As healthcare shifts to an integrated care model, only those providers who can connect to referral sources through a secure network will enjoy a competitive advantage.

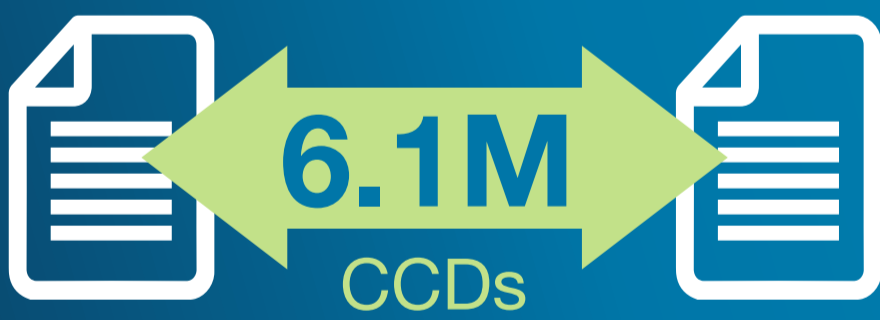

The old point-to-point integration strategy still used by many EHR vendors will not scale, and puts organizations at risk of being left out of the constantly changing marketplace.

By leveraging a technology partner that believes in employing a one to many approach, you can replace faxes and information gaps with automated queries, as well as pull discrete data into a clinical workflows to drive efficiencies and outcomes. With the powerful Netsmart network, clinicians have full visibility to their client's total health picture and can focus their limited time on what matters most: the individual's needs.
