THE HIRING MANAGER MATURITY MODEL

Recruiting Toolbox has worked with over 250 companies in 20+ countries, helping to elevate the capabilities of thousands of corporate recruiting teams, hiring managers, and interviewers.

As part of our work as consultants and former practitioners, we've seen first-hand the benefits of effective Hiring Managers. If you're a corporate recruiting leader looking to evaluate your current hiring manager capabilities, this maturity model may help you understand gaps and identify where you need to invest to improve hiring speed, quality, and diversity at your organization.

CULTURE OF RECRUITING

A culture that breeds and rewards engaged, skilled, high-ownership hiring managers is the key to winning top talent when competing against better-known, better-paying talent competitors.

THE HIRING MANAGER MATURITY MODEL

PASSIVE

"Recruiting doesn't get me good resumes"

- Gets "leftover," low-quality talent because they don't engage effectively with recruiters or candidates
- Acts more like a hard-toschedule interviewer than a hiring manager
- Doesn't see recruiting as "my job"
- Makes a lot of noise about bad recruiting support

ENGAGED

"I have hiring pain, so tell me what I need to do to fix it"

- Follows minimum recruiting processes needed to make the hire
- Hires with a short-term orientation
- Recruiter still has to chase them to get feedback and move quickly

LEADER/PARTNER

"Let's work together to find our team the best talent"

- Seeks a partnership relationship with recruiter
- Helps to source and sell talent
- Leads the interview process

TALENT CHAMPION

"Recruiting is core to our success, so we're going to do..."

- Proactive and always recruiting - not just when a job is open
- Champions diversity and high hiring standards
- Mentors other hiring managers
- Creates a culture of recruiting
