idX announces three management promotions Wallen, Bokros and Fownes move to leadership roles

ST. LOUIS, MO--idX Corporation, the worldwide leader of retail design solutions, display manufacturing, décor and project management, has promoted three individuals to division management positions:

- Chad Wallen has been named General Manager for idX Louisville. A 10-year idX Louisville employee, Wallen moves to his new position from the Assistant General Manager role, prior to which he had been a senior project manager. Wallen has 20 years of industry experience in project management, design/development and value engineering. He is a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University.
- Isaac Bokros has been promoted to Assistant General Manager at idX Dayton, where he had been Director of Engineering. Bokros has been with idX Dayton for the past three years, joining the company with the acquisition of Creative Cabinets. His 20 years of experience started on the production floor, but quickly moved into engineering and programming. He has also held positions in development, engineering management, project management and operations management.
- Graham Fownes has been named Assistant General Manager of idX Seattle, where he been Senior Project Manager for the past three years. Fownes has 16 years industry experience, holding positions in project management, design development, new product development, manufacturing operations, program management, and ERP implementations. Fownes earned his M.S. and B.S. degrees from Marian College of Fond du Lac, and holds Professional Project Management (PMP) certification.

"idX places high value on providing career advancement opportunities," said idX CEO Terry Schultz. "Chad, Isaac and Graham have played important roles in the success of idX, and we are proud to recognize their contributions with these promotions."
