

WHEN DISASTER STRIKES

The saying goes that there are two types of businesses; those that know they've been hacked, and those that don't know it yet. With 61% of UK companies reporting a cyberattack in 2014, it's an uncomfortable reality that without the very best cyber resilience, the odds are not in your favour.

When disaster strikes, not having the right support, advanced technologies, data protection and disaster recovery practices can have a considerable impact on both you and your customers. Find out just how easily things can go from good to bad, to worse below.

Has anything you've read here given you cause for concern? Would any of these scenarios play out in your business if you were cyber attacked today?
