consist of, and meet, the following specifications:

1. Image Files. All ESI will be rendered to single-page, black and white, Group IV tagged image file (“.tif” or “.tiff”) images with a resolution of 300 dpi, the file name for each page is named after its corresponding Bates number. Records in which a color copy is necessary to interpret the document (e.g., photographs, presentations, AUTOCAD, etc.) will be rendered to higher resolution, single-page joint photographic experts group (“.jpg” or “.jpeg”) format. Endorsements must follow these guidelines:
  - a. Bates numbers must be stamped on the lower right hand corner of all images.
  - b. Confidentiality must be stamped on the lower left hand corner of all images.
  - c. Other pertinent language may be stamped on the bottom center, or top of the images, as deemed necessary.
2. Load Files. All ESI must be produced with appropriate data load files, denoting logical document boundaries. The following files should be included within each production set.
  - a. A Concordance delimited ASCII text file (“.dat”).

- i. The .dat file will contain metadata from the original native documents, wherein the header row (i.e., the first line) of the .dat file must identify the metadata fields.
- ii. The .dat file must be delimited with the standard Concordance delimiters (the use of commas and quotes as delimiters is not acceptable):

ASCII 020 [¶] for the comma character;
ASCII 254 [b] for the quote character; and

to the Court or otherwise charged to a client for work performed on a legal matter, including the rates listed on the Fee Petitions submitted in the SST Litigation.

21. The term “Staff Attorneys” refers to licensed attorneys working on a part-time or full-time basis for Labaton, Lieff, and/or a third-party agency, but who are not deemed “associates” or otherwise on a traditional partnership track.

22. The term “hourly clients” refers to all past, present, and prospective clients who agree to pay and/or are charged for legal services rendered on an hourly basis, notwithstanding the actual amount paid or collected.

23. The term “non-hourly clients” refers to all past, present, and prospective clients who do not pay for legal services on an hourly rate, such as clients paying a flat fee, retained through a contingency arrangement and/or class action litigation, or other non-hourly fee structure, notwithstanding the actual amount paid or collected.

24. Any word written in the singular also includes the plural and vice-versa.

25. In case of doubt as to the scope of a clause including “and,” “or,” “any,” “all,” “each,” or “every,” the intended meaning is inclusive rather than exclusive.

26. The term “any” and the term “all” are intended to mean “any and all.”

27. As used herein, the term “or” and the term “and” shall mean “and/or” and vice-versa.

28. As used herein, the terms “relating to” or “referring to” or “concerning” or “constituting” or the like mean and include all documents that in any manner or form are relevant in any way to or bear upon the subject matter in question, including, without limitation, all documents which contain, record, reflect, summarize, evaluate, comment upon, transmit, refer to, or discuss that subject matter or that in any manner state the background of, or were the basis or bases for, or that record, evaluate comment upon, or were referred to, relied upon, utilized, generated, transmitted, or received in arriving at, your conclusions, opinions, estimates, calculations, positions, decisions, beliefs, assertions or allegations, that undermine, contradict, or conflict with your conclusions, opinions, calculations, estimates, positions, beliefs, assertions, or allegations, concerning the subject matter in question.

29. The term “date” means the exact day, month, and year, if ascertainable, or the best approximation thereof if not.

30. The term “communication” as used herein includes, without limitation, the following: conversations, telephone conversations, e-mails, text messages, social media communications, and other electronic transmissions of any kind, statements, discussions, debates, arguments, disclosures, interviews, consultation and every other manner of oral utterance, correspondence, or electronic or written transmittals of information or messages of any kind.

31. The term “document” shall mean those things described in Rule 34(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The terms “document” and “documents” are used herein in the broadest possible sense and mean written, typed, printed, recorded or graphic matter, however produced or reproduced of any kind and description, and whether an original, master, duplicate or copy, including, but not limited to e-mails, papers, notes, accounts, books, advertisements, letters, memoranda, notes of conversations, contracts, agreements, drawings, telegrams, tape recordings, communications (as defined in paragraph 30 hereof), including inter-office and intra-office memoranda reports, studies, working papers, corporate records, minutes of meetings, notebooks, bank deposit slips, bank checks, canceled checks, diaries, diary entries, appointment books, desk calendars, photographs, transcriptions or sound recordings or any type of personal or telephone conversations or negotiations, meetings or conferences, or things similar to any of the foregoing, and to include any data, information or statistics contained within any data storage modules, tapes, discs or other memory device, or other information retrievable from storage systems, including but not limited to, computer-generated reports and printouts. If any document has been prepared in multiple copies which are not identical, each modified copy or non-identical copy is a separate “document.” The word “document” also includes data compilations from which information can be obtained and translated, if necessary, by the respondent through detection devices in a reasonably usable form.

32. The term “draft” shall mean any earlier, preliminary, preparatory, proposed, or tentative version of all or part of a document, whether or not such draft was superseded by a later draft or final document and whether or not the terms of the draft are the same or different from the terms of the final document.

INSTRUCTIONS

A. Pursuant to Rule 53(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Court’s March 8, 2017 Order (pp. 3-4), you are required to answer the following Interrogatories under oath and within 14 days, or within the time otherwise required by Court order.

B. For each of the Interrogatories listed below, please include the full name(s) of all persons from the Law Firm (attorneys, staff, agents, consultants, or affiliates) who have knowledge of the information provided.

C. These Interrogatories are deemed to be continuing and to require supplemental responses, if you obtain additional, contradictory, or different information. Such supplemental answers shall be filed promptly upon the discovery by you of such supplemental information. Each Interrogatory is to be answered separately and as completely as possible. The fact that an investigation is continuing and discovery is not complete shall not be used as a reason for failure to answer any Interrogatory as fully as possible.

D. If you refuse to answer any Interrogatory or any part thereof on the grounds of privilege, please identify the claimed privilege (i.e., attorney-client) and the nature of any information you refuse to disclose, referring specifically to the Interrogatory or any part thereof to which the claimed privilege applies, the form in which said information exists, and the grounds for the claimed privilege.

E. If the answer to all or any part of an Interrogatory is not presently known by or available to you, include a statement to that effect, specifying the portion of the Interrogatory which cannot be completely answered.

50. Please explain how the process described above does or does not vary in determining billing rates charged to hourly clients and why. [JUNE 9]

51. Please explain how the Firm determines the hourly rates charged for Staff Attorneys employed or allocated to the Firm, Firm staff, independent contractors and/or other individuals who participate in legal matters but are not associates or partners at the Firm. [JUNE 9]

52. Please list all of the Firm's hourly rates charged to hourly clients for each of the years 2010-2016. For each attorney, please list the relative experience level. [JULY 10]

53. Please list all of the Firm's hourly rates charged to non-hourly clients (whether in class action or other contingency-fee litigation) for each of the years 2010-2016. For each attorney, please list the relative experience level. [JULY 10]

54. Please list all of the hourly rates charged or associated with any matters in which the Firm has acted as local counsel for each of the years 2010-2016. For each attorney, please list the relative experience level. [JULY 10]

55. Explain how the Firm adjusts its hourly rates to reflect the geographic region in which a matter is filed/pending. If the Firm does not adjust its rates, explain why not. [JUNE 9]

56. Identify and describe all instances in which the Firm has billed an attorney at a lesser or higher rate than the annual rate previously determined for that particular year(s) and explain why that decision was made. [JULY 10]

57. Describe in detail the process for finalizing the term sheet and Final Settlement in the SST Litigation, including the role of the U.S. Department of Labor, U.S. Attorney's Office, U.S. Department of Justice and/or the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission in the negotiations. [JULY 10]

58. Describe in detail how the Firm prepared its Fee Petition and identify all individuals who assisted in the preparation and the nature of their contribution(s). [JUNE 9]

59. Describe in detail any review or steps taken to scrutinize or verify the time reported by the Law Firm, including time reported by Staff Attorneys allocated to the Firm, prior to submitting the Firm's Fee Petition/Lodestar calculation. If the answer is none, explain why. [JUNE 9]

60. Describe what, if any, steps the Law Firm took to review, verify, or compare the Fee Petitions and/or Lodestar calculations prepared by the Plaintiffs' Firms or ERISA firms with the Firm's Fee Petition prior to filing its Fee Petition with the Court. If no action was taken, explain why not. [JUNE 9]

61. Identify and describe all communication the Firm had with the Plaintiffs' Law Firms and/or ERISA counsel relating to the Firm's preparation of the Fee Petition, including but not limited to preparation of the Lodestar calculation, the inclusion of the Lieff and/or Labaton Staff Attorneys for whom the Firm had paid costs, calculation of a Lodestar multiplier, and reasonableness of attorneys' fees. [JUNE 9]

62. Describe how the Law Firm and/or the Plaintiffs' Law Firms arrived at a total fee percentage roughly equal to 25% of the final Fee Award. Please explain whether the Firm prepared its Lodestar calculation to achieve a 25% award of the total settlement amount. [JULY 10]

63. Identify all billing entries, costs and/or expenses incurred by the Firm during the SST Litigation that the Firm did not include in its Fee Petition/Lodestar calculation, and the reasons therefor. [JUNE 9]

64. Explain the significance of the statement made in Paragraph 4 of the Declaration of Garrett J. Bradley, Esq. On Behalf of Thornton Law Firm, LLP In Support of Lead Counsel's

Motion for An Award of Attorneys' Fees and Payment of Expenses (Docket #104-16), affirming that the hourly rates included in Exhibit A to the Declaration are the Firm's "regular rates charged for their services, which have been accepted in other complex class actions." Please describe any other instances in which the Firm has submitted a Fee Petition with the same or similar language.

[JUNE 9]

65. Explain the significance of the above-quoted statement as it applies to Michael Bradley's rate of $500/hour. [JUNE 9]

66. Do you contend that the rates listed in the Firm's Fee Petition represent the prevailing rates in the community for similar services performed by lawyers of reasonably comparable skill, experience and reputation for each of the respective tasks performed? Why or why not? [JUNE 9]

67. Identify any errors in your Fee Petition, and explain each step or action taken to correct each error, including all documents or information consulted or relied upon in making the correction(s). [JULY 10]

68. Describe when and how the Law Firm first learned about the Boston Globe's inquiry into the Fee Award and underlying billing practices employed by the Firm and other counsel in the SST Litigation that preceded the publication of the December 17, 2016 Article.

69. Describe when and how the Law Firm first identified duplicative billing entries reflected in the Fee Petitions submitted by Lieff and/or Labaton and describe what actions, if any, the Firm took to review, confirm and/or correct those errors. [JUNE 9]

70. Describe in detail the Law Firm's involvement in drafting the November 10, 2016 Letter, including the full names of all individuals who contributed to the Letter or underlying review in any way, internal review performed by the Firm, and all individuals outside the firm who reviewed and/or contributed to the Letter and the nature of their contribution(s). [JUNE 9]

71. To the extent the Firm was involved in the drafting of the November 10, 2016 Letter, identify and describe all documents reviewed or relied upon by Firm as part of its involvement. [JUNE 9]

~~72. State the total number of class members and the estimated recovery or settlement amounts, net of fees and expenses, due to each class member.~~

~~73. Itemize the total estimated damages to the ERISA and non-ERISA plaintiffs and summarize the factual basis for the estimate.~~

74. Identify, in detail, any additional errors in any communications with the Court or with the Special Master, since filing of the Fee Petition(s) and explain each step or action taken to correct each error, including all documents or information consulted or relied upon in making the correction(s). [JUNE 9]

75. Identify and explain any mistakes you have identified in the any of the Fee Petitions, the Motion for Attorneys' Fees, and/or Fee Award, not described above. [JUNE 9]

76. Identify any other individuals, not listed above, who have knowledge of the Interrogatories and/or the SST Litigation and explain the general nature of such knowledge. [JUNE 9]

77. Identify and describe the steps taken by the Firm to identify documents responsive to the corresponding Requests for Production of Documents served by the Special Master including, without limitation, the name and title of those involved, the process undertaken, the database and documents searched, and the parameters of any electronic search including date range, timekeepers and search terms. [JULY 10]

78. Identify with specificity sufficient to constitute a valid response to a request for production of documents, any documents identified by you as responsive to the Special Master's Request for Production of Documents but withheld from production to the Special Master on grounds of any evidentiary or other privilege or otherwise including (a) the type of document; (b) its date if any; (c) any identifying marks such as bates stamp or other numeric designation; (d) the reason you withheld it from production; and (e) the current location of the document. To the extent any such document or other responsive document has been destroyed, identify (a) the type of document; (b) its date, if any; (c) the date of its destruction; (d) the circumstance thereof; and (e) the persons involved therein. For each such person, please provide their name, current or prior title or position with the Law Firm, the date, if any, of termination of employment with the Law Firm and the reason therefor, and the person's last known residential and business address. [JULY 10]

79. Identify the timekeeping, accounting, and billing software systems utilized by the Law Firm to record and bill attorney time charges, costs and expenses associated with legal and other services rendered by the Law Firm in connection with the SST Litigation and the persons within the Law Firm with the most knowledge and responsibility for the system and operation.

Subject: Fwd: State street fee regarding local counsel

Damon,

As always it was a pleasure to speak with you today. & As requested, I am laying out to you where we are on the State Street matter and below is the email that we referenced on the call. & That email established that Lieff, Thornton and Labaton would "share" your obligation whatever it turned out to be. & The status of the case has gotten better but yet more confusing when it comes to fees.

We have reached a settlement in principle for $300,000,000 with the defendant but it involves not just our consumer class case, but also obligations to SEC and DOL as well as the Erisa class case which was merged with ours by the Judge for settlement discussions. & DOJ also has a separate settlement that is timed to be announced with ours. & As we spoke this morning, a few matters got screwed up today but we are hoping to have a status conference with the court on Thursday (he is on vacation all July) with a preliminary approval hearing sometime in August. & Given that we have to do a CAFA notice, we are still hoping for a final date this late this year. & We also have to post bonds or wait the 30 day appeal period to take fees [REDACTED] & It is going to be tight.

Since our last conversation some things have changed. & The fee we will apply for is $70,900,000. This will be for Lief, Thornton, Labaton, you and now three Erisa firms. & We are attempting to hold the Erisa firms to 10% because that is what they agreed to several years ago, but the Erisa part of the settlement is now 20%. & I think we can hold them to 10%. & Also at one point in the litigation, it became clear that State Street was going to try and pick of Arkansas as the class rep so we got [REDACTED] to agree to come in. & We never formally had to bring them but we let the defendants know it would be a waste to settle out with Arkansas.

We have not finalized the balance of the fee between us, Lief and Thornton but I think it is the right time for me to propose what I think would be a fair and reasonable fee for you. & It was my firm that originated the idea and put the firms together. & Also, as we discussed this is not a securities case and is complicated by all the above factors. & We have always been direct with each other and I am not trying to negotiate but rather just give you a set percentage. & I would propose that you be paid 5% of the fee that the court awards (as you know he may award what we ask but could also trim our request). & My firm, Lief and Labaton have put extensive man hours into the case and looked at millions of pages of documents, so I think we have a good chance of getting our request.

I have not put anyone else on this email but if you agree I will flip this around and get everyone's written assent. & Please let me know your thoughts.

Garrett

Subject: State street fee regarding local counsel

Bob,

As you, Mike and I discussed in Dublin last week, I am sending this email regarding the obligation to the local counsel who assists Labaton in matters involving the Arkansas Teachers Retirement System. & Labaton has an obligation to this counsel, Damon Chargois copied on this email, of 20% of the net fee to Labaton in the State Street FX class case before Judge Wolf. & Currently this amount would be 4% because of the agreement between Labaton, Thornton and Lieff of a division of 20% guaranteed each with the balance to be decided upon at a later date. & Obviously this may go up should Labaton receive an amount higher than 20%.

We have agreed that the amount due to the local, whatever it turns out to be (4%, 5% etc.), will be paid off the top with the balance of the overall fee split between Lieff, Labaton and Thornton pursuant to our agreement.

The local asked that I copy him on this email so he will have confirmation of this agreement. & When we spoke to him he was agreeable to this as well.

Garrett

Importance: High

Here is what I've been able to determine, in order of most to least significant:

(1) Rachel Wintterle and Ann Ten Eyck should not have been included in LCHB's lodestar at all. They were Thornton contract reviewers throughout 2015, but worked on our premises. Many if not most of their detailed time entries did not specifically indicate that the work was being done on Thornton assignments in the "narrative" field, which resulted in their time inadvertently being included with other LCHB reviewers they were working with when our accounting department ran lodestar reports. I failed to catch that after our accounting department ran everyone's lodestar, and apologize. These two reviewers account for $551,719.50 in total lodestar from LCHB that should be removed from LCHB's total. Thornton's lodestar attributable to these two reviewers should not change.

(2) Chris Jordan and Jonathan Zaul each did work for both LCHB and Thornton. Again, we neglected to exclude time entries specifically relating to "Thornton" assignments, which took place between 2/9/15 and 4/14/15 only, from LCHB's lodestar. Once that time is removed, their respective hours and lodestar attributable to LCHB should be as follows:

Christopher Jordan: 540 hours, for $224,100
Jonathan Zaul: 503 hours, for $208,745

Which results in an additional net reduction from LCHB lodestar of $281,619. Add this to the reduction for Ten Eyck and Wintterle, and you get a total reduction of $833,338 from LCHB's reported lodestar.

Thornton's adjusted total hours/lodestar for Jordan and Zaul (using Thornton rates), based on the hours invoices to Thornton, should be:

Christopher Jordan: 359.50 hours, for $152,787.50
Jonathan Zaul: 319 hours, for $135,575.00

This results in a net lodestar *increase* of $26,987.50 for these two attorneys for Thornton Law. This should be noted as at least a modest net offset against the lodestar that needs to be cut elsewhere.

(3) Andrew McClelland's and Virginia Weiss's lodestar checks out OK on our end - everything we reported for them was specific to LCHB, even if they may also have done work for Thornton, which Thornton appears to have accounted for separately on their report. I do not see duplication based on my review of our records. I can't speak to the accuracy of their hours for Thornton on Thornton's end.

Evan/Mike, please feel free to check my math on your end. I tried to double-check but am also in grief over the election so my mind's a little hazy.

Dan

MEMORANDUM OF LABATON SUCHAROW LLP REGARDING RULE 11

Labaton Sucharow LLP (“Labaton” or the “Firm”) respectfully responds to the Special Master’s suggestion, raised for the first time on April 20, 2018 after the completion of expert disclosures and depositions, and after the final written submissions<sup>1</sup> and oral arguments, that Labaton, through one of its partners, violated Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 (“Rule 11”). For the reasons explained below, this suggestion is incorrect as a matter of law.

I. PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

During the course of these lengthy proceedings, neither the Special Master nor his expert Prof. Stephen Gillers (“Prof. Gillers”) ever suggested that Labaton had violated Fed. R. Civ. P 11 (“Rule 11”), including with regard to its payment of a bare referral fee to Damon Chargois (the “Chargois Agreement”). As argued below, Labaton respectfully posits that this was not a matter of oversight – indeed, a charge of violation of Rule 11 was leveled against another Customer Class Counsel firm – but was rather a recognition by the Special Master and Prof. Gillers that Labaton had committed no such violation.

On February 23, 2018, Prof. Gillers submitted an 85-page report (the “Gillers Report”) that painstakingly challenged conduct of the three Customer Class Counsel firms, and (unfairly) accused Labaton of violating a variety of rules largely focused on the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct. Not one sentence of the Gillers Report suggested that Labaton had violated Rule 11. In contrast, Prof. Gillers devoted an entire section of his Report to explicating his legal opinion<sup>2</sup> that a partner of The Thornton Law Firm violated MRCP 3.3(a) and 8.4(c) and

<sup>1</sup> Labaton appreciates the Special Master’s acquiescence in the Firm’s request that it be permitted an opportunity to argue in opposition to this belated theory and apologies for the fact that the required twenty-four hour turn-around obviates its ability to present a more fulsome analysis. In addition, the Special Master’s Report is apparently on the verge of being submitted to a vendor for the addition of hyperlinks requested by the Court, thereby throwing into question whether the arguments contained in this Memorandum can or will be meaningfully considered.

<sup>2</sup> From the time of the Special Master’s revelation that he intended to use an academic to express his legal opinions regarding alleged violations of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct, Labaton has taken the position that expert opinions cannot be proffered on matters of law, e.g., whether a Federal Rule or a rule of professional conduct has been violated by a party. If a Master cannot offer recommendations on Rule 11. Gillers Rep. at 79. Accordingly, lacking notice that the Special Master viewed Labaton as a target of a Rule 11 finding, Labaton was deprived of the opportunity to cross-examine Prof. Gillers regarding Rule 11 during his deposition, to offer its own Rule 11 expert testimony, to include a Rule 11 argument in its written submissions, and to argue Rule 11 at the “closing arguments” hearing. Indeed, Labaton did not even examine Thornton’s Rule 11 expert Prof. Vairo because the Special Master had not notified Labaton that he was considering finding Labaton’s attorneys in violation of Rule 11 (and Labaton certainly had not drawn the inference on its own that such a risk existed).

On April 10, 2018, after the conclusion of all of the expert depositions, counsel for the Special Master distributed a list with eight bullet points under the heading “Chargois Payment.” The bullet points related to areas that the Special Master suggested the parties address during their closing arguments to occur three days later. Ex. 1. Rule 11 was noticeably absent, while six rules of Professional Conduct– MRCP 1.2, 1.4, 1.5(a), 3.3, 7.2 (by implication), 7.3, and 8.4(c) – as well as Saggese v. Kelly, 445 Mass. 434 (2005), were specifically referenced.

On April 12, 2018, Labaton submitted a lengthy response to the Gillers Report (Labaton’s “Response”), but did not address Rule 11 because Prof. Gillers had raised no such issue in relation to Labaton. At the April 13 “closing argument” hearing, the Special Master heard argument for approximately seven hours, but provided no indication that he was considering finding that Labaton had violated Rule 11 and never asked Labaton’s counsel to address Rule 11, despite specifically asking Labaton’s counsel to address other rules from the list. Hearing Tr. at 121-122. (“I want to give you an opportunity to address 7.2 and 7.3 . . . And I think we put 1.5(a) [on the list], too.”).

such matters of law based upon his or her own knowledge and expertise, s/he should have tendered those issues back to the Court for determination.

II. ARGUMENT

A. The Special Master's Eleventh-Hour Finding of a Rule 11 Violation Is Unfair and Does Not Comport with Procedural Due Process.

The various rules that Labaton has been accused of violating have been moving targets throughout this investigation. However, unlike the Special Master's other evolving theories – to which Labaton has been afforded to respond, albeit occasionally with abbreviated notice – the allegation of a Rule 11 violation came after the proceedings were concluded. The belated nature of this serious allegation deprived Labaton of a meaningful chance to challenge it. This is gravely unfair. See, e.g., In re Ruffalo, 390 U.S. 544, 552 (1968) (“This absence of fair notice as to the reach of the grievance procedure and the precise nature of the charges deprived petitioner of procedural due process.”); Ted Lapidus, S.A. v. Vann, 112 F.3d 91, 97 (2d Cir. 1997) (“We believe that a sanctioned attorney must receive specific notice of the conduct alleged to be sanctionable and the standard by which that conduct will be assessed, and an opportunity to be heard on that matter . . . An attorney must be forewarned of the authority under which sanctions are being considered, and given a chance to defend himself against specific charges.”).

The Special Master's belated reliance upon Rule 11 stands in contrast to his own descriptions of fairness in this proceeding. For example, in requesting an eight-week extension to file his Report and Recommendation (at Customer Class Counsels' request), the Special Master emphasized the need for notice and fairness in this high-stakes matter, both for the sake of the law firms and the soundness of his own Report and Recommendation:

[I]n light of Professor Gillers' report, and its potential implications for the firms and the practicing bar in general, I believe that it is important that the firms be allowed the fullest opportunity to respond.<sup>3</sup> And, I wish to have the benefit of

---

<sup>3</sup> Again, Labaton expresses its appreciation for this opportunity to respond, granted by the Special Master in response to Labaton's urgent written plea to (a) understand what the alleged Rule 11 violation was, and (b) be provided an opportunity to respond. But, twenty-four hours is this input as I believe it will provide more complete process to the firms and a better process and foundation for me to be able to make fair and complete findings and recommendations to you.

ECF 216-1 (emphasis added).

Likewise, during the April 13 closing argument, the Special Master again demonstrated his own view that Labaton is entitled to a chance to respond to his recommendations. Specifically, when the Special Master raised, for the first time, the possibility of reallocation of certain funds paid to Customer Class Counsel, he stated: “Unfortunately, I have to make a recommendation. And if I don’t give you [Lieff Cabraser] an opportunity to weigh in, you would rightly I think say we didn’t have a chance to address it . . . I’ll give you [Labaton] a chance [to address the new issue].” 4/13 Hearing Tr. at 277-278 (emphasis added).

Any attorney knows that “a Rule 11 violation is [] a serious thing, and an accusation of such wrongdoing is equally serious.” Safe-Strap Co. v. Koala Corp., 270 F. Supp. 2d 407, 421 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (internal quotation omitted). In light of that seriousness, Labaton should have been provided with a meaningful opportunity to respond to the Special Master’s allegation of a Rule 11 violation. Respectfully, it was not accorded such an opportunity.

B. The Absence of Any Suggestion That Labaton Had Violated Rule 11 During the Proceedings Is Indicative of the Weakness of Any Such Suggestion, and Reflective of Fashioning the Findings to Meet a Desired Outcome.

Had Prof. Gillers formed the legal opinion that Labaton had violated Rule 11, as he did with regard to TLF, he would have said so. The broad picture factual predicate for the Rule 11 violation now belatedly asserted – i.e., the failure to disclose the Chargois referral fee to the not enough time to comport with procedural due process requirements on an issue of this complexity and import. And, the fact that this Memorandum is being delivered on the same day that the Special Master is submitting his final report to vendors for preparation for filing suggests that little chance exists that the arguments contained herein can be given thoughtful, meaningful consideration.

Court – is similar to that for the alleged violation of Rule 3.3 of the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct (“MRPC 3.3”). But, the specific factual requirements for a Rule 11 violation, including the necessity that the misrepresentation occur in a written pleading or submission to the Court, excluding discovery, differs from the requirements for a MRPC 3.3 violation. Prof. Gillers obviously distinguished between the requirements of the two rules, and found only one of the two to have been violated by Labaton (a finding that Labaton also challenges).<sup>4</sup>

Labaton respectfully notes that the total failure to raise an allegation of a Rule 11 violation by Labaton is not a matter of inadvertence: rather, it is because the Special Master and Prof. Gillers, fully apprised of the facts upon which they now apparently rely,<sup>5</sup> concluded that Labaton’s attorneys had committed no such violation.

Respectfully, this unacceptably tardy addition of a finding of a serious rule violation appears to a case of the tail wagging the dog: The Special Master has made his displeasure well known with the concept of a bare referral fee that would permit a substantial payment to an attorney who has performed no work in the case. See, e.g., Response at 12; 4/13 Hearing Tr. at 61:21-62:4, 86:7-12. With a visceral reaction as strong as that which the Special Master has

<sup>4</sup> If Prof. Gillers has been persuaded to alter his Report, the Special Master has not informed the parties of that occurrence, nor has he provided them with a copy of the altered Report. Altering the expert report after the parties have concluded their cross-examination of the expert, proffered rebuttal expert testimony, and concluded their written and oral submissions would obviously raise its own set of due process and basic fairness issues.

<sup>5</sup> The Special Master has yet to provide a written explanation for any alleged Rule 11 violation, but Labaton understands through oral comments from the Special Master’s counsel that the violation is based on Lawrence Sucharow’s execution of Labaton’s Fee Declaration, which does not contain a disclosure that a portion of the requested fee would subsequently be paid as a bare referral fee to Damon Chargois. It is unclear where the Special Master contends that this should have appeared in the Fee Declaration. Chargois performed no work, such that he would not have appeared in the lodestar report, and the Fee Declarations did not address fee allocations generally.

demonstrated, the inference is certainly warranted, if not compelled, that additional purported violations have been sought to justify the remedies that the Special Master recommends be imposed.

B. Labaton Did Not Violate Rule 11.

Rule 11 applies only to papers submitted to the Court. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11. Although the specifics of the Special Master’s Rule 11 argument remain somewhat amorphous, e.g., a designation of where within a fee declaration disclosure of a referral fee was required (highlighting the profound unfairness of this situation), Labaton understands that the Special Master’s position is that Labaton violated Rule 11 because the Declaration of Lawrence Sucharow (the “Sucharow Declaration”) did not disclose the Chargois referral fee. ECF 104. This argument is off-base for several reasons.

1. The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and common sense preclude a finding that Labaton violated Rule 11.

First, stated simply and with all due respect, the Special Master’s argument does not make sense. As Labaton discussed in its Response (see § V), the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not require disclosure of information regarding the allocation of attorney fees. This is settled black-letter law, as reflected by the plain text of the Rules and the cases applying them. Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(B) (petition for attorneys’ fees must “disclose, if the court so orders, the terms of any agreement about fees for the services for which the claim is made”) (emphasis added); Id., 1993 Advisory Notes (“[i]f directed by the court, the moving party is also required to disclose any fee agreement . . . including those between . . . attorneys sharing a fee to be awarded . . .”); Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) (“A claim for an award must be made by motion under Rule 54(d)(2) . . .”); Pierce v. Barnhart, 440 F.3d 657, 664-65 (5th Cir. 2006) (district court abused its discretion in denying attorney’s fees where the plaintiffs’ attorney did not submit information regarding “whether attorney’s fees had been paid or were due to other counsel for representation”); Bernstein v. Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossmann LLP, 814 F.3d 132, 137-38 n.2 (2d Cir. 2016) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h) “does not mandate automatic disclosure of all fee-sharing arrangements in class actions in the absence of a local rule.”); William B. Rubenstein, Newberg on Class Actions § 15:11 (5th ed. 2016) (“The third prong of Rule 54(d)(2)’s motion requirement – concerning disclosure of fee agreements – is discretionary with the court.”); Report of William Rubenstein at 5 (“Rule 23(h) and Rule 54 are therefore clear in mandating the submission of fee agreements – including those concerning the allocation of fees among counsel – only upon court order.”); 10-54 Moore’s Federal Practice - Civil § 54.154 (2018) (“If the court so directs, the fee motion must also disclose the terms of any fee agreement with respect to the services implicated by the motion.”).

Therefore, the Special Master has proffered the untenable argument that complying with the disclosure obligations set forth in Rules 54 and 23 simultaneously constitutes a non-disclosure that violates Rule 11. In other words, by the Special Master’s logic, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are internally inconsistent and directly contradict each other. Such a conclusion would necessarily be premised on the notion that the drafters of the Rules, wittingly or through extraordinary carelessness, laid a trap for attorneys who followed the requirements of Rules 54 and 23 but failed to suss out a particular judge’s desire for information that he had not requested. This reading of the Rules cannot be squared with their essential purpose. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 1 (“These rules govern the procedure in all civil actions and proceedings in the United States district courts . . . They should be construed, administered, and employed by the court and the parties to secure the just . . . determination of every action and proceeding”) (emphasis added).

2. Because Labaton was not on notice of a purported obligation to disclose fee allocations in the Sucharow Declaration, the omission of such information did not violate Rule 11.

Any alleged “omission” regarding the Chargois bare referral fee from the Sucharow Declaration does not approach the level of a Rule 11 violation, because the “omission” was perfectly permissible under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and class action practice. Without any notice that disclosure of the Chargois bare referral fee was required, Rule 11 simply does not apply.

Finding a violation of Rule 11 requires “culpable” conduct by the attorney. As the First Circuit has repeatedly admonished, a “lawyer who makes an inaccurate factual representation must, at the very least, be culpably careless to commit a violation [of Rule 11].” Young v. City of Providence, 404 F.3d 33, 39 (1st Cir. 2005) (emphasis added); see also Roger Edwards, LLC v. Fiddes & Son, Ltd., 437 F.3d 140, 142 (1st Cir. 2006) (explaining that “some degree of fault is required” to find a violation of Rule 11); see also McGee v. Town of Rockland, 11-cv-10523, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 180197, *2 n.2 (D. Mass. Dec. 20, 2012) (“Rule 11 sanctions should be reserved for only the most egregious of lawyerly missteps.”). Moreover, the First Circuit has recently explained that whether an attorney violates Rule 11 “depends on the objective reasonableness of the [attorney’s] conduct under the totality of the circumstances.” Eldridge v. Gordon Bros. Grp., LLC, 863 F.3d 66, 87-88 (1st Cir. 2017).

Here, Labaton is not culpable of committing any misstep, and its attorneys acted exactly as reasonable lawyers would. Everything known to Labaton indicated that disclosure was not required. At the time that Mr. Sucharow submitted the fee petition, the following was true: (1) the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure did not require disclosure; (2) the Court’s local rules did not require disclosure; (3) the Court did not order disclosure; (4) no judge in the District of Massachusetts had ordered disclosure of fee agreements in well over a hundred class action cases since 2011 (see Rubenstein Rep. at 6); (4) no case within the First Circuit (or elsewhere, as far as Labaton’s research has revealed) had found a violation of Rule 11 for non-disclosure of fee agreements; and (5) no BBA and MBA ethics opinions, or BBO ethics decisions, contained analogous guidance relative to the disclosure of fee agreements in connection with the Massachusetts Rules of Professional Conduct. It was (and is) also true that referral fees are a “time-honored practice” in Massachusetts and perfectly permissible. Saggese, 445 Mass. at 442.

In short, there was literally no notice that disclosure was required. In fact, the opposite was true, i.e., the applicable federal rules stated that disclosure was not required in the absence of inquiry or an order. Viewing the circumstances in their totality, a reasonable attorney – trained to rely on the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, precedent, and standard practice – would not believe that disclosure was required. See Eldridge, 863 F.3d at 87-88 (courts must assess the objective reasonableness of the attorney’s conduct); see also Kaplan v. DaimlerChrysler, A.G., 331 F.3d 1251, 1255 (11th Cir. 2003) (explaining that in the Rule 11 context, “courts determine whether a reasonable attorney in like circumstances could believe his actions were factually and legally justified.”). This is far from the “egregious” and “culpable” conduct that courts in the First Circuit require before finding a Rule 11 violation. See Young, 404 F.3d at 39; McGee, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 180197, *2 n.2.

Prof. Gillers and the Special Master appear to share the view that the Court’s role as a fiduciary in a class action case at the fee petition stage, created an unspoken, uncodified disclosure requirement, which now apparently serves as the basis for a Rule 11 violation.<sup>6</sup> This view was decisively rejected by the Second Circuit in Bernstein. 814 F.3d at 137-38. There, the court unequivocally held that there was no obligation to disclose a fee paid to an attorney who was not identified to the court and did not perform valuable work. Id. In addition to this recent and directly on-point appellate decision, which Labaton respectfully suggests offers the best available guidance on this issue, Prof. Rubenstein dismantled the notion that this case’s status as a class action supersedes the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. As he explained, there are “a variety of situations in which the identities of counsel sharing in a fee award are routinely unknown to the class action court.” Rubenstein Rep. at 11. This is not by mistake; “the class action experts who drafted Rule 23(h) were well aware that a class action case encompasses cast and crew – and they nonetheless chose the default embodied in Rule 54: that fee allocation agreements need not be disclosed absent judicial request, that the judge must ask for the playbill.” Id. Prof. Rubenstein’s exhaustive empirical analysis buttressed his opinions. Id. at 6. As a matter of law and practice, the Court’s status as a fiduciary does not change the parties’ obligations, which are governed by Fed R. Civ. P. 54 and 23, which in turn do not require disclosure.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>6</sup> This is somewhat speculative, as Labaton knows very little about the Special Master’s Rule 11 finding at this point.

To the extent that the Special Master believes that Labaton violated MRPC 3.3(a) and therefore necessarily violated Rule 11, this argument is also incorrect. As Labaton explained in its Response at § VIII.A, MRPC 3.3(a) ( as well as Rule 8.4(c)) require a “knowing” misrepresentation. See Mass. R. Prof. C. 3.3(a) (“A lawyer shall not knowingly: (1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal . . .”). A non-disclosure of information does not violate these rules unless there is a known duty to disclose the information. Joy Rep. at 43-44.

<sup>7</sup> See also Rubenstein Dep. at 149:2-15 (“Rule 23 clearly sets out a process and the structure for the fee process in class action cases. It’s the governing rule. In the case we’re talking about it has a specific subpart directly on point . . . I feel like you all [The Special Master and his team] are trying very hard to find a way around that specific law . . . from where I sit there’s a specific[] rule directly on point. Just doesn’t happen to say what you want it to say, but it’s there.”).

Again, because there was literally no notice that Labaton had an obligation to ignore Rules 54 and 23 and disclose information regarding fee allocations, there was no known duty to speak. Thus, there was no violation of Rule 3.3(a) or Rule 8.4(c) – and no derivative violation of Rule 11. See Obert v. Republic Western Ins. Co., 398 F.3d 138, 147 (1st Cir. 2005) (striking lower court’s determination that attorneys violated Rhode Island Rules of Professional Conduct, including 3.3, and Fed. R. Civ. P. 11).

III. CONCLUSION.

For the forgoing reasons, any finding that Labaton violated Rule 11 would be incorrect as a matter of law and unfair as a matter of due process.

Counsel:

As discussed, oral arguments will begin Friday at 9:30am at JAMS in Boston. A stenographer will be present to create an official transcript of the hearing. Customer Class counsel will have 4 hours to present oral arguments to the Special Master. Counsel may allocate their time in whatever fashion they deem appropriate. At this time, ERISA counsel do not intend to offer oral arguments, but this is subject to change. If it does, ERISA counsel will argue after Customer Class counsel.

Counsel may present information on any topic they deem relevant to the Special Master's investigation. The topics below are merely suggested areas to address, and should not in any way be deemed exhaustive. Counsel are not limited to addressing the topics below or the topics previously circulated in the Special Master's Request for Supplemental Submission, dated July 31, 2017. However, in response to counsel's request for further guidance as to the substantive areas to address, the Special Master has suggested the following areas for counsel to cover at oral argument:

"Double Counting"

- Any evidence of an agreement, implicit or explicit, between and/or among Labaton, Lief and TLF that TLF would submit the names of off-track associates (i.e. "staff attorneys") in its individual lodestar calculation.
- Address the justification or rationale for how firms billed off-track associates ("staff attorneys"), including the differences, if any, between the firms' billing of off-track attorneys and contract attorneys employed by a third-party agency, and any legal decisions specifically addressing the propriety of marking up the hourly rates charged staff attorneys and/or contract attorneys in a fee petition submitted to the court.
- Any evidence concerning Garrett Bradley's state of mind in signing the Fee Declaration (Exh. 16 to Dkt #104) submitted to the Court, including but not limited to paragraphs 3 and 4 of that Declaration.

Chargois Payment

- Address what, if any, obligations counsel has (and if that duty applied in the State Street case) to inform co-counsel of information material to the case, including but not limited to fee allocation agreements and/or potential referral fees.
- Address how, if at all, Mass. R. Prof. C. 1.5(a) applies to payment of referral fees and/or the payments made to Damon Chargois as part of the Chargois Arrangement.
- What, if any, knowledge Lief Cabraser and TLF attorneys had about the "Chargois Arrangement," as defined in Prof. Gillers' Report.
- Address the legal requirements for fee-sharing agreements entered into in Massachusetts in or about February 2011, including what, if any, effect the SJC's decision in Saggese v. Kelley, 455 Mass. 434 (2005) had on those requirements, and how, if at all, the Chargois Arrangement met those requirements.
- Please describe how you would characterize Chargois and Herron's contact with Paul Doane and/or Senator Farris, taken to secure an introduction to ATRS, including your view on whether the arrangement constitutes a solicitation, recommendation, introduction, referral, and/or endorsement.
- Please describe all legal and ethical duties that counsel owed to the class members, including who (if anyone) represented the class members, including the ERISA class members, as well as the nature and scope of that representation.
- Please describe what duties—ethical, contractual or otherwise—Customer Class counsel had to inform ERISA counsel about the Chargois Arrangement.
- To the extent you have not already addressed them, please describe how, if at all, the following Rules of Massachusetts Professional Conduct applied to counsel's actions (or lack thereof) taken with regard to the Chargois Arrangement, including counsel's knowledge thereof or involvement with such arrangement:

- Rule 1.2
- Rule 1.4
- Rule 1.5(a)
- Rule 3.3
- Rule 7.3
- Rule 8.4(c)
