"We are excited to join forces with Next Green Wave, which is arguably one of the leading cannabis innovators in California," said Ryan Lange, SDC co-founder. "This transaction will allow the SDC team to capitalize on its decades of cannabis expertise in California and to rapidly expand our brands, distribution channels and manufacturing expertise across the state and into international markets. Next Green Wave brings world-class leadership and coupled with our common values as innovators, we believe by joining forces we can accelerate our proposition to become a serious cannabis consumer product goods company."

ACCELERATING MANUFACTURING THROUGH ACQUISITION

SDC brings years of experience in cannabis manufacturing and extraction processes that give an edge and creative ability to experiment with new methods in production of finished products. As part of this transaction, the SDC team will immediately become the Head of our Extraction and Manufacturing unit within our 3,240 sq. ft facility. Speciality extraction and manufacturing methods include ice water hash – the washing of the cannabis plant from whole plant fresh frozen material, rosin pressed from ice water hash and cannabis only terpenes that have a special process to end with a final result that has never been winterized. These artisanal methods will have an immediate impact on new products that Next Green Wave will now bring to market within the next three months.

As part of this transaction, SDC brings over 30 different types of extraction-based products across its 8 brand partners including everything from vape cartridges, rosins, ice water hash, tinctures, dog products, consumables as well as a number of CBD wellness and recovery products.
